Stark Named Naval Chief in Wide Shakeup

'Junior' to Succeed Leahy; All Ranking Officers but Bloch, Andrews Shifted

Millions for Army

SUBCOMMITTEE approval was given for the voting of $116,539,287 to bolster seacoast defenses and purchase antiaircraft guns, automatic rifles and other Army equipment. Page 8.

New Naval Command

A shift of ranking officers of the Navy, involved a turnover of practically the entire high command, was announced last midnight by Secretary Swanson.

Rear Admiral Harold R. Stark, promoted only two years ago to flag rank, was appointed over the heads of many seniors to be Chief of Naval Operations. He will succeed Admiral William D. Leahy, who has announced he will retire after Congress adjourns.

While the Navy's No. 1 post went to a "dark-horse" junior, the fleet commands will continue in the hands of veterans.

Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander in chief of the United States fleet for the past year, will remain in that command. Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, chairman of the Navy General Board, with ten years' experience as a flag officer, will relieve Admiral Harry E. Yarnell as commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet.

Richardson Advanced

Admiral Yarnell, who has guided the destinies of the Asiatic vessels through the Sino-Japanese war, will come to Washington for temporary duty pending his retirement next fall.

To be second in command of the United States Fleet, and in line for advancement next year, the Secretary assigned Rear Admiral James O. Richardson, now Chief of the Bureau of Navigation here. He will relieve Admiral Edward C. Kalbfus as Commander of the Battle Force in June. The latter becomes president of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

Vice Admiral Adolphus Andrews, recently on duty here, will continue as commander of the Scouting Force. He and Admiral Bloch are the only ranking officers not affected by the shift.

"Youngsters" Get Key Posts

Two key posts at the Navy Department were filled by "youngsters." Capt. John H. Towers, pioneer in naval aviation, being appointed Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics with rank of rear admiral, and Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of the powerful Bureau of Navigation. Both are 54 years old. Other changes are:

Rear Admiral Charles Philip Snyder, now president of the Naval War College, to be commander, battleships, battle force, with rank of vice admiral. He will relieve Vice Admiral John Wills Greenslade who comes here for duty with the general board.

Rear Admiral Charles Blakely, commander, aircraft, scouting force, to be commander, aircraft, battle force, with rank of vice admiral. He is to relieve Vice Admiral Ernest J. King, who will become a member of the general board.

Date of Change Unknown

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, present chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, will replace Admiral Blakely as commander, aircraft, scouting force.

The change of commands will probably take place this summer, although the date is still indefinite. As Admiral Leahy will continue as chief of naval operations until the adjournment of Congress, most of the shifts will probably await his retirement. A four-starred admiral since 1936, he has been chief of operations since January 2, 1937. Under a new law, he will retire with the rank of full admiral.

Windows Smashed in Hotel Strike

Union to Conduct Probe; Sympathy Walkouts Threatened

First violence in the eight-day-old hotel strike flared last night as bricks were tossed through the dining room window at the Roger Smith and the door of the cocktail lounge at the Lee House. No one was injured in either incident.

Union leaders denied any knowledge of the affair, while Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the hotels, stated, "It is perfectly obvious that the radical element has gotten in control of the strike."

The trouble at the Roger Smith occurred at dinnertime, with about 20 persons in the main dining room. The only damage was to the large plate glass window.

Conciliation Director John R. Steelman expressed doubt "if any striker did it. Maybe some overenthusiastic sympathizer or somebody who just likes to throw bricks," he said.

While hotel spokesmen said "We are not going to be intimidated by a thing like this," union heads promised to make "every effort to find out if any of our men did it. If so proper action will follow."

Meanwhile a continued deadlock in negotiations was reported as threats of additional walkouts followed an apparent breakdown in conciliation efforts.

Throughout the day, representatives of the opposing factions conferred in the office of Steelman. Although both sides agreed to certain concessions, they could not agree on the fundamental issues—the "union shop" and arbitration of grievances.

It was indicated that the union shop question may be sidetracked until the union and hotel operators settle less controversial issues.

Jury Award Puts One-Cent Value on Husband's Love

Towson, Md., March 15 (AP).—A jury hearing Mrs. Pearl L. Lawrence's $25,000 alienation of affections suit against Mrs. Marion Muths awarded Mrs. Lawrence damages of one cent today.

Mrs. Lawrence said Mrs. Muths deprived her of the affection of her husband, Leroy A. Lawrence.

Small Firms May Escape Tax Revision

Harrison Proposes Limit of 22% For Single Levy On Corporations

By Robert C. Albright.

Strict limitation of tax revision to the corporate structure, without loss of revenue and without special hardships on either small or large corporations, was disclosed last night as the goal of current Administration tax conferences.

Ways and means of removing tax "deterrents" to business without impairing revenues, were discussed by the President, Treasury officials and Congressional tax draftsmen. No conclusions were reached on proposals to substitute a single percentage corporation levy.

The second tax conference in a week adjourned without any formal agreement, but conferees reported "progress."

No Lack of Co-operation

"There was no indication of any lack of co-operation," Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, told reporters. "No general overhauling of the tax structure has been discussed. If the Treasury from its experience finds that some changes can be made in corporate taxes that will remove some deterrents without loss of revenue, I shall be delighted to cooperate."

With suggestions that small corporations would bear the brunt of any shift in corporate taxes, Harrison took special issue. He said there never has been any contention that small firms would be treated equally as well under a new tax bill as under the present law. Companies earning under $25,000 now are taxed 12½ per cent on their first $5,000 of income; 14 per cent on income between $5,000 and $20,000, and 16 per cent on the balance up to $25,000.

Proposals being discussed involve repeal of the capital stock and excess profits taxes, at a net loss of $175,000,000, and substitution of a single corporation percentage tax for the undivided profits tax, making up for the loss. No change in the capital gains levy figured in the conference, it was learned.

22 Per Cent Limit Suggested

The proposed single tax on corporations should in no case go above 22 per cent, and small corporations should receive the same preferential treatment accorded them in recent tax laws, Harrison suggested. Senate Majority Leader Barkley had declared the resulting percentage tax on corporations might go as high as 28 per cent.

As the President resumed tax discussion, Speaker Bankhead and Senator Barkley said they wished to correct their earlier reports that they saw no prospect of tax revision this session.

"I may have left the impression that there would be no changes in any existing tax laws," Bankhead said. "What I had in mind was the improbability of any law being passed that would result in reduction of the total revenue."

But both Bankhead and Barkley reiterated their belief that the only way deterrents could be removed would be by substantial increases in the corporation levies.

Economies "Impossible"

Meanwhile, the current Congressional economy drive, linked with tax revision in the new business aid movement, received a dash of cold water from Senator Barkley. The Senate leader said any horizontal 10 per cent cut in appropriation bills passed this session is in his opinion "impossible." Even if attempted, Barkley said it could result in a saving of only about $70,000,000, as the large bulk of appropriations would not be susceptible to reductions. Harrison last week proposed the 10 per cent cuts.

It was learned on good authority that Congressional advocates of

Children's Ward, Larger Staff Sought by Gallinger Chief

Construction of a children's ward at Gallinger Hospital is proposed in the annual report yesterday by Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock, who also said the method of obtaining employes from the Civil Service Commission caused "considerable delay and inefficiency."

The report describes improvements of conditions since the hiring of five full-time resident physicians, and the need for more funds for personnel; for better kitchen facilities, and for additional operating-room instruments.

The program follows:

Procurement of funds to start construction of a children's ward, family quarters for staff officers, internes' residence, laboratory, enlarged kitchen and laundry.

Increased appropriations to permit a more adequate staff of nurses, laboratory personnel, clerical workers and mechanics, including one added physician for tuberculosis work.

Arrangements to permit the occupancy of the old Washington Asylum building as an out-patient clinic into which may be concentrated all clinics functioning at the hospital.

Arrangements for the procurement of funds either from public or private sources, to permit the establishment of an effective tumor clinic.

Border Patrol Kills Smuggler Suspect

By the Associated Press.

Border patrolmen killed a suspected liquor smuggler on the Mexican border near San Elizario, Tex., yesterday.

Elmer L. Irye, chief Treasury enforcement agent, said the man was identified tentatively from papers in his pocket as Tiburico Griego, 28, of Sausal, Mexico.

Patrolmen reported they saw the man cross the Rio Grande on horseback with a load of liquor, and that he fired two shots at the agents before they fired.

Hitler Sleeps in Masaryk Castle After Troops Declare Curfew; Magyars Fight Remnants of Prague's Army, With Nazi Blessing

The Crisis of Middle Europe

THE CZECH PEOPLE greeted Reichsfuehrer Hitler and his goose-stepping troops with jeers as the German Chancellor followed his army into Prague, capital of the extinct Czech republic.

HUNGARIAN TROOPS reached the Polish border at two points, after a swift drive across Carpatho-Ukraine, but other Hungarian columns met stiff resistance from determined Czech fighters.

CARPATHO-UKRAINE proclaimed formally its independence at Chust, the capital, but the new state, with Hungarian troops crossing its borders in increasing strength, was in a precarious position.

FRENCH PARLIAMENTARY and popular indignation at the Daladier-Bonnet "desertion" of Czecho-Slovakia brought possibilities of a cabinet crisis.

PRIME MINISTER CHAMBERLAIN, hammered by opposition, admitted Hitler's latest conquest was "shocking," but said Britain would do nothing, although a scheduled trade conference was "postponed."

BERLIN'S NAZI PARTY newspaper said the Nuremburg racial laws would be applied in Bohemia and Moravia, where Jews already were in a state of terror.

THE UNITED STATES asked Germany to guarantee safety of American citizens in Bohemia and Moravia, but received a noncomittal answer.

SOVIET DEFENSE COMMISSAR VOROSHILOV spoke warningly of the strength of the Red Army, but Moscow officially took the stand the collapse of Czecho-Slovakia was of little moment to Russia.

ITALY WATCHED the situation quietly, hoping Hitler would be free to back her claims against France; Rumania insisted she wanted no share in the apparently imminent partition of Carpatho-Ukraine.

Frontiers Joined

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw (Thursday), March 16.—Hungarian troops today established a common frontier with Poland, marching across Carpatho-Ukraine and reaching the Polish border at Lavoczne and at Sianki at 1 a. m.

The small detachments of Hungarians, who had fought their way across the eastern tip of demolished Czecho-Slovakia through a raging blizzard, were received into the posts guard stations and given a warm welcome by Polish troops.

Czech Guns Cause Casualties

The Hungarian column reaching Polish territory severed Carpatho-Ukraine from Slovakia, but other columns to the east and southeast were meeting stiff resistance, according to Budapest dispatches.

A staff general in Budapest said Czech opposition was so stiff northeast of Muncaks on the Hungarian-Carpatho-Ukraine frontier that "a field campaign may be necessary."

Artillery and machine-gun fire from Czechs caused a number of casualties, but Hungarian officials would not reveal figures.

Troops in No Hurry

(Reports in London and Paris said the commander of Czech forces in Carpatho-Ukraine, defying Hungarian demands that he disband his troops, had declared his command an integral part of the German army.)

It was reported here that Hungarian troops had occupied Chust, capital of Carpatho-Ukraine, far to the east of Muncaks, but this was unconfirmed. Hungarian soldiers said they were in no hurry to occupy the city, where today the gov-

Jeers Greet Victors

By the Associated Press.

Prague, March 15.—Adolf Hitler took possession of Bohemia and Moravia today, personally following his gray-clad Nazi troops into Prague itself with a suddenness that completely surprised an already bewildered Czech population.

Tonight he slept in historic Hradcany Castle, burial vault of makers of Bohemian history, and more recently the residence of Czecho-Slovak Republic presidents.

Without the customary fanfare, the victorious Fuehrer entered the city quietly at 7 p. m. (1 p. m., E. S. T.), following hours later behind columns of his troops who were hissed and booed by sullen, tearful Czechs—their 20 years of independence now only a memory.

Prussians Rule Bohemia

As the Fuehrer entered Prague the Prussian military already had set up a temporary military and civil government to rule Bohemia and Moravia as protectorates of the Greater German Reich, in which they are to be simply cultural islands.

Within an hour of Hitler's arrival his standard was raised over the old castle, towering above the city.

There were no cheers, no garlands for the master of Greater Germany as there were when he entered "liberated" Austria one year ago and the Sudetenland last October.

Hitler thus carried through what the great "Iron Chancellor," Bismarck, shrank from doing—taking command of southern Bohemia.

Troops Greeted Coldly

His Third Reich troops received the coldest greeting they have had in any of the territories into which they have gone to fulfill the idea of a greater Germany.

Prague's residents, without fear and contrary to repeated appeals made by loudspeaker set up in the capital's principal streets, hissed and booed the troops. They threw snowballs at armored cars as they rolled into the city. A platoon of Czech police kept the crowds in St. Wenceslas square from springing at three armored cars.

Berlin Paves The Way

Steed Sees Russia As Nazis' Real Goal

Views Ruthenia as Necessary Gateway To Rumanian Oil and Wheat in Eventual Drive Toward Black Sea Coast of Soviets

By H. Wickham Steed,
Former Editor of "The London Times."
By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

London, March 15.—The smashing of Czecho-Slovakia can surprise only those who failed to understand what Adolf Hitler intended the Munich "agreement" of last September to bring about.

It is a consistent and logical step toward the domination of Central and Southeastern Europe by Germany.

That domination in its turn is meant to secure for Germany control of the oil, wheat and timber of Rumania as a preliminary for action against Soviet Russia.

No government in Europe with an intelligence or even a diplomatic survey worthy of the name ought to have been ignorant of these German aims.

Line of Direct Attack Outlined

Early in 1936 the economic attache to the German Embassy in Moscow addressed to the authorities in Berlin a memorandum of great importance. A summary of the document came into my hands.

It warned the Berlin authorities that any direct attack upon Soviet Russia would be folly, that even if German forces were to enter the Ukraine they must not expect to be welcomed or even helped by the local population, and that there was no prospect of economic distress in Soviet Russia.

The resources of Soviet Russia for the provision of food, the memorandum said, had been immensely increased by the tractorization of plowing, so that the arable surface of European Soviet Russia could be plowed and sown in a few days, whereas under the old system of horse plowing, the interval between the harvest and the winter frosts was often too short to allow any similar area to be plowed and sown.

Cutting Off of Baku Oil Wells Needed

The only way, continued this memorandum, for Germany to conquer Soviet Russia would be to get within striking distance of southern Soviet Russia from the region of the Black Sea. Then it might be possible to wreck, cut off or capture the oil wells of Baku, and thus to paralyze both Russian agricultural tractorization and Russian aviation.

The first stage of this program must, however, be German control of Rumanian oil, wheat and timber, and the removal of obstacles to such control.

This memorandum made a deep impression in Berlin. It was clearly impossible to carry out its recommendations as long as Nicholas Tite-

Bonnet Fights Overthrow In Czech Issue

Critics Say Peace Policy Has Collapsed; Cabinet Crisis Feared

By John Elliott.
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, March 15.—Public indignation over Reichfuehrer Hitler's destruction of Czecho-Slovakia was so keen tonight there were indications of a ministerial crisis.

In particular, the head of Foreign Minister Bonnet was demanded by his critics.

His foreign policy, leading to the signing of the Munich accord and the Franco-German declaration of December 6, is considered in political circles here to have collapsed completely with the wiping out of the Czech republic.

Uses German's Excuse

Bonnet appeared before the foreign affairs committee of the Chamber of Deputies today. According to the official communique, he defended himself on the ground that the French guarantee provided for by the Munich accord did not apply since it was not to be unilateral, but part of a four-power pact, which was to have included Germany, Italy, and England. But the negotiations for such a treaty had never led to any agreement, the foreign minister said.

He also quoted Count van Welczeck, German Ambassador here, to the effect that the German government, in intervening in Cecho-Slovakia, had only been acting in accord with the Prague government.

Imperialism Seen

His critics, led by Henri de Kerillis, Nationalist, and Gabriel Peri, Communist, pointed out that the so-called Franco-German "peace" declaration of December 6, heralded by Bonnet and his friends as a cornerstone of European appeasement, provided for mutual conversations by the two governments on all outstanding problems and that it had been completely ignored by Hitler.

The critics also pointed out that France had a moral obligation to defend Czecho-Slovakia since proposed four-power accord was only a substitute for the Franco-Czech military alliance, which bound this country to defend the Czechs against external aggression.

Most serious of all, in the opinion of the deputies, was that Hitler was

'Quick Decision' Due for Memel, Nazi Chief Says

Kovno, Lithuania, March 15 (U.P.).—The 180,000 Germans of the Memel district who have been demanding "a home in the Reich" were told today by Nazi Leader Ernst Neumann that the time had come for "quick decisions" in view of events in central Europe.

"In case of necessity I am entitled to take all the required steps to conduct proper negotiations on behalf of the 87 per cent German population of Memel," Neumann said.

Lithuania, he said, has violated repeatedly the terms under which Memel was given to her in 1923 after being stripped from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles. Memel has a port desired by Germany.

Argentine-Nazi Trade to Increase

Buenos Aires, March 15 (AP).—Argentine trade officials said today Germany's absorption of Bohemia-Moravia likely would lead to increased Argentine sales to the expanding Reich.

The commercial section of the foreign ministry disclosed that negotiations have been nearly completed to sell Germany (about 3,100,000 bushels of wheat in exchange for railroad stock valued at about $1,700,000).

Hitler Didn't Tell Duce of Plans, Diplomats Say

Rome, March 15 (AP).—Premier Mussolini met with his cabinet ministers today for what was believed to be a discussion of Germany's moves in Central Europe.

Some diplomats said they believed the Italians lacked advance notice of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Czecho-Slovak occupation.

The Gazetta del Popolo of Turin interpreted the German expansion of influence as clearing the way for Nazi support of Italian territorial demands on France.

Nazi Plane Crew Rescued at Sea

U. S. Asks Nazis to Protect Americans in Czecho-Slovakia

By the United Press.

Berlin, March 15. — The United States today asked the German government for guarantees of the safety of American citizens in the Czech areas of Bohemia and Moravia as result of their occupation by German troops.

United States Consul General and Charge d'Affaires Raymond Geist went to the foreign office shortly after word reached Berlin that the German forces had entered Prague and presented two questions:

What will be the status of Moravia and Bohemia in view of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's establishment of a "protectorate" over the remaining parts of the Czecho-Slovak republic?

In what way will the safety of American citizens there be guaranteed?

Under Secretary of State Woermann informed Geist that it would be two or three days before the questions, particularly the one referring to the status of the Czechs, could be answered.

Woermann said Dr. Hans Ritter had been sent to Prague as a liaison officer between the German government and the foreign legations there. Ritter, he said, will make efforts to provide all security for foreign nationals.

Geist went to the foreign office on instructions from Washington, and saw Woermann because Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop is in Prague with Hitler.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Aboard S. S. Matsonia, March 15.

THOUGHTS WHILE SHAVING: If the Capital were situated farther west, it would take these European crises more calmly. Our West Coast is infinitely more placid about the alarms of Mussolini and Hitler. Even the Japanese seem no more menacing around the Golden Gate than along the Potomac. And that's strange, as Westerners are more warlike. I'm forced to conclude that Washington is the heart of the Jitter Belt.

As if seven meals a day on shipboard were not enough, I have just become aware that there is always a bowl of fruit and a dish of bon bons kept replenished in each stateroom. Only a traitor to his class would observe in the ship's daily newspaper this morning that the relief rolls are up above three million again.

* * * *

This afternoon the captain took us up on the bridge. Amid the bewildering array of controls there were three that impressed the ladies most—the three for detecting fire. One consists of a cabinet of nozzles connected with every part of the hold, so sensitive that even the smoke from a cigarette would come wafting up. Another kicks up a fuss when the temperature anywhere aboard reaches 165 degrees. The third flashes red when an alarm bell is tapped.

"—blindfolded men with nipples"

My favorite instruments turned out to be (1) the indicator for the depth of the water below the ship, measured by the time it takes for sound to bounce back from the bottom of the ocean; (2) the directional radio beam compass, like an airplane's, except that it has a wider range, and (3) the window that revolves 1,600 r. p. m., so that the captain has clear vision in sleet or rain.

* * * *

And one deck below the passengers were at their deck games — ladies pounding nails, carrying beans sucked in at the end of a straw, racing with potatoes in spoons and feeding bottles of milk through nipples to blindfolded men who thought they were to be shaved. So far no machine has been devised to measure the emotions of a blindfolded man drinking milk through a nipple.

* * * *

I am trying to induce Col. Steichen, the camera genius, to propose that sound movies be made of all White House press conferences and of Congressional committees, and perhaps of Cabinet meetings—these last to be kept secret and not to be released for one year. It would certainly be edifying for the citizens to see a newsreel of Martin Dies examining a witness who thinks Mrs. Roosevelt and Shirley Temple are radicals.

"—and officers at the controls"

When shipboard celebrities come to the wireless room and stick their heads through the little window to inquire about messages, the radio operators snap their pictures with expensive candid cameras. One of them has thus photographed going and coming most of the Senators and Representatives who have voyaged to the Blessed Isles in recent years to ascertain whether Hawaii should become the forty-ninth State. He says they always look handsomer on the return trip.

* * * *

Dozens of amateur photographers drum up enough courage to ask Col. Steichen for advice on how to make better pictures. When they finally face him they seem to forget what to ask. I heard him tell someone that when using a light meter in photographing a pretty girl, the meter should be held against the girl's face. Seems like sound advice.

Sherman Coined Term, 'New Deal,' Says Dictionary

Chicago, March 15 (I.N.S.).—Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman—and not the Roosevelt Administration—was revealed today as the inventor of the political use of the expression "New Deal."

The announcement came from compilers of the New American Dictionary, the sixth section of which is to be published shortly. The makers said the expression was used by Gen. Sherman in 1863, when he wrote:

"Charleston is not taken; the war will be prolonged, and but little chance for its ending until we have a new deal."

Douglas Bars Laxer Rules For Exchanges

Calls Proposal 'Phoney By Any Standard of Business Recovery'

Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday flatly rejected proposals by Stock Exchange heads for drastic changes in the securities acts as a means of stimulating the flow of capital into industry.

Condemning in particular the suggestion that the ban against market manipulation be relaxed, he branded the proposals as "a phoney by any standard of business recovery."

"It will not help this country at all," he declared, "to open things up in the stock market so that the boys in the street can have another party."

President's Support Seen

Douglas had reference to an elaborate program for revision of the 1934 securities exchange act and the 1933 securities act drafted by Stock Exchange leaders at a two-day conference here this week.

Douglas' emphatic refusal to sponsor the suggested changes, it is understood, has the full support of President Roosevelt.

Proposals to ease the ban against market manipulation, repeal the provision permitting recovery by suit of trading profits by insiders and curtail the amount of financial information supplied the commission, Douglas declared, would have the cumulative effect of reviving the 1929 era of boiling, whipsaw markets.

Wheeler Plans for Rails

Other developments bearing on the President's business expansion drive were:

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committe, announced, following a call at the White House, that he would introduce next week a bill setting up an independent reorganization court to speed up railroad reorganization. The bill also will provide for a plan of reorganization, he revealed, which would strike at the influence exerted by railroad holding companies and other common stockholders in reorganization proceedings.

William C. Dickerman, president of the American Locomotive Co., after a brief talk with the President, said settlement of the railroad problem would be a great boost to business recovery by paving the way for large equipment purchases and other expenditures by the roads. So long as the existing uncertainty continues, however, he said, the railroads are "in a state of suspended animation."

The President's disclosure that he desired continuance of the power to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks to take up Government debt was bitterly criticized by Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, at a meeting of a Senate Banking sub-committee. He demanded immediate repeal of the authority.

Sees Gold Standard Return

Prof. Walter E. Spahr, of New York University, told the subcommittee that the United States and other major powers eventually would return to the gold standard. When this country returns, he said, it will be at the present devalued gold content of 59.06 per cent, which he compared to "cutting off 41 per cent of your leg."

Douglas' attack on the proposals of the stock market group, it was announced, had the unanimous approval of the commission.

"The chief proposal," he said, "is relaxation of the law against market manipulation. Stripped of its legal phraseology, this proposal would bring the pool operator back into the market. This strikes at the very heart of stock market regulation.

"Such a proposal would redound only to the benefit of those whose primary interest is served by an increased volume of trading—the broker to whom more trading means quicker profits, the insider, and the market rigger, not American industry or investors. Sound recovery cannot be had through the use of injurious stimulants."

Instead of contributing to business recovery, he said, the suggestion would "serve to destroy whatever investor confidence has been built up through efforts to clean up the stock exchanges."

Want Law Changed

Exchange leaders, he pointed out, want the law changed so that the commission would define by rule, instead of by statute as at present, what constitutes manipulation. Moreover, only sales and purchases for the purpose of "unduly or improperly" influencing the market price of a security would be prohibited.

The former suggestion, Douglas contended, would result in legal loopholes which would make it difficult, if not impossible, for the commission to prove a case of manipulation. Moreover, in order to show that the object was to "unduly or improperly" influence the market price the commission would have to say what a proper price was. This would make it necessary for the SEC to begin valuing securities.

The chief proposals of the exchange group, Douglas said, amount to "a stripping away of the protection against pools, a nullification of corporate insiders' responsibilities to their stockholders and a curtailment of truth to investors." Such proposals, he said, "are not harmonious with old-fashioned, conservative standards of finance."

bill enacted June 8, 1938, that would permit a more elastic handling of inmates of the psychiatric department.

In connection with the Civil Service Commission, Dr. Bocock said:

"It has been the hospital's experience during all recent years that the necessity for procuring graduate nurses from the commission has not resulted favorably, while considerable delay in filling positions often result with other classes of personnel."

Dr. Bocock said the situation could be remedied, if the District had its own commission.

In 1938, approximately 3 per cent of the 627,000 local residents sought admission and received treatment at Gallinger. Approximately 13 per cent of all babies born here were delivered in the hospital, while about 16 per cent of the deaths in the city last year took place at the hospital.

Five Department Heads Named

An outstanding event, according to the superintendent, was the appointment of five senior medical officers to act as heads of the major departments.

A shortage of nurses "has been a distressing feature throughout nearly all of the year," Dr. Bocock stated.

Dr. Bocock said a study of the School of Nursing was made by Miss Cornelia Cowan, executive secretary of the Nurses Examining Board, but the report has not been submitted.

The superintendent concluded the report by stating the improvement in quality of professional work in the last half of the year as direct result of the appointment of the senior medical officers cannot be overestimated.

Significant decreases in the average length of stay of each patient in medicine, surgery and obstetrical departments is due solely to more prompt examination, more intensive treatment and more detailed attention on the part of the full time staff, none of which could be given by the hospital when using a visiting staff alone, he said.

Small Business May Escape Tax Revision

Tax

spending cuts see no hope for substantial economies except in the unlikely event the President takes the leadership. Vice President Garner is reliably reported to have told the President this at Monday's White House conference. The Vice President is reputed to have said in effect "we have got stop kidding ourselves" and decide now whether this is to be a $9,000,000,000 Government or one less costly.

Another jolt to both tax and economy objectives is due today or tomorrow when the House Agriculture Appropriations sub-committee hands the full House committee a farm bill raised $244,000,000 over budget estimates, and carrying $250,000,000 for price parity payments not recommended by the President. The President recently pointed out that Congress never has provided taxes to finance the $212,000,000 farm price parity appropriation made last year.

Morgenthau Confers

Besides Harrison, conferring with the President at the tax conference were Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Undersecretary of the Treasury John Hanes and Chairman Jere Cooper, of the House Ways and Means tax sub-committee. Figures on the projected transfer of the capital stock and excess profits tax burden to the single corporation percentage ta were submitted by Morgenthau and Hanes. Hanes is the reputed author of the plan.

At the outset of the conference, Harrison said he expressed his appreciation of the President's clarification of tax views at Tuesday's press conference and said he thought it had done much to remove confusion and misunderstanding of the present tax studies. He said he agreed with the President and Treasury authirities that no reduction should be made in total revenues, and the net total of taxes on the corporate structure should remain the same.

Likewise, Harrison declared suggestions that the single percentage tax on large corporations might be raised to 25 per cent or more "out of the question." Taxes in this class now range from 16½ per cent to firms that distribute all profits, to 19 per cent on companies withholding their earnings.

2 or 3½ Per Cent Increase

For every 1 per cent of corporate tax, about $75,000,000 in revenue is realized, and Harrison estimated a 2 or 2½ per cent increase over the present 19 per cent maximum should make up for the $175,000,000 loss from repeal of the capital stock and excess profits levies.

At odds with Harrison on this point, Barkley told reporters he estimated the loss from repeal of the capital stock, excess profits and undivided profits taxes at $250,000,000. The Senate leader said that if smaller corporations are spared, the tax on the large corporations "might very well go up to 23 per cent." Barkley said he felt objections to such an increase might lead to retention of the present corporate tax structure unchanged.

No final conclusions on tax revision are expected to be reached until all March 15 tax returns have been analyzed by the Treasury and the results reported to the White House. This data is expected to be ready about April 1.

Wallace Accuses Brokers of Fraud

Two brokerage houses and five New Yorkers were cited yesterday by Secretary Wallace for alleged violation of the fraud and other provisions of the commodity exchange act.

Those cited were Joseph Buckhalter, Alexander Eisemann, William C. Durant and his wife, Katherine L. Durant, Clement B. Johnson, the H. W. Armstrong & Co. and the Alexander Eisemann & Co.

Wallace charged the five had been trading in grain futures on the Chicago Board of Trade through a number of brokerage houses and had "cheated and defrauded persons for whom future contracts were made."

Democrats Irate at Ouster Of Woodrum

Protest to Taylor On His Removal From Relief Body

Irate Democratic members of the House appropriations sub-committee handling the $150,000,000 relief bill protested to Chairman Taylor yesterday against the ousting of Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, from his position as acting chairman of the group.

Although displeasure of conservative Democrats at Woodrum's removal is not expected materially to change the House vote on the bill, at least three of the eight Majority members of the sub-committee voiced their resentment to Taylor in a private meeting before the hearings yesterday.

The meeting, confined to the Democrats on the sub-committee, is understood to have become "fairly warm" as the 80-year-old chairman was told that his action in displacing Woodrum—at Administration behest—would have little effect in speeding the bill to the floor of the House.

Says He Is Not Resentful

Woodrum himself refused to comment on the proceedings, but it was learned that after three or four of his Democratic colleagues had expressed themselves to Taylor, the Virginia Representative stated that he felt no resentment at his removal, as he was merely acting chairman in the first place.

That the hearing will last three or four more days was predicted by several members yesterday, after Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, again outlined to the subcommittee the needs of WPA for April, May and June. In a message to Congress Tuesday, President Roosevelt had supported Harrington's figures, warning that unless the supplemental $150,000,000 were voted, about 1,250,000 persons now on the relief rolls would be necessarily discharged by the end of the fiscal year.

At the close of Harrington's testimony, Taylor announced the WPA administrator would be called back today. It is known that a majority of the sub-committee desires a fairly extensive inquiry into the immediate need for $150,000,000, but thoroughgoing investigation into the entire relief question will undoubtedly be deferred until the present bill is disposed of.

Staggering "Frowned Down"

A proposal that work relief be staggered to give recipients employment for two or three weeks per month instead of for the whole period, was "frowned down" by Col. Harrington, it was reported. Harrington was said to have preferred a "rotation system," whereby workers who have been on the rolls for a long time would be replaced by persons now on the waiting lists.

Meanwhile, Representative Healey (Democrat), of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution instructing the Appropriations Committee to investigate the unemployment and relief situation in all cities of 5,000 or more population, by circulating a questionnaire among the mayors and city officials.

"I believe that the mayors and officials of cities and towns are in a position to furnish swift and accurate information regarding the extent of unemployment and the relief needs of their respective municipalities," said Healey. He added later that he felt the questionnaire would show that "cities can't take on any further burden."

Cox to Offer Bill Today

Pointing out that the mayors have been in the forefront of demands for even larger WPA appropriations than Congress has granted, Administration critics said yesterday that Healey's resolution was probably designed to counterbalance one that will be introduced today by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, ordering a full investigation into WPA by the Appropriations Committee. Cox, often an opponent of Administration measures, plans to ask $30,000 for the inquiry.

Healey, however, said he had not heard of the Cox resolution when he introduced his own. He denied it had been originated to offset the Cox proposal.

As an aftermath of the row over Woodrum's removal from acting chairmanship of the deficiency sub-committee, it was pointed out that the Virginian presided over the group at a meeting yesterday afternoon to consider the second deficiency bill. Thus it was evident that the "demotion" of Woodrum applied only when the deficiency sub-committee was dealing with the relief measure.

Ohioan Sues U. S. To Regain His Rank in Army

John B. H. Warinf, of Wilmington, Ohio, sued in District Court yesterday to compel the War Department to restore his rank of captain in the Medical Corps and place him on the retired list.

Waring said he entered the Medical Corps in August, 1908, and was dismissed in 1918 on the pretense that he affected illness, when he actually was suffering from an eye injury following sunstroke suffered in the Philippines in line of duty in 1911.

He informed Col. Edwin M. Watson, President Roosevelt's military aide and secretary, yesterday he could not resign his Reserve Commission as major in the Judge Advocate General's office.

Continuance through 1940 of the work of the joint Congressional-Administrative Monopoly Investigating Committee was recommended in a bill introduced by Representative Sumners (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee. The bill would authorize an appropriation of $2,000,000 for the committee.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved nominations of Laurence A. Steinhardt of New York, now ambassador to Peru, as ambassador to Moscow, and William Dawson, of Minnesota, present minister to Uruguay, as first American Ambassador to Panama.

Clerk South Trimble informed the House that Emory F. Smith (Republican) has withdrawn his contest of the seat of Representative James Polk (Democrat), of the Sixth Ohio District.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill repealing all bills and resolutions that have been pocket-vetoed by Presidents prior to the present Congress. Its purpose, legislators said, is to clear up any uncertainty about the status of measures which were pocket-vetoed by Presidents.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, predicted Congress would adjourn between June 1 and 15. Senator Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, the majority leader, said his "adjournment goal" was June 1.

Silver Spring Seeks New Fire Taxing Area

Businessmen Back Bill to Include Four Corners

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 8213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Immediate enactment of legislation to place Four Corners property under the jurisdiction of the Silver Spring fire-taxing area is urged in a resolution unanimously adopted by the Silver Spring Business Men's Association last night.

The area involved is now under the jurisdiction of the Kensington fire-taxing area, but is several miles closer to the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department than to the Kensington department. Taxes of $600 a year are given to the Kensington department.

The action was taken by the association as a counter-move to a proposal of the Montgomery County Volunteer Firemen's Association that the matter be held in abeyance until the 1941 session of the State Legislature in order to permit revision of all of the fire-taxing areas in the county which now has 11 volunteer fire departments.

The businessmen also voted to open a campaign to have county-owned property immediately east of the Silver Spring National Guard Armory taken over for park purposes. President Wilbur B. Mehring was authorized to appoint a committee to confer with county authorities on the proposal.

Dr. Irvin C. Schneider, Gordon W. Bonnette, jr., and Alvin S. Gilbert were voted new members of the association.

Hospital Has Busy Year

Sandy Spring—The Montgomery County General Hospital's fiscal year ended March 1 was the busiest in its history, it is disclosed in the hospital's annual report.

A total of 1,363 patients were admitted to the 40-bed hospital during the year. Of these 712 were paying patients and 651 were charity cases. The daily average of charity cases was 21. In addition, there were 101 charity obstetrical cases in which surgical treatment was required.

The hospital treated 296 accident cases, took 1,293 X-ray pictures, performed 690 operations, made 3,116 laboratory examinations, recorded 161 births and administered 64 blood transfusions. Orthopedic, prenatal and child health clinics were held at regular intervals in co-operation with other county agencies and organizations.

Fire Volunteers to Meet

Chevy Chase—The Montgomery County Volunteer Firemen's Association will hold its quarterly meeting at 8 p. m. today in the Chevy Chase Fire House, it was announced yesterday by President Hiram Musgrove, of Bethesda.

Speakers will include Chief Karl W. Young, of Mount Rainier, president of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, and James W. Just, new fire training instructor at the extension service of the University of Maryland.

Ask Rigid Enforcement

Colesville. — A drive to secure more rigid enforcement of the law prohibiting motorists from passing school buses while taking on or discharging passengers is being launched by the Montgomery County Federation of Parent-Teacher Associations, it was announced last night by Fred W. Heine, chairman of the federation's school bus committee.

Heine said many county residents are not aware of the fact that the school bus law is in effect probably, he said, because it applies only to certain Maryland counties.

Heine said school bus drivers are being instructed to make a note of the tag numbers of all automobiles violating the law in order that warrants may be issued.

Britain Excludes Reich From Drive for Conciliation by Trade

Confidence Shaken, Says Chamberlain

Notes Hitler's First Conquest of Non-Germans

By the Associated Press.

London, March 15.—Prime Minister Chamberlain replied to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's swift liquidation of Czecho-Slovakia today by excluding Germany, for the present, from Britain's drive for conciliation through trade.

Before a tense, uneasy House of Commons the prime minister declared "I bitterly regret" the German Fuehrer's action, which he described as a "shock to confidence all the more regrettable since confidence was beginning to rivive."

"Shame!" Cries Labor

Halifax, in the House of Lords, made the same reference as Chamberlain to the "shock to confidence."

Both Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax noted that Germany, in taking over Bohemia and Moravia, was for the first time effecting military occupation of territory populated by non-Germanic peoples.

While Germany's forces were marching into Prague, Chamberlain was taunted by a Labor spokesman with charges of Britain's "humiliation and shame" through the German coup.

To Visit Moscow

In addition, Anthony Eden, who resigned as foreign secretary 17 months ago in disagreement with Chamberlain's foreign policy, renewed his request for an all-party government to "banish from our people haunting fear." He said the present European situation was beyond party controversy and called for establishment of a coalition government of all parties.

Chamberlain and Halifax both announced that the projected visits of Oliver Stanley, Board of Trade president, and Overseas Trade Secretary R. S. Hudson, to Berlin for trade talks would be "inappropriate" now and had been "postponed."

Hudson, however, will go ahead with his scheduled visits to Moscow and other northern European capitals.

It was understood Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, has been instructed to inform Germany of this decision and also of the fact that Britain "strongly deprecated" Germany's march to the east, which "was not contemplated at Munich."

Chamberlain and Halifax formally announced that Britain would no longer be bound by her promise to guarantee the Czechco-Slovak frontiers established under the Munich accord.

Loans to Be Halted

The prime minister said further payment of £6,750,000 ($33,750,000), due Prague as the balance of loans and gifts granted after Munich dismemberment, would be halted.

Chamberlain made it plain Britain would not fight now to stop Hitlers drive eastward toward the Soviet Ukraine, which many believe to be his ultimate goal.

Chamberlain's critics accused him of showing Hitler the way at Munich.

The prime minsiter rededicated his government to the pursuit of appeasement to secure "the happiness of mankind." "Do not let us be deflected from our course," he urged, by "checks and disappointments."

Laborite David Rhys Grenfell, however, charged that Chamberlain's appeasement, instead of modifying Central European disintergration, "has only given effect to it."

Warning that war is coming The prime minister rededicated nearer, Grenfell declared that the prime minister's simple faith and credulity pass all understanding."

In his speech Chamberlain said "it is natural that I should feel bitterly concerned, it is natural that I should bitterly regret what now has occurred."

Halifax told the House of Lords that as far as he knew Germany had not consulted the other Munich Pact signatories—Italy, France and Britain—before moving into Czecho-Slovakia.

lescu should conduct Rumanian foreign policy, and as long as Czecho-Slovakia should be the mainstay of the Little Entente between Prague, Bucharest and Belgrade.

Besides, Titulescu had reached a close agreement both with Soviet Russia and with Turkey, and Turkey, too was on the best of terms with Moscow.

The first step was, therefore, to get rid of Titulescu. King Carol of Rumania, who professed and perhaps felt great admiration for Hitler, was induced to dismiss Titulescu. A pro-German prime minister, Milan Stoyadinovitch, was installed and supported in Yugoslavia. Then preparations began for the attack upon Czecho-Slovakia.

Attack Shrewdly Prepared

The attack was shrewdly prepared. German propaganda started by working up the alleged grievances of the Sudeten Germans in Bohemia.

Simultaneously, the Slovak autonomists under their clerical leader, the late Father Hlinka, were encouraged to agitate against Prague and the Czecho-Slovak state.

Even the Czech agrarians were persuaded that the policy which the late President Masaryk and his successor, Dr. Eduard Benes, had followed—that of relying on France and upon the Little Entente—was much less sound than a policy agreement with Germany would be.

In these ways some degree of disunion was promoted within the Czecho-Slovak state. But the final assault upon the state could not be undertaken until Hitler had annexed Austria. When this had been done, about a year ago, with the mute acquiescence of Great Britain and France, Nazi Germany gained two immense advantages. She was able to threaten the southwestern border of Czecho-Slovakia from Austrian territory, and, by acquiring a common frontier with Hungary, to make sure that the Magyars could not give serious trouble. Hitler and Goering were very anxious lest Czecho-Slovakia mobilize in support of Austria in case Austria should offer armed resistanee to the German invasion.

Czechs Did Not Mobilize

Czecho-Slovakia did not mobilize, and was effusively thanked by Goering for her peaceful behavior. At the same time Germany recognized the validity of the treaty of arbitration which had been concluded between the late Dr. Gustav Stresemann and Dr. Benes at the time of the Locarno settlement in October, 1925.

But the annexation and occupation of Austria were hardly completed when the real onslaught upon Czecho-Slovakia began. Konrad Henlein was ordered by Hitler to intensify his agitation about Sudeten German grievances. German troops were quietly concentrated last May against the Czecho-Slovak frontiers.

The prompt mobilization of a part of the Czecho-Slovak army early on May 21, and the persistent inquiries which the British Ambassador was instructed to make on that day about the meaning of these troop movements, compelled Hitler to beat a retreat. This he did, while ordering Henlein to demand autonomy for the Sudeten Germans and instructing the Slovak autonomists to show as much active discontent as possible.

Who are the Slovaks? They are a practically pure Slav race whose language is akin to Polish. It has strong resemblances to Czechs, and, especially in the Carpathian regions bordering on Poland, equally strong affinities with the speech of the Polish highlanders.

Except for the comparatively small fraction of the Slovaks who lived in Moravia on the Austrian side of the Austro-Hungarian border, the Slovaks were a people without political experience—since they had never had a state of their own—and, as regards the masses, uncultivated and largely illiterate.

Thomas G. Masaryk was an Austrian Slovak who had grown up under conditions that did allow a certain degree of political and linguistic freedom to the various Austrian races. But the two and a quarter million Slovaks who lived under Hungary possessed no rights whatever.

They were a merry, soft, lovable, artistic people of laborers and peasants whose standing in the eyes of their Magyar masters was indicated by the Hungarian proverb, "A Slovak is not a human being." The bulk of the people were led by and were subservient to their priests.

Only a few of the better-to-do and more cultivated Slovaks cherished political aspirations and ideas that could be described as western. All these intellectual leaders of the Slovaks looked toward the Czechs as the mainstay of the Czecho-Slovak family, however little they might relish the greater efficiency and the dourness of the Czech character.

Propaganda Effective

Upon such a people as this it was easy for interested foreign propaganda to work. It was also easy to arouse resentment among them against the harsher efficiency of Czech officials and teachers who had to be sent into Slovakia after independence and union had been won in 1918 to organize and to educate the Hungarian Slovaks.

The trouble was that there were no Slovak officials or teachers to do this work because Hungary never admitted Slovaks as Slovaks to the service of the Magyar state, whereas Austria had admitted large numbers of Czechs into the Austrian service. By degrees, as a new generation of Slovaks was educated to carry on this educative work, many of the Czech officials and teachers were withdrawn.

But Father Hlinka and his associates under German influence agitated fanatically for complete Slovak autonomy without ever realizing that politically the Slovaks were centuries behind the Czechs.

So when the time was ripe Hitler could prepare the final phase of his onslaught. This phase ended at Munich, where the faithlessness of France to her alliance with Czechoslovakia and the pressure put upon France by a British government, which closed its eyes to the folly of destroying the chief obstacle to Hitlerite domination of central and southeastern Europe, brought about the destruction of Czechoslovak territory and opened the way for complete German control over Bohemia, Moravia, Slovakia and Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia) as a road to the riches of Rumania. It is this control which is now being established.

A Common Frontier Sought

There remain, of course, possibilities of friction between Hungary, Poland and Italy, on the one hand, and Germany on the other. Hungary and Poland, which played the part of jackals to the German lion last autumn, are eager to get a common frontier through Slovakia or Ruthenia, so as to be able to stand together one day as a barrier to the German advance.

Premier Mussolini would like to encourage them if he dared. Should he encourage them, there would be little chance of his getting German support for Italian demands upon France. So he will probably be prudent, while Hitler gets his own way.

All the same, this latest phase of the Central European crisis is not without its dangers. It may have unexpected repercussions. For the moment it makes the idyllic prognostications of Sir Samuel Hoare, The British Home Secretary, last week look rather foolish, and it has exposed the British Prime Minister, Neville Chamberlain, to some embarrassing questions in the House of Commons about the value of the French-British moral guarantee of the post-Munich frontiers of the mutilated Czecho-slovak state.

I, who have observed the Slovaks for more than 30 years and know something of the ideals which inspired President Masaryk and Dr. Benes, decline to make any prophecy about the immediate or ulterior consequences of Hitler's latest offensive.

The cup of European suffering is already very full. Not many more drops may be needed to make it overflow in directions even Hitler, crafty gangster though he be, may not have foreseen.

Racial Laws to Apply Soon In Bohemia, Says Hitler Paper

300,000 to 400,000 to Be Affected By Nuremberg Decrees, Declares 'Beobachter,' Opening Hate Campaign

By the United Press.

Berlin, March 15.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler's party organ, the Voelkischer Beobachter, said tonight a campaign probably would be undertaken immediately against the 300,000 to 400,000 Jews in Bohemia and Moravia.

As propaganda minister Goebbels ordered Germans to hoist swastikas and celebrate the Nazi "liberation" of the 7,000,000 Czechs, the Nazi press broke into an inspired chorus against Czecho-Slovakia's Jews.

Jews in Prague and other cities occupied by the German army were accused of waging "pogroms against the Germans" and it was predicted that "speedy justice" would be meted out to them.

Racial Measures Foreseen

Nazi leaders indicated one of Hitler's first acts would be to introduce the Nuremberg racial laws.

It was understood that numerous Jews already had been arrested in Prague—some of them on charges of communistic activities.

Several thousand Jews had fled into Prague from Slovakia, which yesterday proclaimed its "independence."

Although technically Bohemia and Moravia will retain a certain degree of local administrative autonomy, the appointment of military and civil Nazi administrators means they will form actual parts of the Reich.

In addition to the 7,000,000 new subjects, the seizure of Moravia and Bohemia provides Hitler with rich farmlands from which he can obtain badly needed agricultural products without the difficulty of currency exchange.

Probable Decrees

Among the measures which Hitler probably will proclaim are:

Incorporation of Bohemia and Moravia into the financial and customs system of the Reich.

Incorporation of the Czechs in Marshal Goering's four-year plan of economic self-sufficiency.

Taking over of all the gold reserve of Prague's national banks. The Czecho-Slovak national bank has $83,0000,000 in gold, excluding about $11,000,000 of gold held in special funds against gold liabilities.

Disbanding of the Czech army, which numbered 180,000 well trained and excellently equipped troops and 1,200,000 reserves before the "peace of Munich."

ernment of Premier Volosin proclaimed its independence.

[The new regime, formed from the remnants of the autonomous government that operated under the post-Munich republic, issued its proclamation shortly after the expiration of the Hungarian ultimatum carrying a threat of "further bloodshed," according to a United Press dispatch from Chust.

[Volosin called for "all possible protection" of the frontiers, and reportedly asked Germany and Italy to halt the Hungarian invasion.—Editor's note.]

Refuse to Stop Invasion

A Hungarian ultimatum demanding surrender brought a conciliatory reply from Volosin, but Budapest officials refused to stop the invasion.

Volosin asked that the advance be halted and said he was sending an arbitration delegation here. The Hungarian foreign minister, Count Stephen Csaky, replied that technical reasons prevented a halt in the advance and expressed the hope every effort would be made to prevent unnecessary bloodshed.

The Hungarian troops had hoped their advance would add 4,000 square miles to Hungarian territory by nightfall.

A communique said that bridges and railway lines were being destroyed by Ukrainian bands "recruited in Poland." The statement added that these forces finally had been trapped.

More than 100 Carpatho-Ukraine villages were reported occupied today by Hungarian soldiers.

The Hungarians reaching Poland had advanced across approximately 60 miles of mountainous terrain by way of the Ung River valley to Sianki and by way of the Latortza River valley, farther east, to Lavoczne.

Polish military sources said they were "happy that the 20-year dream of a common frontier with Hungary has now been realized."

Poland, watching the Czech debacle with an eye to her own future, yesterday gave formal diplomatic recognition to the independent state of Slovakia, organized only the day before under Hitler's tutelage. The action was accompanied by appointment of an envoy to Bratislava, Slovak capital.

Although Foreign Minister Joseph Beck in a message to Bratislava said Poland always had recognized the rights of Slovaks to self-determination, Poland generally felt apprehension over the growth of Nazi power to the south.

Rumania Disclaims Ambitions

Bucharest, March 15 (AP).—Assurances were given in official quarters today that Rumania had no desire to annex any portion of Carpatho-Ukraine, an adjoining part of dissolved Czecho-Slovakia.

It was stated that both Hungary and Poland had asked Rumania whether she had any territorial claims on the territory.

(Earlier it had been reported from Bratislava, Slovakia, that Rumanian troops had occupied some villages in Carpatho-Ukraine.)

Several units of military reserves were organized today and sent to reinforce detachments on the Carpatho-Ukraine frontier.

Rumania's greatest concern was that Czech developments might lead to greater revisionist sentiment in Transylvania and Bukowina, territories gained in World War settlements.

Cardenas Offers Plan of His Own To End Oil Dispute

Mexico City, March 15 (AP).—President Cardenas today advanced a plan of his own for settlement of the problem out of Mexico's expropriation last March 18 of $40,000,000 worth of British and American owned oil properties.

Cardenas presented the plan to Donald R. Richberg, representative of British and American companies, at their fifth conference. Details were not disclosed. The government said:

"In the course of the discussion there arose a point on which Mr. Richberg considered it necessary to consult with the local representaties of the companies."

Another conference was fixed for tomorrow.

Ex-President Benes Calls Czecho-Slovakia Division a 'Shocking International Crime'

Says Invasion Is 'New Assault on Existence' Of His People

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 15.—Dr. Eduard Benes, former president of Czecho-Slovakia, tonight described as a "new, shocking international crime" the dismemberment of the republic he helped found.

Without mentioning Germany or Adolf Hitler by name, he said that one of the four powers which "solemnly promised" at Munich to guarantee existing and safety of the Czecho-Slovakian territory, had "wantonly divided the territory and is occupying it with its army" after "provoking difficulties" which served as a "flimsy excuse" for the act.

Dr. Benes, now lecturing at the University of Chicago, gave his reaction in a written statement to the press.

He said the occupation of Czecho-Slovakia territory was "one of the deeds through which Europe is deprived—and is going to be deprived in the future—of peace, order and tranquility. It is a new assault on the state and national existence of the Czecho-Slovakia people—of the Czechs and Slovaks."

"Czechs and Slovaks living in free countries all over the world realize full well," he said, "that it is only another chapter in the fight for a free Europe and a free humanity. Free Czechs and Slovaks realize . . . that it is, and will be, a continuation of the fight which they led during the World War and in which they continued for 20 years under the leadership of T. G. Masaryk in their happy, prosperous, democratic republic of Czecho-Slovakia.

"I know that after what has happened Czecho-Slovakia people cannot defend themselves and are obliged to give in to brute force . . . . the struggle for the freedom of the individual has always won out against brute force and oppression in the long run. It will not be different with today's brute force. A free Europe will be built up again and in it again free Czechs and Slovaks shall live."

He urged Czechs and Slovaks throughout the world to keep in mind that the fight for a "free people of Czecho-Slovak has not stopped and will not stop until a free central Europe and a free country for the Czechs and Slovaks will be resurrected."

Earlier today Dr. Benes discussed the foreign situation with Thomas Mann, author and voluntary exile from Germany.

Jan Masaryk, son of T. G. Masaryk, the first president of Czecho-Slovakia, has been visiting Dr. Benes and assisting him in lecture work.

Benes' statement was read later at a mass meeting of an estimated 6,000 Czechs and Slovaks who cheered it wildly. Masaryk and Joseph Martinek, former editor of the Prague Prado Lidu, were among the speakers.

Mann Discusses Hitler

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, March 15.—Adolf Hitler's present drive to the east will only temporarily deflect the Nazi dictators ambitions from western Europe and the Americas, Thomas Mann, world famous German author and winner of the 1929 Nobel prize in literature, said in an interview here today.

"The present situation in eastern Europe is tragic but not unexpected," he said. "We know that England wishes to give Hitler the freedom of the east hoping in that way Nazi aggression may be deflected from the west.

"This is a blunder. It is a blunder because the aims of National Socialism are unlimited. They are pointed at world mastery. Eventually they will turn toward the west, and England will have to fight, and under vastly more unfavorable conditions than now, or last September.

"Germany in September lacked the capability for war. I am also of the firm conviction that the German people are fearfully opposed to war and would not have followed Hitler into war.

"I believe the same is true now. But we do not know how long it will remain true. Later, when a clash with Western Europe comes which England cannot avoid, Germany's capability for war will have been monstrously augmented."

"Hitler's imperialism is much more comprehensive than that of the former Kaiser. The National Socialists talk of 'Our America;' they have produced a book the subject —'Unser Amerika.' I have read it. Their activity in South America is formidable.

"Today President Roosevelt plays the role which Hitler recently assigned to Benes in his fight on democracy; it is a personal fight. Hitler said he had to occupy Prague because President Roosevelt by his speeches had encouraged the Czechs."

Russia Reports Army Ready to Stem Invasion

Soviet Unmoved By Collapse of Czecho-Slovakia

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, March 15.—War Commissar Voroshiloff told the eighteenth Communist Party Congress in a speech published today that a vastly augmented Red army and Red air force were ready to punish swiftly any aggression against Soviet Russian territory.

Apparently no worry was felt, however, over the dismemberment of the one-time Soviet ally, Czecho-Slovakit—which was called a "continuation of Munich" and a matter in which the Soviet Union was not directly interested.

The changed military situation in eastern Europe was discounted here and it was recalled that Joseph Stalin last Friday said efforts being made by Soviet enemies to lure Hitler into a war against Russia were "without any visible basis."

The "Changkufeng victory last August on the Siberia-Korea-Manchoukuo frontier, was called a lesson to those who thought the Red army had been weakened by the "elimination" of "traitors."

From the Soviet viewpoint the Czechs themselves are largely to blame for the collapse of their republic. It was generally felt here that Czech leeders showed too much eagerness to satisfy Hitler and failed to make a serious effort to defend what independence remained after the "Munich peace."

Without disclosing total manpower, Voroshiloff announced the army increase as approximately 103 per cent.

(Several years ago an official announcement said the Red army numbered 1,300,002 men. In 1937, Soviet strength, including army, navy, air force, border guards and secret police, was estimated as 1,600,000. Recently the Communist newspaper Pravda reprinted a German magazine's figures giviing the Soviet Union a peacetime army strength of 1,800,000.)

abandoning his doctrine of race for one of "vital space" for Germany. This, they held, was a doctrine of pure imperialism which contained a menace to France and her empire.

The opposition deputies demanded a debate on foreign affairs be held Friday. Bonnet said he was not qualified to fix the date for a debate, and later consulted Premier Daladier.

It is possible the government may use President Lebrun's visit to London next week as a pretext for postponing the parliamentary discussion. A debate staged now might well end in a ministerial upset.

Bonnet found only one defender in the foreign affairs committee, namely former Premier Flandin, who praised the Munich policy because it had saved thousands of lives.

Newspapers Critical

Newspapers hitherto supporting the government's foreign policy say that Hitler's latest coup has exposed the hollowness of the Franco-German declaration. Pointing to the fact that this accord provided for a system of conversations between the two governments.

Nazis Impose Iron Rule in Czech Capital

Hitler Sleeps in Old Castle Where Benes, Masaryk Resided

der the leadership of the late Thomas Masaryk and his aide, Eduard Benes, wept without shame, and so did their women.

Cries of "Pfui! Pfui!—Go back home" were heard.

German residents, however, provided some cheering for the conquerors.

The Czechs did not know exactly what sort of government they were to have, but they were acutely conscious that Hitler's troops had occupied the whole of their cherished Bohemia and Moravia.

Bohemia was placed under military rule of Gen. Johannes Blaskowitz, who appointed Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten Nazi leader, to be chief of Bohemia's civil administration.

Moravia's executive power was placed in the hands of Gen. Wilhelm List, commander of the fifth army group stationed in Vienna, and Moravian civil administration was vested in Joseph Bueckel, Hitler's commissioner in Austria.

Gajdo Reported "Fuehrer"

(Reuter's said the Fascist leader, Gen. Rudolf Gajda, had been named "fuehrer" of the Czech people.

(There was no immediate clarification of the source or extent of Gajda's powers as "fuehrer" in relation to the Nazi-appointed administrators. Gajda, however, in a proclamation called for "quiet and order" and support of the "Czech National Committee.")

On the heels of the German army, which crossed the borders at 6 a. m. (midnight Tuesday, Eastern standard time), came the Gestapo, German secret police. A number of arrests were reported.

Several leading Czech political figures, among them Gen. Jan Syrovy, one-eyed army idol and World War hero who for a time was premier of the republic in last September's crisis, were reported to have fled the country.

Emigres in Hiding

Thousands of Jews and German political emigres were in hiding because they did not want to be seen in public and could not get across the frontiers, which were closed to traffic going both ways.

Germany's absorption of Bohemia and Moravia was the final blow crushing out the life of the battered World-War-born republic. Yesterday Slovakia, under German pressure, declared itself independent of Prague, and the eastern province, autonomous Carpatho-Ukraine, fell prey to invading Hungarian army troops.

Today Slovakia was a German vassal. Carpatho-Ukraine's status was uncertain, but was expected to fall completely to Hungary shortly, although Hungarian troops met some resistance. Hungarian military leaders were acting with Germany's approval.

Hitler Rides Through Snow

Escorted by a motor squadron, Hitler made his entry into Prague by a road direct from Boehmisch Leipa, about 40 miles north of the Czech capital.

The journey was made in a dense snowstorm which continued after the Fuehrer had taken up his headquarters in Hradcany Castle.

Hitler was surrounded by a large retinue of Nazi leaders. They included Gen. Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the German high command; Gen. Heinrich von Stuelpnagle, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, and Police Chief Heinrich Himmler. A German motorized detachment occupied the square in front of the castle.

On his way to Prague Hitler passed some of his regiments pushing doggedly through the snowstorm.

Measures Listed

These were among the measures put into effect swiftly today as the Czechs were placed under German rule:

Prohibition of all meetings and closing of all motion picture theaters until further notice.

A curfew forbidding anyone without a pass to appear in the streets after 9 p. m., and ordering bars and restaurants closed at that hour.

Seizure of the Witkowitz Iron Works (in which British capital is invested) and a number of Czech airplanes.

Orders to treat with severity any sabotage or disrespect of the Nazi swastika.

Patrolling of the streets by the German military and Cech gendarmes.

Establishing of the German military and civil rulers of Bohemia and Moravia.

Beginning of disarmament of the Cech army.

Press Changes Tone

Steel-helmeted German soldiers were stationed before the doors of the capital's leading hotels, where German officers took up quarters.

Another noteworthy change in the city's life was a switch in the tone of the newspapers. Gone was any trace of recent recrimination against Germany, and criticism of any sort was absent.

The Prager Tagblatt, Prague's only German language newspaper, which had had Jewish backing, was taken over by Gentile members of the staff. The Jewish staff members went into hiding.

The hoarding of food and clothing increased because of shortage and because of fears of higher prices.

Gen. von Gablenz was placed in command of Prague. He established headquarters in the Czech army barracks.

Cities Occupied

Other parts of Bohemia and Moravia were occupied simultaneously. Iglau, where there is a large German population, was taken over at 1 p. m. Brunn had been occupied an hour earlier.

Germany's economic gain in Moravia and Bohemia will be the richest of all the rewards she has yet obtained through expanding her borders.

Czecho-Slovakia had a gold and foreign exchange reserve estimated at about $100,000,000, which now presumably will fall to the German Reichsbank.

Bohemia's production of war materials is greater than that of Italy's, and her mineral resources will help ease the Reich's lack of many raw materials.

Poles Intern Czechs

Warsaw, March 15 (I.N.S.)—Several Czech army units, retreating before Hungarian troops advancing north through Ruthenia, fled into Poland tonight. The first contingents included 50 Czech officers. They and their men were disarmed by Polish authorities, then interned.

Gloom Mantles Czech-Slovak Legation Here; U. S. Stands to Lose 165 Million by Nazi Coup

'We Can Only Sit And Wait,' Minister Hurban Declares

By Edward T. Folliard

Adolf Hitler's shadow seemed to be lengthening on Massachusetts avenue yesterday, threatening to create something of a real estate problem along ""Embassy Row." Curiously, the old Austrian Legation and the Czecho-Slovakian Legation are next door to each other.

Yesterday, as news flashes tumbled over each other and Nazi troops overran what was left of Czecho-Slovakia, the crumbling republic's legation here was wrapped in gloom.

Col. Hurban "Hanging On"

Col. Vladimir Hurban, the Czecho-Slovakian Minister to the United States, sat at his desk in a half-light, his chin resting in the palms of his hands.

"I am hanging on until I can learn what all this means," Col. Hurban told one caller.

There wasn't much else he could say. He was in the same dilemma as his erstwhile neighbor, Edgar L. G. Prochnik, was in a little more than a year ago. Prochnik eventually learned that he was no longer the Austrian Minister—that Austria had become Ostmark—and he got a position teaching in Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service.

Both Married Americans

Col. Harban and Mr. Prochnik both married American women. Will the parallel continue, and will Col. Hurban, finding himself a man without a country, settle down here?

What has happened in the last few days couldn't be altogether a surprise to Col. Hurban. On September 27 last, on the eve of the Munich "peace," Hurban warned that if Hitler got the Sudeten area he would eventually get all of Czecho-Slovakia. And then, he predicted, the Nazis would move on to Hungary, Rumania and the Russian Ukraine.

Trade Pact Jeopardized

It appeared yesterday the trade agreement between the United States and Czecho-Slovakia, one of Col. Hurban's achievements, would have to be scrapped. Actually, it was pretty well shattered when Hitler took over Sudetenland, one of the republic's richest areas.

In 1938 Czecho-Slovakia sold goods worth about $26,000,000 to the United States, and bought goods from this country worth about $26,500,000. Trade between the two countries dropped sharply after the loss of Sudetenland.

The Czecho-Slovakian government, if it can be called that now, owes the United States $165,620,270.

Vladimir Hurban, minister to the United States from the shattered Czecho-Slovakian government, appeared a dejected figure when he called at the State Department here yesterday. He discussed disintegration of his country with officials

What is to be done about it was a question the answer to which nobody apparently knew. Germany, in taking over Austria, denied legal responsibility for that country's $62,000,000 debt to the United States, although expressing a willingness to negotiate a settlement.

A Department of Commerce economist, commenting on Germany's latest move against Czecho-Slovakia, said the Nazis' chief gain would be the acquisition of needed labor.

This official, in a memorandum to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, said Germany stood to gain little from the standpoint of mineral resources, since these are slight in Czecho-Slovakia. What Germany needs, he said, was iron ore, copper and manganese, and these are not to be had in the toppling republic.

"In agriculture, Czecho-Slovakia will help feed the Sudetenland," he observed.

Fair Officials Puzzled

New York, March 15 (INS).—The future of the half million dollar Czechoslovak exhibit at the New York World's Fair had fair officials puzzled today as they tried to obtain the answer from Consul General Mracha who also was looking for some sort of an answer.

It is likely, however, as in the case of Austria, which had rented a large area for its exhibits, the Czechoslovak entry will be withdrawn from participation.

Bill to Deport Subversive Aliens Pushed

House Committee Approves Measure After Hearing

By the Associated Press.

The House Immigration Committee yesterday approved a bill providing for deportation of aliens who advocate "any changes" in the American form of government.

As introduced by Representative Dempsey (Democrat), New Mexico, the bill stipulated deportation for advocacy of "fundamental changes." Representative Dickstein (Democrat), New York, the committee chairman, said the committee approved the amended bill unanimously.

At a hearing preceding approval of the measure, Dempsey said, aliens "have found a way around" present law, which provides deportation for advocacy of "force and violence" to overthrow the Government.

John P. Frey, of the American Federation of Labor, and John Thomas Taylor, of the American Legion, were among those who testified in support of the bill.

The only objecting witness was Ralph Emerson, representing maritime unions of the Congress of Industrial Organization, who said he was not opposed to the theory of the bill but questioned "what interpretation was going to be placed on the phrase 'fundamental changes.'"

The American Civil Liberties Union filed a letter with the committee objecting to the bill.

Britain Decrees Free Arab State For Palestine

London, March 15 (AP).—Great Britain tonight submitted to Jews and Arabs her "final plan" for the future of Palestine.

It was made clear that the plan, which was understood to recommend creation of an independent Arab-dominated state, would not be modified except in minor details.

The proposals were understood to be grouped under three main divisions:

Future development of a constitution for Palestine, the question to be worked out when the Arab and Jewish populations or working amicably together.

Refugee Loses Suit to Compel U. S. to Admit Him

Dr. Karl Grunwald, Vienna physician, lost in District Court yesterday his effort to compel Secretary Hull to let him pass through America in his flight to Cuba. Justice Bailey held that the courts had no power to compel consular officers to grant visas.

Dr. Grunwald's complaint said that he was threatened with imprisonment unless he got beyond the reach of the German authorities and that he had permission from Cuban authorities to move to their country. However, he said, he was not able to get a boat direct to Cuba, but had to pass through New York.

Japan Prepares Navy to Seize Fishing Area

Will Not Respect Auction of Sea Lots by Moscow

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 15.—Japan today gave fresh indications that her long dispute with Russia over Siberian fisheries might cause trouble and held Russia fully responsible for whatever might occur.

The Japanese navy prepared to give 20,000 Japanese fishermen the protection of warships when they make their annual voyage to the Kamchatka fishing grounds next month.

A Foreign Office statement disclosed Japanese Ambassador Togo was given a flat refusal when he made a last-minute appeal to Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet foreign commissar, to postpone auctions of Kamchatka peninsula fishing lots where fishing rights had been given under treaty by Russia to Japanese for decades until this year.

Togo declared Japan would not respect results of the auctions, scheduled for today in Vladivostok, and "might be constrained to act in self-defense."

Blessing from Pope Pius XII were received yesterday at Catholic University in a cablegram from the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, rector, now visiting in Rome.

Word of the blessing was received by the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore. He forwarded Mgr. Corrigan's cablegram:

"Private audience today. Holy Father sends paternal blessings to university authorities, staff and students."

Mgr. Corrigan, who went to Rome for the coronation ceremonies, is expected to return here later in the month.

Hitler's Seizure of Czechs a Contradiction

'We Want None' Of Them, Fuehrer Said in September

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 15.—Adolf Hitler presented history with a contradiction when he took the Czechs of Bohemia and Moravia into the German Reich today as protectorates.

A little less than six months ago the Fuehrer stood in Berlin's huge sports palace and shouted into a microphone: "Wir wollen gar keine Tschechen!"—"We don't want any Czechs at all!"

This exclamation, which was greeted with great applause, came during the crisis of last September which ended at Munich with the agreement annexing Czecho-Slovakia's Sudetenland to Germany.

In that speech, made September 26, Hitler also said that his demand for the Sudetenland was "the last territorial demand I have to make in Europe."

Move Transcends Race

But today's swift-moving events brought 7,000,000 Czechs under German rule despite the Nazi dictum that Germany is not interested in acquiring foreign elements in its population and seeks only to protect or bring back into the Reich Germans living outside German borders.

The new state of affairs was expected to bring about a reshaping of nazidom's theories to the extent of separating the policies of the state and "volkstum," or nationality.

Government spokesmen freely admitted today that acquisition of the Czechs was an historical turning point and that nothing definite could be stated about how the new situation would fit in with accepted German racial theories.

Czechs May Form "Inland"

From the statements of these sources it was indicated the Czechs will form an island of Czech culture within the Reich. They will have their own schools, probably with the requirement that German be taught, their own press and their own societies—in short, cultural autonomy.

On the other hand, the Czechs unquestionably will have to accept the same bans and regulations which apply to Germany.

Implied in the new scheme of things is the possibility that Hitler may be giving up his claim for colonies and instead of fashioning the economic and political future of nazidom close to home.

Hitler, it is known, was slow in coming around to the idea of acquiring colonies, which recently have been a prime demand of all Nazi leaders. Only the economic stringency in which the Reich found itself brought him around, it is said.

An Economic Empire

Some circles saw economic needs driving Hitler toward creation of such a great economic empire that customers inevitably would be drawn to it.

Whatever form the future development of Germany may take, domination of Southeastern Europe is regarded as a virtual certainty.

The newspaper Hamburger Fremdenblatt said editorially today that the "German action is the action of order, which does not have the purpose of absorbing a foreign nationality. It is not directed in any way against the interest of the English or the French."

The newspaper 12-Uhr Blatt, in a resume of the ties between the Czechs and Germans through history, said "history proves Bohemia and Moravia stood at their highest point culturally and economically when Germany led the country, and decline always set in when the Czechs took their fate in their own hands."

Your best friend should have told you:

You can buy a Buick for—

delivered at Flint, Mich. Subject to change without notice. Transportation, state and local taxes, if any, optional equipment and accessories extra.

*The model illustrated is the Buick SPECIAL model 41 four-door touring sedan $996 delivered at Flint, Mich.

WE'RE talking about that friend of yours who owns a 1939 Buick—

You've heard plenty from him, naturally, about the fresh-as-the-morning-breeze styling of his taut and trim new Buick—and the way it perks abody up just to look it over!

You've listened while he sang the praise of a ride that's like a lullaby—soft and gentle as a tender touch, but sure, unwavering, steady, in cross-wind or at speed.

No doubt you've sensed his joy at those eight eager Dynaflash cylinders, that need only the gentlest sort of hint to hike you straight to the forefront—and the snug and reassuring steadiness of this stable stepper's gait!

All of which is well and good, but has your good friend told you this:

...That Buick's prices are easily the lowest prices for the value you'll find anywhere on automobile row?

...That this far-ranging great-hearted eight—with all the sky-larking life those extra cylinders give it—still costs less than some sixes?

...That factory list figures run anywhere from $51 to $102 less than a year ago—and that they buy worlds more in self-banking Knee-Action, Handishift transmission, 15% softer BuiCoil Springing, visibility stepped up as much as 412 square inches, any number of so-called "extras" such as the Flash-Way direction signal?

If he hasn't, it's plainly time to get dollars-and-cents figures on what the model of your choice will cost delivered in your driveway!

That will prove, we think, that Buick's the car and the value of the year. And we're certain-sure it will tell you what your best friend hasn't—this shining star is in your reach, so why should you be without it?

NO OTHER CAR IN THE WORLD HAS ALL THESE FEATURES

Army Voted 116 Million by House Group

Sub-Committee Favors Funds to Fit Units For Instant Action

Supplemental defense funds to equip the Regular Army and National Guard for instant action in time of war, were voted by the House deficiency appropriation subcommittee yesterday.

The group approved President Roosevelt's request for $116,539,287 to bolster seacoast defenses, and provide the major part of the deficiencies in weapons and fighting equipment for the "Initial Protective Force," which includes only visiting units.

This action coincided with these other efforts to speed American armament:

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, supported the plan to construct warships in this country for South American nations, telling the Senate Foreign Relations Committee such work could be carried on without interfering with the Navy's expansion program.

Brig. Gen. George Marshall, deputy chief of staff of the Army, and Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles also supported the Pittman resolution to help Latin-America arm.

The House Merchant Marine Committee planned to hear Governor Ridley of the Panama Canal and Army and Navy officials, in executive session today, on several proposals to build an alternate route between the Atlantic and Pacific. The President has already disapproved bills to build a canal across Nicaragua and Mexico, but has withheld final decision on constructing a third set of locks at Panama.

Chairman Land of the Maritime Commission has informed the committee that an additional interoceanic route is not justified by shipping needs and must rest on its worth to national defense.

Johnson Asked to Testify

The House Military Affairs Committee asked Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson to appear before it today to testify as to the Administration's wishes on war reserves legislation. The group is considering a bill authorizing acquisition of stocks of vital war materials not produced in quantity in this country. As drafted the bill calls for expenditures of $100,000,000 over four years, while it is reported the President opposes spending more than $10,000,000 at present.

Senate Naval Committee action on the $65,000,000 measure to establish naval air bases in the continental United States, Puerto Rico and the Pacific islands was delayed until next week pending receipt of a supplemental report from a naval board governing major bases on the Atlantic coast.

Conferees on the Army air expansion bill, which would authorize 6,000 planes for the Air Corps, will meet today to sign and present their report to the Senate and House. The group held a session yesterday to complete action on details.

Contracts for balloons and air materials totaling $283,180 were let by the War Department. Approximately $94,000 went for new type "captive" balloons which can be detached from ground installation and flown to new location.

Shipyard Facilities Cited

Meanwhile the Navy Department corrected statements attributed to Rear Admiral Ben Moreell regarding the ability of American shipyards to accommodate South American warships. Moreell had been quoted as stating before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee that naval and commercial shipyards in this country would be filled for the next ten years with United States Navy and merchant marine work.

The department said that Admiral Moreell's testimony was to the effect that the facilities now available in Navy yards will probably be taxed within a period of two years if work is carried on in accordance with the Navy's 10-year building program. It will be possible to build South American warships in Government and commercial yards with existing facilities in some cases and by extending them in other yards, the statement declared.

May Report Wednesday

After the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing, Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, indicated that the plan to assist South American arming will probably be reported next Wednesday. He revealed that the State, War and Navy Departments had assisted in the preparation of the measure.

The House sub-committee deferred action on an Administration request for $7,300,000 for training 20,000 civil airplane pilots. The group has some doubt that authorization exists for the funds.

ranking officers marks a considerable departure from precedent. Naval officials said that in picking him the President went farther down the list than ever has been done before.

Studied Ordnance

A native of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Admiral Stark was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1899, and after graduation devoted himself primarily to gunnery and ordnance duties. He has commanded both of the nearby stations, the Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va., and the Powder Factory at Indianhead, Md.

Taking command of the torpedo flotilla of the Asiatic fleet in 1917, Admiral Stark was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for bringing a squadron of old destroyers from the Philippines to the Mediterranean through a monsoon. He headed the squadron in anti-submarine operations through most of the World War, later being assigned to the staff of Admiral Sims, American naval commander in Europe.

Several tours of duty in Washington have familiarized Stark with Congressional and departmental procedure. He was aide to both former Secretary Adams and Secretary Swanson. From 1934 to 1937, he served as chief of the Bureau of Ordnance. His sea commands include the battleship West Virginia, cruiser division three, and his present post in command of cruisers, bottle force.

Short, rudy-faced and studious, an administrator "who gets jobs done," but is liked and respected by his subordinates, Admiral Stark will make an excellent head of the Navy during the coming troublesome years, officers predict.

Continuation of Admiral Bloch as Fleet Commander had been foretold by naval officers here, although the able Kentuckian had been mentioned as a successor to Leahy. President Roosevelt, it is understood, felt that a change in the fleet post was inadvisable under present world conditions.

Hart a Veteran

The success of the veteran Yarnell in the ticklish Asiatic post led to the selection of 62-year-old Admiral Hart to follow him, officers believe. A commander of submarines in European waters in the World War, Hart has served as superintendent of the Naval Academy, Commander of Cruisers, Scouting Force, and Commander of Cruiser Divisions 5 and 6. He is no stranger to the Orient, having had charge of a submarine flotilla there after the World War.

A lover of salt water is the new No. 2 of the fleet. For although he had completed less than a year of a four-year term in charge of the principal Navy Department Bureau, Admiral Richardson sought a sea job this year and got it. Formerly Navy budget officer and assistant chief of Naval Operations, his principal prior assignment afloat was as commander of destroyers, Scouting Force.

Heading the "big ships" of the fleet is a West Virginian who spent the World War escorting troop transports across the submarine-infested Atlantic. Admiral Snyder, a former commandant at the Naval Academy, has served as chief of staff of the U. s. fleet and in command of a cruiser division.

Blakely Distinguished

Admiral Blakely, who becomes senior air officer of the Navy, has had a distinguished career, although he has been in aviation only since 1932. He served with the Kentucky Infantry Volunteers in the Spanish-American War and convoyed troop ships through the war zone in the World War. He has commanded the carrier Lexington and the Naval Flying School at Pensacola, Fla.

Assignment of Admiral Nimitz to be chief of the Bureau of Navigation breaks another precedent, for normally this important post goes to a senior. Formerly assistant chief of the bureau, he now commands a battleship division.

Towers Welcomed

The selection of Capt. Towers as successor to Admiral Cook will receive the whole hearted support of naval aviation. He wil be the first "old-timer" in aviation to reach the grade of rear admiral or to be chief of the Aeronautics Bureau. One of the first three naval officers selected for air training, he was taught to fly by Glenn Curtis in 1911. The following year he was placed in charge of Navy flight training and established a world's endurance record of 6 hours 10 minutes in the air.

Capt. Towers commanded the aviation unit established by the Navy at Vera Cruz in the Mexican disorders in 1914, and after the outbreak of the World War went to Europe as an air observer for the Navy. He was supervisor of the Naval Aviation Flying Corps when it was organized in 1916, and served as assostant director of naval aviation in the World War. Commander of the flight of NC seaplanes on the transatlantic flight in 1919, Capt. Towers has since served as commander of aircraft carriers Langley and Saratoga, and twice as assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics.

Stock Sale Halted By Court Order

Justice Bailey, of the District Supreme Court, yesterday signed a judgement enjoining the Bankers' Credit and Acceptance Corporation, 1422 K street northwest, from offering its securities in alleged violation of the fraud provis ions of the 1933 securities act.

The Securities and Exchange Commission, which brought the action against the corporation, charged it was representing to prospective purchasers that the money received from sale of stock would not be disbursed until a certain amount of capital had been raised, when as a matter of fact, proceeds from sales were being disbursed as received.

Planners to Study Park Projects

The National Park and Planning Commission will open a two-day meeting this morning to discuss reports on the proposed armory-sports center, rerouting of the Mount Vernon Memorial highway and other projects. On today's agenda are a report by T. C. Jeffers, staff landscape architect, on plans for four new park and playground recreation areas, and an inspection trip along the Anacostia River by boat of park and parkway improvements.

Friends Honor Dr. Bradfield

District Health Department employes yesterday bade farewell to Dr. Jefferson Davis Bradfield, who retired last month as an expert diagnostician in contagious disease work. With the department since June 19, 1893, Dr. Bradfield was presented with a traveling kit and several boxes of cigars.

Fairfax General Tax Raised 7 Cents

Supervisors Drop Supplemental School Fund From Budget

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
Phone Falls Church 2062-M.
P. O. BOX 243, Fairfax, Va.

The tax rate for general county purposes was increased from 37 to 44 cents yesterday when the county board of supervisors adopted its budget and fixed levies for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The board struck out items for the employment of additional county police and the supplementary appropriation of $43,612.36 for the county school operating fund, and reduced the appropriation for the county planning commission from $2,500 to $500 and the amount for county free library system from $900 to $250.

Supervisor W. P. P. Reid, board chairman, was the only member voting for the supplemental school appropriation. He urged the other members of the board to include an item of $15,000 for school operation. The school tax rate was set at $1 for operation purposes and 25 cents for school indebtedness. The board voted to appropriate an additional $6,429.38 for the school debt fund which is the amount necessary above the sum raised by the 25-cent debt levy.

The total tax rate as finally fixed by the board was 40 cents for county levy, 4 cents for reassessment of real estate, 5 cents for fire protection, 3 cents for Confederate pensions, $1 for school operations and 25 cents for school debt service, which is applicable to all parts of the county except the town of Falls Church, which makes its own school and fire levies. In addition to the above general rate a levy of $1.35 cents was made in Dranesville District for road bond debts; 70 cents for road bonds in the Falls Church District; Mount Vernon District, 15 cents; Providence District, 16 cents.

A resolution was adopted disapproving the county school budget as prepared by the school board because it exceeded the amount that could be raised by the maximum school tax rate.

The board considered the proposal to ask the judge of the circuit court to call a special election which would allow the citizens of the county to vote on whether to grant the supervisors power to increase the school operating levy 25 cents. Board members stated that while they had the power to ask for the election they would not take upon themselves the responsibility.

Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 1400.

The Alexandria Tuberculosis Association collected $2,770 in its Christmas Seal sale, a report by Mrs. William T. Burch, president; Robert M. Reese, treasurer, and Mrs. Doris Tompkins, secretary, revealed yesterday. The amount represented a gain of $368 over 1937 sales.

The local association will conduct an Early Diagnosis Campaign in April, culminating with an X-ray clinic on April 24, when all who react positively to the tuberculin test will be able to receive X-ray on payment of $1. The entire senior and sophomore classes of the George Washington High School may be given the tuberculin test on April 17, and a committee is now securing consent of parents.

Mrs. John M. Cook is general chairman for the Early Diagnosis Campaign. Her assistants will be the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, chairman of the speakers' bureau; Dr. H. A. Latane, demonstrations; Mrs. Charles M. Shepperson, publicity, and Mrs. Frank Cain, Mrs. Clarence C. Leadbeater and Miss Mary Monroe.

Reward Increased

Additional pledges for a reward for the apprehension of the driver of the car that fatally injured Miss Frances Sublet, of 2630 Dune street, March 8, are being received at police headquarters. The amount now subscribed is approximately $150. More than $50 was pledged yesterday. The largest amount was $15 from the Russell Mitchell Post, No. 609, Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The pledges are being received by the Alexandria police and State police. Any information given the police will be confidential, authorities said.

Prince Georges To Have First Tobacco Sale

Auction, May 2, to Be Held in New $13,000 Marlboro Warehouse

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST,
43 University rd., Calvert Hills, Md.
Telephone Glenwood 3589.

The first loose-leaf tobacco auction market in the history of Prince Georges County will open May 2 in a $13,000 warehouse under construction at Upper Marlboro, it was announced yesterday.

Bab Hall, secretary of the Marlboro Tobacco Market, Inc., said a demonstration of auction market practices would be given by a representative of the Department of Agriculture prior to opening of the market.

The new warehouse will be 160 feet long and 112 feet wide, large enough to house 100,000 pounds of tobacco at one time.

Another auction market will be opened May 1 at Hughesville, in Charles County, under supervision of the Southern Maryland Tobacco Market.

It was decided to establish the two loose-leaf markets last fall as the result of dissatisfaction among southern Maryland growers with the prices they were receiving at the Baltimore market. Farmers pledged their support of the new system at a series of meetings in the five counties of Maryland's tobacco belt.

Hall pointed out, however, that farmers may sell part of their crops at the Baltimore market if they desire, since it also will open in May. Growers who sell on the Baltimore market have to pack their crops in hogsheads. The auction system eliminates this extra work and expense.

Wants "Bookie" License

Upper Marlboro—State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., revealed yesterday he had received a letter from a resident of Prince Georges County asking the cost of a license to operate a "legitimate bookmaking business."

The writer stated that he had been offered an opportunity to rent a house in Riverdale, Md., with the assurance it would be "an ideal place to run a legitimate bookmaking business." Wheatley, who is leading a campaign to rid the county of all types of gambling, was uncertain as to how to take the letter, but he replied in all seriousness that bookmaking is still unlawful.

C. L. Hickerson, 80, Dies in Rockville

Clarence L. Hickerson, 80, retired businessman died at his home in Rockville yesterday.

He was a lifelong resident of Montgomery County, and a member of the milling firm of Hickerson Bros. for years.

The funeral will be tomorrow at 10:30 a. m. at the W. Reuben Pumphrey funeral home. Burial will be in Rockville Union Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Florence Hickerson; a sister, Mrs. William P. Rudasill, Culpeper, Va., and three brothers, Lindsay, Robert and Clifton, all of Montgomery County.

Mrs. Williamson Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Ada B. Williamson, 51, mother of Officer Raymond A. Pearson, of the Prince Georges County police, will be held at 9 a. m. at St. Mary's Church, Fifth and H streets northwest. Burial will be in the family plot at Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Sportsmen to Hear Conservationists

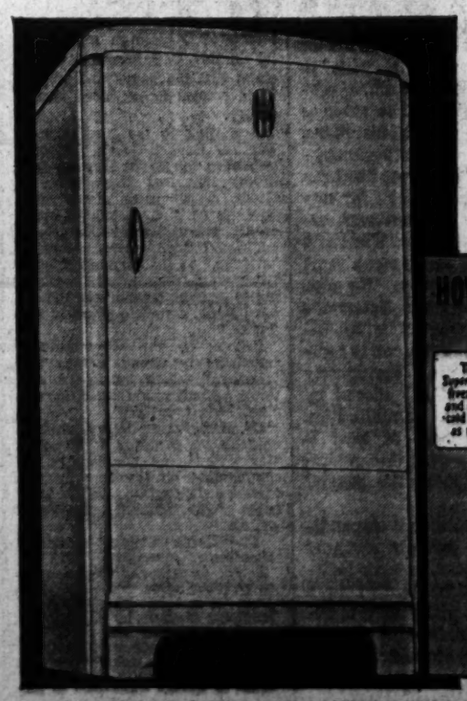
IT SAVES FOOD'S VITAL JUICES FROM DRYING OUT!



It Preserves Flavor, Color, Nourishment—Amazingly Longer!

● Now—for the first time—with the new "Cold-Wall" Frigidaire—you can keep even highly perishable foods days longer than ever before! Prolong food's original freshness! Retain food's rich nutritional values! Save food's peak fresh flavor!

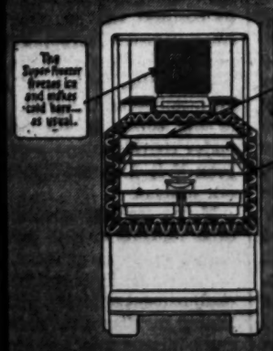
Fresh fruits and vegetables do not shrink, wilt, turn color! Left-over meats, peas, beans, oatmeal, even mashed potatoes—stay as fresh and delicious as when first prepared. And you needn't even cover them!

For the new "Cold-Wall" Principle eliminates moisture-robbing air currents that dry out food. Odor-and-flavor transfer is checked, too!

Here, at last, is something entirely new . . . the refrigerator that saves not only the food, but the VITAL VALUES in food! Here's something so new that it's years ahead in its sweeping, modern lines. New in usefulness with its exclusive MEAT-TENDER for fresh meats. New SUPER-MOIST HYDRATORS that keep vegetables fresher, crisper. New METER-MISER that still breaks records for economy.

Get Proof—in 5 Minutes—No other refrigerator in the world can give you the marvelous advantages you get in the new "Cold-Wall" Frigidaire. Convince yourself of this! Visit your nearest Frigidaire dealer. See the new "Cold-Wall" Frigidaire. See how it puts you way ahead, in every vital way! Yet it costs no more than ordinary "first-line" refrigerators. See Frigidaire's other new models, too—for every need and budget. Also the new Frigidaire Electric Ranges and Water Heaters. Every one a great General Motors Value! FRIGIDAIRE DIVISION, GENERAL MOTORS SALES CORPORATION, DAYTON, OHIO.

HOW AMAZING "COLD-WALL" PRINCIPLE WORKS



NOW, FOR THE FIRST TIME
① THE NEW "DEW-FRESH SEAL"—A SOLID GLASS PARTITION—DIVIDES THE CABINET INTO 2 COMPARTMENTS.
and
② THE LOWER COMPARTMENT IS REFRIGERATED DIRECTLY THROUGH THE WALLS BY CONCEALED REFRIGERATING COILS.
This provides all 3 essentials for keeping foods vitally fresh longer than ever before—
1. Uniform Low Temperatures.
2. 85 to 100% Humidity.
3. No Moisture-Robbing Air Circulation.
All without adding a single moving part! AND ONLY FRIGIDAIRE HAS IT!

ONLY FRIGIDAIRE HAS QUICKUBE TRAYS!

Imitated but never equalled—because they're 1. Easier to use—just lift one lever and cubes are free. 2. Built Sturdier. 3. Faster Freezing. 4. Better Looking. Compare—and you'll want only genuine FRIGIDAIRE QUICKUBE TRAYS.

FRIGIDAIRE WITH THE METER-MISER
Simplest Refrigerating Mechanism Ever Built—and when parts aren't there, they just can't use current or wear. Completely sealed. Backed by General Motors 5-Year Protection Plan.

Happily Discarded

The elimination, in conference, of the Barkley labor amendment to the defense bill removes a provision that constituted a serious threat to the success of the entire defense program.

The deleted amendment would have banned the award of contracts for defense purposes to firms accused of interfering with the right of their employes to organize and bargain collectively. The heads of the departments concerned (that is the Secretaries of War and Navy) would have been the sole and final judges of the status of bidding firms. Presumably their decisions would have followed those of the National Labor Relations Board, although they would have been free to ignore the latter's findings.

The proposed amendment was of course designed to prevent contractors from gaining an advantage in bidding for government contracts by indulging in oppressive and unfair treatment of employes. There can be no criticism of that objective, but in practice, the rejected amendment would have given rise to grave abuses. For it would have enabled departmental heads to penalize concerns for alleged violation of the national labor relations act before the courts had determined whether such violations had in fact occurred.

High-handed administrative methods of this sort would not only work injustice, and give rise to great confusion, but they would also hamper the execution of the defense program. Suppose, for instance, that following the voting of large defense outlays jurisdictional labor disputes should break out, involving concerns engaged in the manufacture of munitions, ships or airplanes. If these firms should be held to be operating in defiance of the collective bargaining provisions of the Wagner act they would under the Barkley amendment be automatically disqualified for the award of Government contracts.

The defense program is too vital to the safety of the Nation to be left at the mercy of labor politics, or to be used as a means of coercing employers into unquestioning acceptance of the orders of the N. L. R. B. If the system of collective bargaining needs to be strengthened, the Wagner act should be revised accordingly. There is no excuse for resort to such indirect methods as the one now happily discarded.

On Price Control

The Federal Reserve Board has issued a statement which, if read and digested, ought to stop all further agitation in favor of price control through regulation of the amount and cost of money.

The board has not been content with categorical denials of its powerlessness to direct or stabilize price movements. It has supplied irrefutable evidence to show that prices have fluctuated in recent years without reference to changes in the outstanding volume of currency. For example, between 1929 and 1938 currency increased 60 per cent, while prices decreased 20 per cent.

However, as the statement points out, more than 90 per cent of the business done in this country is transacted by use of checks drawn against deposits. But even if deposits are added to currency to determine total money supply, the evidence fails to show that prices change as the volume of money changes. Numerous other factors, such as the weather, Government policies in regard to spending and taxation and public sentiment, influence the demand for goods. In the board's opinion these "other things" have a greater influence on prices than the amount of money.

Then, in refutation of the theory that low interest rates necessarily provide a stimulus to business calculated to raise prices, the board's statement reviews the recent record of declining loan and discount rates accompanied by a sharp drop in prices.

Having demonstrated that prices are not controlled by the amount of money the board proceeds further to minimize its limited control over prices by emphasizing the restrictions upon its power to influence the volume of currency and bank deposits. The Federal Reserve Banks, it says, "have enough reserves to make money available to commerce, industry and agriculture at low rates; but it cannot make the commercial banks use these reserves, it cannot make the people borrow, and it cannot make the public spend the deposits that result when the banks do make loans and investments."

In short, cheap and abundant credit affords no sure way of instilling confidence, of stimulating enterprise, of exorcising fear. A thoughtful brief of this kind, showing the impossibility and the undesirability of trying to control the price level by monetary and credit manipulation, ought to silence the advocates of price stabilization measures. But judging from past experience, faith rather than reason guides their thinking.

Last Friday, less than a week ago, President Hacha of Czecho-Slovakia ordered the resignation of Dr. Joseph Tiso, the premier of the autonomous province of Slovakia. Dr. Tiso was accused, with a justification established by subsequent events, of seeking to separate Slovakia from Prague. And the news of his ousting was the first direct indication of the disintegration of the Czecho-Slovak nation which has now occurred.

Yesterday, moving with the precision of a well-oiled machine, German troops marched into Prague, paving the way for Hitler's triumphal entry into the old capital of Bohemia. Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten Nazi leader, was provisionally appointed administrator of the Reich's new province. At the same moment, 400 miles to the east of Prague, Hungarian regiments were occupying Chust, capital of the Carpatho-Ukraine. This mountainous territory, more familiarly known as Ruthenia, heretofore had been a wedge separating Hungary from Poland. Between Ruthenia and the Czech districts the people of Slovakia, for the moment nominally independent, today await Hitler's decision as to their disposition.

All this has happened in less than a week—the same week of the same month that just a year ago witnessed the collapse and death of the Austrian republic. Now a second creation of the Treaty of Versailles has disappeared from the map. Czecho-Slovakia, with all its virtues and all its weaknesses, is no more.

It is not merely the lightning speed; it is also the confidence and certainty of Hitler's actions, which stand out from these dramatic yet somber delevolpments. This time there was no preliminary bombast; no threats and no advance warning. The world does not even know whether the procedure followed was planned ahead, or whether a sudden decision was made to take advantage of the opportunity offered by the bungling Dr. Tiso. What is apparent is the deadly improvement in Hitler's technique. Conscious of his power, contemptuous of his enemies, he has now for the first time struck without first testing the ground. He has struck, and a nation crumbles into fragments.

That the British and French, co-signers of the Munich agreement, were totally unprepared for the current development was made clear by the British foreign minister yesterday. It is extremely doubtful that the Italian government, once the partner but now the satellite in the Berlin-Rome axis, knew very much more. Mussolini may have been told that a coup d'etat was coming, but certainly his opinion as to its desirability was not asked. Il Duce, who once strutted so proudly in the limelight, is today a pathetic, shrunken figure, silent in the wings of the world stage.

Hungary and Poland were doubtless told something of Hitler's plans. The silence of Warsaw is as significant as the frantic energy with which the Hungarians have poured troops into Ruthenia, seeking to join their frontier with that of southwestern Poland. Hitler is evidently now willing to permit this junction, which he prohibited after Munich. Toward Hungary and Poland he can afford to be tolerant. For whether or not they have a common frontier he can do what he wants with these two countries, and do it when he wills.

The era of surprises is not over. More probably it is now only well under way. But for a time uneasy quiet may be expected in Central Europe. For in the annexation of Bohemia and Moravia, and in the protectorate over Slovakia, there is a new problem for Germany which will temporarily absorb even that nation's tremendous energy. The snake, again temporarily, is gorged.

This is the first time that Nazi Germany has extended her direct rule over districts and peoples of a definitely non-Germanic character. The problem of how these alien people are to be incorporated into a strongly unitary state must be solved, and solved with a view to future annexations. The adaptation to German methods of the economy of the newly annexed lands must be worked out. What force has seized intelligence must co-ordinate. And the severe strains already operating on Germany's economic structure will render the problem of co-ordination doubly difficult, in spite of the useful gold and foreign exchange which will be seized in Prague.

For a time the self-esteem of the German people will be nourished by this latest spectacular achievement of the Fuehrer. For a time the swelling chest will distract attention from the tightened belt. But while the annexations of the past year attest the German power they also emphasize the German poverty. The mailed fist is not a productive hand. That is why the Reich's eastern neighbors, particularly those with broad fields and fertile acres, are living today in deadly fear. The measure of their respite is the duration of the doubtful glory which Hitler today presents to the German people.

Advice To The Lovelorn

The New York Times considers itself jilted by the Lady Springtime and is taking it very hard indeed. As nearly as we can put it together, the story seems to be that last Saturday the little lady met the well-intentioned, if pretty ardent and premature advances of New York City, with a haughty Sir-how-dare-you-accost-me attitude. She chastened that presumptuous metropolis with indignant flurries of snow and then, according to the Times, burst into "ill-tempered tears."

And that, the Times complains bitterly, is no way for a well-bred girl to behave, especially at a season when "the sap is already rising in us." If we were not so well-bred ourselves, we might snicker, "Sap is right!" But we shall merely suggest that, while the Times seems to know a lot about the housing problem, and the cotton surplus, and the foreign situation, it has a good deal to learn about the wooing of women. Don't talk to us about the sophistication of New Yorkers.

Down here in Washington we know how to counter Lady Springtime's perverse little tricks with a few of our own. We know too much to try to rush a little girl off her feet before the middle of March. When she has her little tantrums, we just smile indulgently, because we know it really means she has a crush on us.

When, early in the acquaintance, Lady Springtime gives us a languishing smile, deepening her dimple, and half-closing a lid over one bright blue eye, exclaiming, like Rosalind,

"Come woo me, woo me now, for I am in a holiday humor and as like as not to consent,"

—all we do about it is make sure the double blanket is still on the bed and that our umbrella and overshoes are within easy access.

But if she greets us of a morning with a hard and frigid stare, and as though she knew us not from Adam, do we let it dismay us? Quite the contrary. With merry heart we fetch out the golf clubs from the cupboard, for we know that before noon she will be caressing us with her blandest sunshine.

And so, almost before you know it, we have outwitted this capricious little jade at her own game and have turned her into the most patient of Griseldas. And then she will simply wear herself out thinking up new ways to delight our souls and senses, decorating our parks and countryside with colors to enrapture our eyes, conjuring odors to ravish our nostrils, rehearsing choruses to enthrall our ears.

This, then, is the inside story of why, year after year, the Lady Springtime yields all her graces and glories to Washington weeks before she deigns to scatter some of them about Prospect Park and the Bronx River Parkway. We know that the astronomers and weathermen have another theory, but we suspect they may not know any more about the ways of women than the New York Times.

Revision Not Reduction

There is a vast deal of difference between tax revision and tax reduction. Failure to keep the distinction in mind probably accounts in part for conflicting statements concerning the prospect of tax legislation at this session.

Secretary Morgenthau has given his support to a program of revision that would modify or remove impositions regarded as hampering to business activity. Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, has expressed a wish to co-operate in working out such a program. And the President has given a qualified indorsement to revisionist plans, provided they mean no loss of revenue.

Speaker Bankhead, however, has been very dubious about the outlook for any measure of tax relief for business, although he now says that the Ways and Means Committee may recommend some modifications of the tax laws. He adds his opinion that the only way deterrents to business can be removed is by increasing general corporation taxes to compensate for lost revenue. Fortunately this defeatist attitude is not shared by all members of Congress. Simplification of the corporate tax laws at least is under consideration—a desirable reform even if it does not lighten the general tax burden.

If the scale of government expenditures remains so high that tax revenues cannot safely be reduced, reform legislation obviously must be limited to a readjustment of levies, with a view to obtaining maximum revenue with a minimum interference for productive processes.

If Congress were disposed to survey the field with a view to a general overhauling of the tax structure, it could undoubtedly reduce the direct levies on industry and find less burdensome substitutes for the lost revenue. But if it starts out with the determination to make no reductions in corporation taxes as a whole, the relief accorded will necessarily be slight. This is the more true because the undistributed profits tax has already been largely eliminated.

Aliens And Free Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial "What For Is Democracy?" on February 22 was commendable. Only a foreigner who has not yet learned and understood the meaning of liberty is most likely to be puzzled by it. Only a stranger who, though safely nestled within the walls of the United States, may misinterpret the indulgence of his new freedom which he can scarcely get anywhere else.

One way to emphasize the meaning of democracy to foreigners is to make them decide whether they want to be true American citizens, or whether they desire to go back to their faraway fatherlands. If the first thought suits them well, then they must co-operate wholeheartedly to obey the laws of this country, to promote peace and order at all times, to adapt themselves willingly to American family ways, and to respect the Constitution with the Bill of Rights as the foundation of their safety and protection in the United States. If, however, they prefer to go back home, then something must be done to that effect.

Finally, citizen or foreigner, living in the United States necessitates co-operation, honesty, fairness and adaptability. Bear in mind that the greatness of the American people lies in their unlimited resources and in their unified, unswerving and unshakable faith as a Christian nation.

SYLVESTER SATURDAY.
Glenn Dale, Md., Feb. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When "Save America" was shouted at the German Bund meeting in New York the speakers skated on thin ice against the right of free speech. I interpret one of the definitions of "saving" a nation as implying a change if not a reversal of a government. In any case, the implication to implant nazism was obvious and intentional. And if by a technicality in words the utterance of "government overthrow" was not actually pronounced, it was precisely this idea that the bund wanted to camouflage.

The Post in an editorial of February 23 said, "not passion but intelligent ridicule will destroy the influence of these equally absurd manifestions." I quite agree with the potency of ridicule, but do not agree that the "manifestions were absurd" (except inasmuch as Hitler's ideology is contrary to reason).

It may be that the Nazi demonstration appeared to the humorist-thinker as absurd but how many present were humorists or thinkers?

Swing Music

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am very pleased to see that at last you have an adequate swing column. It is not only superior to anything of its kind in Washington but it will compare favorably with anything in the country that is being written on the subject. I sincerely hope that Mr. Gottlieb will continue his brilliant work for a long time to come!

"Upon This Rock"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the cause of accuracy I would be interested to learn on what authority the Rev. C. S. Longacre rests his claim that the name "Peter" is derived from a Greek word meaning pebble.

According to the Classic Greek-English, English-Greek Dictionary published by Hinds, Hayden & Eldredge, Inc., of New York, the Greek word petra, from which Peter is derived, means "a rock, a crag." The dictionary also gives an additional form, petros, translated "a stone," as the equivalent of the Latin word, saxum, which, according to Anthon, means "any unhewn, hard stone, a rock, a piece of rock, a crag."

Pebble, on the other hand, is translated in Greek by the word "psephos," which means "a small stone, a small round stone, found in river beds, a pebble."

Dr. E. Sylvester Berry, professor of dogmatic theology at Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Emmitsburg, Md., commenting on the text from St. Matthew (Matt. xvi. 15-18) in his book, "The Church of Christ," writes:

The Greek "Petros" (Peter) is simply a masculine form of "Petra" (a rock), adopted for use as a proper name. This is evident from the fact that in Aramaic, the language spoken by Christ, the one word "Kepha" was used. This originally Aramaic word has been retained in the name "Cephas," given to St. Peter in several passages of Sacred Scripture: in one instance St. John explicitly says that it signifies the same as "Petros." "And Jesus looking upon him said: Thou art Simon, the son of Jona; thou shalt be called Cephas, which is interpreted Peter." (Jno. i, 42.)

In his commentary, St. Ephraim of Syria uses the same word (kipho, a rock) for Petros and petra, just as the French use the one word pierre: "Tu es Pierre et sur cette pierre, etc." The proper English translation would be "Thou art Rock, and upon this rock will I build my church."

Anyone who has even a slight knowledge of Greek can check my references in the dictionary for accuracy. One should be able to secure a copy of Dr. Berry's book at the Congressional Library.

JAMES A. CAULFIELD.
Washington, March 14.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The old objection to Peter being the rock referred to in the Gospel, and that the Pope of Rome is not his true successor, has been directed against the church for centuries.

The passage taken from Scripture is as follows (St. Matt. Chap. XVI. Ver. 18): "And I say to thee that thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

Between 300 and 400 million people in the world today believe that Christ meant just what he said, that St. Peter was the rock on which the church was to be built.

Furthermore, the greatest minds of religion interpret this passage as signifying that Peter is the rock, and the Pope is the successor to Peter invested with the same authority. (Just to mention a few: St. Thomas Aquinas, St. Augustine, St. Benedict and St. Ignatius.)

There are thousands who have died for that belief. The opinion of the old and ancient church is worthy of consideration by humanity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to express my gratitude and appreciation for your editorial in The Post of March 3, on the election to the Papacy of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli.

Although I have not been in entire agreement with your editorials of the past few months, I must say that the editorial "Upon This Rock" combined with the conduct of your paper since the death of Pius XI, of happy memory, has done much to rectify past errors, if such they were.

Let me thank you again and commend you for your interpretation of the event, particularly as expressed in the last paragraph.

Cigarette Taxes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From the headlines in this morning's newspapers one would gather that having profited by using the tobacco companies as the collectors of billions from the people for the Government a move is now on foot to shake down their collectors.

The tobacco companies after buying the growers' crops process them and store them for three years and produce cigarettes for 2.38 cents per pack.

The Federal Government then takes 6 cents per pack; wholesaler and retailer divide 1.62 cents; the people pay 10 cents. Just who is controlling the price, controlling the market and creating a No. 1 economic problem in this Nation? Who has forced up the price paid by the consumer, with the resulting decrease in the demand for the farmers' crops?

The monopoly that needs to be investigated appears to be the extravagant and wasteful Government.

Drinking Among Minors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In connection with the current news stories to the effect that "there are over 1,600 children arrested for drunkenness in Washington."

The report of the A. B. C. Board of February 20, 1939, indicates a total of 1,664 "minors" for the five years since that board was instituted.

These "minors" include persons between the ages of 17 and 21, according to that report. The same report does not indicate how many were nearer to 21 than to 17 years old. Also, the annual arrests were cut from 506 in 1934 to 238 in 1938.

If statistics are to be invoked for purposes of argument, would it not be more fair to interpret the word "children" in such a way that we do not see small girls and boys rolling in the gutters, as it were, when we read them? Would it not be more fair to examine all the figures? And, finally, just how old is a "child?"

Francis Scott Key House

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The restoration of the old Chesapeake & Ohio Canal will add greatly to the picturesque charm as well as the recreational facilities of Washington.

In connection with this work may I suggest that the National Parks Service might very suitably include the restoration also of the historic Francis Scott Key house, which borders the canal near the Washington end.

The rock-ribbed lower stories of this structure are still intact and undoubtedly antiquarians could furnish the necessary drawings for the reproduction of the rest of the former dwelling.

This would make a logical terminal building for the canal, to be used as a historical museum such as has been established in Williamsburg, which would add greatly to the interest of the project.

Tourists go by increasing thousands every month of the year to visit the restored buildings of Williamsburg and to other communities in which they can find tangible links with the past, to make our history real.

Washington has been deplorably slow to realize the intrinsic value of the city as a whole, as well as the sentimental appeal of historic dwellings. Thanks to the vision of Representative Edith Rogers a bill has recently been introduced in Congress to preserve the Stephen Decatur house on Lafayette Square.

It is to be earnestly hoped that the possibilities of the Francis Scott Key house will not be overlooked.

The Post Impressionist

In Praise Of Disorder

BECAUSE IT IS EASIER to get along where everything has a place and is in its place, and less attention and adaptability are needed when everything goes according to plan, old wives' tales and modern propaganda agree in praise of order and system. So that some persons consider it a compliment to say of a woman that she is "as neat as a pin," or of a man that he "is as regular as clockwork."

We smile with disdain at a person who keeps the place about him in confusion and disorder, so that he never knows where to find anything; and despise a person who finishes one task and has to look about in a vague and puzzled way for the next thing to do. Homes, offices, studies and even playrooms, that exhibit such a state of affairs and mode of action, are taken to indicate not only confusion of mind but absence of it.

So far as I know, no one has ever self-consciously challenged this point of view, with the exceptions of Eve and William James. Eve depended on action to show her opinion of what seems to me, also, an eminently fallacious doctrine—the doctrine, that is, that perfect order is good and, therefore, desirable. And in doing so she set the style for all her school, none of whom, except the aforesaid James, and myself, has attempted to say anything definite on the subject.

Such silent action has been, perhaps, the better part of valor. For even Eve, coming on the scene as early as she did, was a little impressed with the idea of order. Otherwise she might have tried to defend her disorder in eating the apple, on the ground that it was pleasant to the taste, and knowledge of good and evil necessary to wisdom. Instead she said simply, "The serpent beguiled me, and I did eat." She refrained from comment on the subtlety of the serpent—that is, on his nice discrimination and discernment.

William James, the wise observer and philosopher, once found a place where there seemed to be no disorder—nothing unexpected or in the slightest degree iniquitous—and he experienced a feeling of malaise and dissatisfaction that he later recorded in one of his books. This happened on the occasion of his visit to Chautauqua, N. Y., that home of culture and virtue where everything goes according to an exact order and happens exactly at a planned time. James had not been there very long before he missed a certain tang and zest, and he got away as quickly as he could.

Thus in words and deed he demonstrated that there is a great deal more to be said for disorder than for the thing of which it is supposed to be the opposite.

I say "supposed" to be the opposite, because actually order is merely the absence of disorder. The positive, tangible, perceptible, and forceful thing is disorder. Order is a negative thing—just as death is the absence of life. When everything is in perfect order and nothing can happen that is unexpected, we are in a state of death. For it is only of the dead that we can say what they will do next.

Uncertainty about what will come next is, on the other hand, the essence of disorder; and the thrill and interest in what he will do next explains the charm of the disorderly man or woman. If disorderly persons never know exactly where they are, neither do you, and you keep your attention on them in order to find out. Christopher Columbus was a man like that. He was so sublimely in love with disorder that he turned topsy-turvy the most firmly held notions of his day. And he proceeded so far from a completely thought-out plan of action that when he set out for the East Indies he never reached them. Instead of that he discovered America.

A couple of centuries later there grew up a whole nation of disorderly men. Some dumped tea all over Boston Harbor. Others started to mess up the British army. In the end they brought into existence the United States of America. And here an inalienable right to disorder is the proudest possession of every free-born citizen. Moreover, every American is free-born, as a result of a state of disorder beginning in 1861.

The idea of disorder, and the advantages of it, is so tremendous that in a limited space you have merely introduced it before you have to abandon it. There isn't enough disorder on a printed page, in spite of the best efforts of compositors and proofreaders, to permit more than hinting at its merits. You are too confined by printers' rules, and the make-up man has in his soul too much of the uncompromising regard for order that characterizes the ruler of a totalitarian state. He allows you just so much margin, and you have to keep within it. Like Hitler, or Mussolini, or Stalin. EUGENE PHARO.

"What of the Aftermath?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the Marian Anderson episode is about over, what of the aftermath? Our people cannot thoughtfully or truthfully say it was a victory for Miss Anderson, her supporters, her committee or friends.

If the civic league and other organizations wish to prove their ability to win victories, let us turn our attention on the thousands of our poor helpless people who are losing their jobs. We could miss the pleasure or even the value of Miss Anderson's recital, April 19, with very little loss to anybody, even Miss Anderson. But can we afford to pay but passive attention to the thousands of our people having their jobs taken from them and given to others? This is a matter that should engage the attention of not only those who threw their very welcome strength and influence to win for Miss Anderson but also of those who wish to check a rising tide of crime.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

RECENT discussion of unsuspected horrors which sometimes lurk in the food that Americans buy in cartons and cans, such as mouse hairs on nickel candy bars and weevil wings in flour, prompted me to examine again one of those fright-books by which it is made to appear that the only way to escape poisoning is to live under glass in a hospital from the cradle to the grave.

One warning in this alarming work had to do with a famous brand of tooth paste. This paste, it was said, contained poison, and during the war a German officer committed suicide by consuming a tube of it. This caused me to shudder, because it happens that I use this very tooth paste; but after a time I pulled myself together, reflecting that, after all, I have no intention of spreading it on my bread, and if 20 years' use of this paste in the prescribed manner has not been fatal the danger is nothing to worry about.

The same feeling of calm courage possessed me after reading of the foul treachery of the man who sold adulterated ginger extract, causing a plague of paralysis, known as jake-leg, in Kansas. Not even during prohibition, which was when this evil deed was done, did I use ginger extract for beverage purposes, and there was no assertion that a minute quantity which is all that anyone would normally consume at once, would cause inconvenience.

Dry Era Boosted Our Resistance

MOREOVER, it may be remembered that during prohibition not only the bootlegger but the United States Government itself poisoned the scofflaws, and that many of us consumed hootch which we had reason to believe was dangerously impure. Probably that experience has increased our resistance to warning outcries, for survivors of the long rebellion must feel that they were not born to die of poison.

The same work reports in a tone of startled indignation that the bright red hamburger which people buy at many roadside gas-and-lunch stations is artifically colored with a substance which wars against health and often is overripe. That, however, is not news, and wasn't news even when the book was published.

People have been knowing all this for years and years, and yet the hamburger curve in this country continues to rise like a high foul, and the health services have yet to report a fatal epidemic of hamburger poisoning. I have known individuals to feel uneasy at baseball and football games after eating one or more hamburgers on the way up, but even though they were made of tainted meat which was not fresh the hamburgers, of themselves, could not have been convicted.

That Bum Liquor Was Real Cause

THE NAKED RYE, scotch or gin which the victims consumed out of the bottle must have been named co-defendant. Even so, I never knew of anyone dying of this trouble. Some few passed out, but popular opinion had it that they were plastered, and any plea that they were overcome by hamburgers would have been derided.

People in the circle of my acquaintance use in discreet quantities practically all the well-known brands of tooth paste, shaving soap, rouge, powder, breakfast food, canned stuff, ham and flour; and although at my age one learns to expect occasional gaps in the ranks, no friend's death has been certified as due to such use.

They are, in the main, high-strung, high-tension people, and the wear and tear is such, so the doctors say, that the years after 40 are dangerous years and, in some cases, borrowed time. Those who have dropped out were victims of heart trouble, operations and other normal causes, even after prohibition, during which most of them did their b't for repeal.

Many A Profit Before Final Use

I AM NOT surprised to learn that some patent preparations cost much less to produce than the customer pays for them, nor does this news arouse resentment. In the zone between the actual cost or ingredients and mixing and the purchase over the counter many citizens take each a little toll in the way of wages or dividends on their invested savings so that they in turn may buy the services or the goods of those who pay the marked-up price for patent wares.

This being undoubtedly so, it is plain that if the distributors, middlemen and investors were squeezed out of the play and the goods sold direct, with only a small profit to the maker, the unemployment and relief problems would be unmanageable. Many of those who are consumers at the so-called high prices today would not be in the market as consumers at all.

It boils down to the fact that under our system many of us merely go through more or less laborious but unnecessary motions to justify our existence.

As for the poison in the tooth paste, if we just bear in mind that tooth paste isn't jam, everything should be O. K.

Japan Faces A Crisis

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

The Costs Of War Pile Up

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

JAPAN today faces her gravest crisis since Commodore Matthew Perry, U. S. N., dealt a shattering blow to her feudal institutions in the hot, unhappy summer of 1853.

The statement may savor of a paradox. The Japanese fighting services have scored signal victories in almost every major battle of the past 18 months. The Nipponese army claims control over nine of China's most prosperous provinces, populated by 100,000,000 people.

Japanese airplanes cast their ominous shadows over entire east Asia. Japanese military and political advisers pull strings behind half a dozen puppet regimes. Great Nipponese monopolies have clamped a strangle hold on the Chinese market, keeping out all rivals by a wide variety of nefarious but highly effective restrictions.

But all these are superficial features of a very grim picture. Consider the facts:

When the Japanese troops invaded north China in the summer of 1937, Nipponese currency was backed by 49 per cent of gold. In December last the coverage fell to 17 per cent.

JAPANESE export trade, which before the war fed Japan's hungry mouths and kept her ever-growing industries busy 24 hours a day, has fallen by 13 per cent in the last 12 months. Especially hard hit was the textile industry, which once formed the mainstay of Japan's export trade.

Fundamentally more significant than a Mr. Suzuki's or a Mr. Takahashi's tightened belt is the concentration of new capital in heavy industry or, in other words, in enterprises manufacturing arms, locomotives and ships.

The shifting of funds is artificially stimulated by the army through restrictions on nonmilitary industries and by tempting the super-trusts with the bait of large and profitable orders. In its haste to be prepared for the next war, presumably with Russia, the army, however, shuts its eyes to the crisis which must inevitably follow the re-establishment, of peace and the closure of the market for munitions and naval transports.

Government Debt Still Going Up

GOVERNMENT indebtedness also continues to soar. On January 20, 1936, the bonded debt stood at 9,976,000,000 yen. On January 1 of the current year the debt had already reached 16,222,000,000 yen and continued to grow like a snowball.

But it is in China herself, where the Japanese war machine has been consistently victorious, that Japan faces her greatest difficulties. Until the fall of Hankow and Canton late last October, the Japanese were on the offensive. Tokyo's aim was to hammer the Chinese army into submission to its sweeping demands.

Today, however, the initiative has passed into Chinese hands. The invader can no longer use his warships in the treacherous rapids of the upper Yangtze, nor can his mechanized units advance in the mountains of the west and the southwest.

The Japanese have obviously reached the outward brim of the area in which their mechanical superiority made progress relatively easy. To invade Szechwan, Kwangsi or Kweichow, the Japanese must resort to the type of primitive warfare in which the Chinese excel. Such a costly adventure Tokyo is obviously not prepared to undertake.

THE JAPANESE army's signal failure in Shansi, where after 12 months of ruthless campaigning the Japanese find themselves in control of a few towns, surrounded by thousands of guerrillas, is not conducive to similar ventures elsewhere.

Japan's goals today are threefold: to defend the occupied areas from attacks beyond the outward brim; to root out guerrillas; and, finally, to organize a puppet government capable both of inspiring popular confidence and of initiating an extensive program of rehabilitation.

The most important—and the most unattainable—of these is the last. During the last 18 months, the Japanese army has amply demonstrated its high quality as a fighting machine. But in a thousand and one different ways it has also shown an amazing ineptitude in dealing with problems which could not be settled by the use of bayonet.

The problem of the pacification of the occupied area is mainly economic and physiological. The 100,000,000 people in the invaded territory must be given food, order and a conviction that the new puppet regime is an administration by the Chinese for the Chinese.

Mass Terrorism Is Employed As Weapon

THE JAPANESE generals, as if completely unaware of the vast changes wrought in the Chinese national psychology in the past decade, have resorted to two moss-covered methods of dealing with Chinese problems — wholesale bribery and mass terrorism.

The army's special service section, which through the newly established China Affairs Board in Tokyo, controls the destinies of the occupied areas, has hired the dregs of the Chinese political world to masquerade as the nation's independent government.

To insure enthusiastic public support for these hirelings, the army has resorted to strong-arm action. The net result of the army's policy thus far has been a multitude of "independent" governments, "Reformed," "Provisional" and "Autonomous," scores of bombed towns and villages, and a consequent re-vitalization of guerrilla warfare.

The economic rehabilitation of the war-swept areas has further been hindered by Tokyo's closure of the "Open Door." The Japanese government finds itself within a vicious circle. To gain an important bargaining point in the post-bellum bickering with foreign powers, Tokyo desires to clamp a strangle-hold on foreign business.

But with the hinterland cleared of their competitors, the Japanese find themselves financially unable to launch the vast schemes of rehabilitation which alone can make the China adventure a profitable business. And without reconstruction there cannot be peace and order, and thus, there can be no question of conferences with the powers.

That Tokyo realizes the predicament in which the "holy crusade" in China has placed it is obvious. Thus far, national morale has been kept up by the capture of major cities in this country and the undying hope that with the fall of each center the Chinese resistance would collapse. The war, however, has now entered the stage in which no new spectacular victories can be expected.

This explains the new outpouring of propaganda designed to show that Japan is not fighting China alone but the whole world with the exception of Nippon's faithful allies along the Fascist axis. The assumption is that when a Japanese man-in-the-street realizes that he is fighting against all the "anti-Japanese powers" of the world, he will tighten his belt and agree to further sacrifices.

But the "one-against-the-world" appeal is not likely to exercise its magic hold on the public mind very long. New methods to bolster morale will be required before the summer is over, and it is then that the Japanese army may decide to launch another "holy crusade" in Siberia.

Bill Would Require Tests of Marriage Applicants Here

A bill requiring all marriage applicants to undergo a physical examination is being prepared by Health Officer George C. Ruhland, it was revealed yesterday.

The local bill will make it compulsory that all prospective brides and bridegrooms submit to a blood test as well as all standard tests to detect communicable diseases.

Persons having a positive Wasserman but who are not capable of transmitting syphilis would not be denied the right to marry, it is understood.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Problem Of All The Problems

THERE IS no one among us, I should suppose, who would even pretend that he is able to keep in touch with, let us say, the six main questions in domestic affairs which are now being actively discussed. But it might be useful to make a list of these questions and then to look at them, not separately, but as a whole.

There is the question of Federal spending, with one school arguing that it must continue in order to sustain recovery, and the other arguing that the spending prevents recovery by terrifying the private investor. There is the question of Federal taxation, with one school arguing that taxes should be reduced in order to improve the inducement to seek profits, the other arguing that taxes should be maintained in order to redistribute purchasing power to the mass of the people, who will use it to buy goods.

There is the question of peace between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O., desired by some in order to strengthen the bargaining power of labor by uniting the unions, by others to reduce the labor disputes caused by the effort of rival unions to outbid each other in enrolling members. There is the question of monopolistic practice in industry, opposed by some because it raises prices, and, therefore, reduces production, defended by others because it protects many plants which could not operate and give employment if they had to meet competitive and, therefore, lower prices. There is the question of the agricultural surpluses, which some wish to get rid of by letting farm prices fall and others wish to manage by subsidizing the limitation of production.

Interstate Tariff Walls Being Raised

And then there is the question which is just now beginning to be generally appreciated, of the amazing growth of barriers to trade inside the United States, the growth of what are in effect internal tariffs, erected by the several States against the commerce and the labor of other States.

Here we have six highly-controversial subjects: Spending, taxes, unions, industrial monopolies, farm surpluses, and internal protectionism. There are men who are specialists in each of them. There are concerned with each of these subjects persuasive advocates of opposing vested interests. About each of these questions there exists a mass of data and technical theory which few men hope to master separately, and no man has mastered as a whole. Yet in the end all these questions converge for decision upon the President, the Congress, the editors of newspapers, and the citizen, and some sort of intelligible attitude toward all these questions is necessary.

Now I have a notion that these questions are aspects of a single and a general question, that only by seeing them in that perspective can they be truly understood, and that only by understanding them as a whole does it become possible to see the direction in which effective answers are to be found.

These questions arise, I suggest, out of the fact that for more than 20 years, but particularly since 1929, we have been living in a frozen economy. We have been living in a world where economic opportunity is not expanding to keep pace with the growth of the population, where, in fact, opportunity is contracting.

No doubt it is true that all the separate questions I have named have existed in the past. But what makes them acute and urgent in our time is the fact that economic opportunity is contracting. These separate problems are the result, it seems to me, of a general effort on the part of workers, businessmen, farmers and Government officials to respond to the feeling of all sorts of groups and interests that opportunity is scarce and must be jealously protected.

This is, it seems to me, the underlying cause of the controversy between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L. These two federations of unions are rivals because Mr. Green's unions have obtained protection for certain kinds of skilled labor which Mr. Lewis' unions threaten to weaken in their efforts to obtain protection for the great mass of unskilled labor. This is what divides the rival organizations. What might unite them is the desire to raise and maintain the level of industrial wages as a whole against the competition of the new industrial regions of the West and the South. This desire for protection is also, it may be noted in passing, the motive behind the Federal wages and hours legislation.

The monopolistic practices of industry, including the whole tendency toward the formation of cartels, either with government help, as under NRA, or by private agreement, is primarily due to the desire of existing producers to hold for themselves the opportunities of what seem to be limited markets. Because they feel that the opportunity to expand is limited, they seek to control the opportunities such as they are.

The measures dealing with agricultural surpluses arise out of the same condition, out of the belief that, though the peoples of the world are badly fed and badly clothed, the opportunity to sell them food and clothing is contracting. Therefore, it is necessary to contract the production of these goods.

Each Group Strives To Protect Self

The extraordinary growth of internal tariffs in the United States, with all manner of discriminatory taxes and regulations against interstate commerce, is due to the same fundamental cause. The local manufacturers, merchants, employes and farmers are striving to protect for themselves what they feel is a limited opportunity to make a living.

The fiscal problem of the Federal Government is, so to speak, an over-all attempt to provide relief against the consequences of the contracting economy, and also against the consequences of all the protectionist measures—by labor unions, business monopolies, farmers and State legislatures—which aggravate the disease they are intended to remedy. The Federal Government spends enormously for "relief," that is, to support the economic outcasts of the whole system, and it spends in order to "prime the pump," that is, in order to expand artificially an economy which is contracting.

Then, in order to finance the relief, it imposes taxes which suffocate enterprise and thus cause a still further contraction of the economy.

Process Becomes Vicious Cycle

The thing is a vicious spiral. The tendency toward contracting opportunities is met by protectionist measures, tariffs, monopolies, labor union wage rates, farm control, relief expenditures and high taxes. These protective measures in turn cause the economy to contract further.

The spiral can be broken only by a vivid understanding on the part of the people that the popular remedies not only do not cure but greatly aggravate the trouble. But this understanding would be much facilitated if the Federal Administration had the courage and the imagination to set in motion by bold tax reforms the dynamic force of private investment. That is the only force that can quickly create a feeling that opportunity is expanding. And in that atmosphere of expansion it will alone be possible to counteract the almost universal disposition toward protection, control, monopoly, provincialism and economic rigidity.

The Once Over

Elmer Discusses Cafe Society

"I am puzzled by this thing called cafe society," said Elmer Twitchell, the eminent philosopher, horse-radish fancier and gasoline station designer today. "And I am even more puzzled by the state of mind behind it and the general whoopla surrounding it.

"Columnists, photographers and press agents have been going into a lather over it for some time, and now even the movies are recognizing it. There has never been a time within my memory when the boys and girls didn't like a crack at cafe life, but it is only lately that they have seemed determined to make a career of it.

"In fact, it used to be the custom to minimize one's presence in saloons, however artistically decorated. Today we have people inhabiting 'em largely for the publicity involved.

"Americans always liked to go down to the saloon now and then, but they didn't used to boast about it, advertise it or dress for it. And they never carried their personal photographers along.

"I can think of nothing that would have startled a young couple of ten years ago more than to trek off to some barroom and discover that a dozen lads with flashlights had surrounded 'em.

"There used to be a certain satisfaction in eating and drinking in something approaching privacy, and neither of the functions was in any way associated with personal glorification or newspaper pictures.

"They tell me there are thousands of people today in this cafe society who cannot enjoy their lamb chop unless they are assured that the press arrangements have been completed. And I know from following the papers that there must be countless girls and boys who are miserable if they get drunk in public and the event is not recorded in the rotogravure sections.

"You can depress some of these cafe society folks for months by putting them at a side table where nobody will notice their table manners. And it must be pretty humiliating for the modern debutante to get as old as 18 years and never see a three-column picture of herself surrounded by cocktails, with all advertising arrangements well in hand.

"But I must have the wrong slant on the whole business, and so I will stop squawking. What I am afraid of, though, is a spread of the tendency to a point where a man won't feel like going to Mike's place for a seidel of beer unless he can be interviewed, photographed and patted on both cheeks in the process."

Wallace's New Plan

By Mark Sullivan

Will Deter Ambition

I HAVE READ, and re-read, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's new scheme for giving away food. It is very intricate. The official "hand-outs" given to the press to explain the plan contain 30 typewritten pages, some 7,000 words. Much of it is extremely complex. But I think I understand it. If I am wrong, I am sure some of Mr. Wallace's alert young publicity men will set me right.

I envisage a scene that can take place after the plan gets in operation. Imagine a man (or a woman, or a youth) who works at ordinary private employment—anyone, a farm hand, a clerk in a store, anybody. For a name, call him Mr. Private Worker.

Mr. Private Worker gets $16 a week. On Saturday night, he draws his pay. He goes to the grocery to buy food. The bill comes to $4. Mr. Private Worker reaches in his pocket, takes out four one-dollar bills, and pays for his groceries.

While Mr. Private Worker is waiting to have his parcel wrapped, he observes another customer who is standing by him. This customer, too, is buying food. He buys exactly the same food that Mr. Private Worker does, and the same quantity of it. But when this customer comes to pay the bill, he does a strange thing. He takes out of his pocket a little book containing blue stamps. From the book he detaches $4 worth of blue stamps. He hands these stamps to the grocer. The grocer takes the stamps, just the same as he takes the money. Apparently this customer uses blue stamps for money, and apparently it works.

Mr. Private Worker Gets No 'Free' Food

TO MR. PRIVATE Worker all this seems odd. He turns to the man with the blue stamps and says to him, "Say, buddy, how do you get those blue stamps you use for money?"

Mr. Private Worker finds out. He finds that the man with the blue stamps is a WPA worker.

Mr. Private Worker finds that the WPA worker gets exactly the same pay as himself, $16 a week. But the WPA worker gets something more. The WPA worker, just because he is a WPA worker, is given by the Government certain blue stamps with which he can buy food. These blue stamps are given to the WPA worker free. They are an addition to his pay. Nobody except WPA workers (and other persons on various kinds of relief) can get these stamps. Mr. Private Worker cannot get any blue stamps. Nobody else engaged in private employment can get any blue stamps.

Mr. Wallace's scheme comes down to this: If you are a WPA worker, Mr. Wallace makes you a present of blue stamps, in addition to your pay—blue stamps with which you can buy food. But if you are a private worker, at the same salary as the WPA worker, you get no blue stamps from Mr. Wallace nor from anyone else.

Just Which Is The 'Forgotten Man?'

MR. PRIVATE WORKER reflects on all this. He reflects a little bitterly. He has taken some pride in remaining a private worker. He has avoided going on WPA, or on any other form of relief. Now he wonders whether his holding onto a private job was worth while. Would he not be better off to quit his private job, and get an equivalent job on WPA? Clearly he would.

And observe the effect on the man already on WPA. He does not like to be on WPA; he would prefer to have a private job. He receives, from somewhere, an offer of a private job at the same salary as his WPA salary. He is inclined to take that private job. But he thinks of those blue stamps, and he sees he would be better off to stay on WPA.

It seems clear that this blue stamp system is a differential in favor of WPA workers, and against private workers getting the same pay. This brings us to that New Deal word "underprivileged." As between two persons, each getting the same salary, a WPA worker and a private worker, it is the private worker who is underprivileged.

At last, after all these years, we can finally identify that fellow who is called "the forgotten man." He is the man who stays on a private job, who avoids going on WPA. There are many millions of him. There are millions of men in private jobs who receive the same range of pay as WPA workers—the WPA range is from $36 a month to $90 a month. Every person who remains on a private job within that range of pay is under a handicap compared to WPA workers.

Plan Seems Deterrent To Man's Ambition

MR. WALLACE'S new plan seems like a deterrent to ambition. It is a strange philosophy. Something like it runs all through the New Deal.

At several places in the country, the Administration has built resettlement projects. At one of them, the cost is about $16,000 a dwelling. The real value is not that much—call the real value $8,000. For a house worth $8,000 the normal rent would be about $800 a year. But the Administration did not charge that. It charged from $216 to $492 a year, an average of $354. The difference between this and the normal rent is $446. That amount, $446 a year, is what was saved by anyone who rented a resettlement house. It is a gift, a subsidy, of $446 a year from the Government.

But there's a catch in it. You can rent one of those houses only provided your income is below $2,000 a year. If a man occupying one of those houses gets a raise in salary to $2,100 a year, he would say to his employer, "For heaven's sake, boss, don't promote me—I'll have to move out of my Government house and pay more rent for another house than my raise in salary amounts to."

It's a mad world, my buddies.

The People Booed

Hitler Acquires 10,000,000 Slavs

MARCH 15, 1939, may go down in history as one of the most important dates in the history of our troubled times, but for a reason quite different than that which appears on the surface.

March 15 was the day of Czecho-Slovakia's final collapse and of Hitler's latest triumph. It saw the tragic extinction of what was left of the war-born republic created by Masaryk and Benes. It saw German troops taking possession of Prague and Hitler establishing himself in the Hradcany, the castle on the heights overlooking that ancient city, the home of Bohemian kings and Czecho-Slovak presidents. And it saw the financially crippled Third Reich in a position to lay its hands on the $90,000,000 in gold and the $30,000,000 in foreign exchange that had served as coverage for Czecho-Slovak currency, as well as an unknown but probably considerable additional sum in the hands of private banks and private individuals.

But these do not constitute the most important aspect of this week's sudden and startling develoment in central Europe. Czecho-Slovakia was doomed at Munich five and a half months ago. From then on Czecho-Slovakia lived only by sufferance of its powerful neighbor to the north. Hitler in Berlin was as powerful a factor in Czech and Slovak affairs as Hitler in the Hradcany can be. And the gold reserve now within reach of the Reichsbank is not inexhaustible.

THE MOST IMPORTANT fact regarding March 15, 1939, is that on that day Hitler acquired 10,000,000 Slavs. He thus set his foot on a path which sooner or later may lead to disaster. The Third Reich's present hour of triumph may mark the beginning of its doom.

It is enormously symptomatic that the German troops which marched into Prague were not received with cheers and garlands and heils as they were in the Rhineland in 1936 and in Austria and the Sudetenland in 1938. They were greeted with boos and catcalls and hisses. For this time no amount of intensive propaganda and faked history could make the marching troops appear as emancipators. Their role was that of conquerors and that role they did not and could not disguise.

Will Find Slavs More Difficult To Digest

HITLER HAS had no easy time assimilating the Austrians. The intoxication of those first hours after Anschluss have largely disappeared even in quarters where it was most intense. Thus it is that the Gestapo has had to work overtime and the concentration camps have been filled to bursting in the months since Schuschnigg's regime gave up the ghost. And Austrians, after all, speak German and enjoy a community of culture with their fellow Teutons of the north.

Now Hitler has taken upon himself the task of ruling 10,000,000 or 11,000,000 Slavs as well. That task broke the back of the Hapsburg monarchy. It may break the back of the Third Reich.

Nor is it likely that Hitler will stop with the annexation of Bohemia and Moravia any more than he stopped with the annexation of Austria and the annexation of the Sudetenland. For he cannot stop. The inner compulsions of his regime force him to go on and on. Yesterday it was Austria, today Bohemia, tomorrow it will be something else. But that something else, whatever it may be, must in the nature of things consist of territory populated not by Germans but by Magyars, Poles, Rumanians, Swiss, Ukrainians, Danes or Lithuanians. From now on the more Germany expands, the larger the unassimilable elements in Germany are certain to become, the more difficult the task of governing. And if the Third Reich does not expand it must explode.

Financial Motive Played Large Part

THE QUESTION must inevitably arise as to why Hitler suddenly abandoned the theory of a racial state toward whose establishment he had been directing Germany's enemies and took an irrevocable step in the direction of transforming Germany into something resembling the old Hapsburg empire.

From many points of view he had little to gain, much to lose by taking this step. The Czech-Slovakia that came into being after Munich was a state which perforce had to do the Fuehrer's bidding. It had no foreign policy that could in any sense be regarded as unfriendly to the Reich. Its economy was at the mercy of Germany. Even its social institutions, rapidly in Slovakia, more slowly in Bohemia-Moravia, were being made over in the Nazi image.

It is possible that the financial factor was paramount in Hitler's decision.

If words have any meaning, Germany today is a bankrupt state. Its top-heavy economy cannot survive unless new sources of revenue and new sources of foreign exchange can be called. An unheard-of portion of the national income is, and for years has been, diverted to unproductive activities. There has been accumulating evidence in recent months that the machinery is breaking down, the point of greatest strain being in the field of foreign trade. Not even the addition of Austria's large gold reserve had helped for any great length of time.

The addition of Czecho-Slovakia's gold reserve, her foreign exchange her movable wealth, may ease the situation in the Third Reich for a brief while. But the pressures within Germany have been such that even a brief respite is, regardless of ultimate consequences, better than none.

ANYWAY, Germany has now acquired 10,000,000 Slavs. Some of them may be willing to do the Fuehrer's bidding. The rest may be compelled to. But the overwhelming majority, regardless of their outward compliance, will constitute a hard, indigestible and poisonous element in Germany's body politic and economy.

Bismarck could have done what Hitler did. After Sadowa, there were many in Germany who insisted that Germany annex Austrian territory. But Bismarck refused. He wanted to keep Germany German. So he treated defeated Austria with magnanimity and restraint. Hitler has not followed that example. And the verdict of history may be that on March 15, 1939, he overreached himself; that drunk with a succession of easy triumphs he did not know how or when to stop.

On that day, for the first time, the Fuehrer was booed.

Darrow, 80, Stages Comeback As Congressional 'Freshman'

REPRESENTATIVE GEORGE P. DARROW

[This is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

At 80, an age far oftener associated with easy slippers and lassitude than with political campaigning and oratorical duels, Representative George Potter Darrow, of Pennsylvania, is starting a brand new Congressional career.

Men older than he have served in Congress but no parallel can be recalled to his case, that of a man who held a seat in the House for 22 consecutive years and then was defeated, only to make a stirring comeback two years later at the age of 79 and vanquish the man who had displaced him.

Today Mr. Darrow is a House "freshman" all over again, just as he was in 1915 when he first came to Congress. Even at that time he was no youngster, being old enough to be the father of some of his colleagues. That would make him, now, a possible great-grandfather—as far as years are concerned—of such fellow members as 29-year-old Boren, of Oklahoma, yet in mental age and outlook the gentleman from Seventh Pennsylvania yields to none.

Soft Spoken and Unassuming

One with such energy and determination might be expected to be a self-asserting, forward individual with a voice that is in frequent use. To the contrary, Mr. Darrow is a word economizer, soft spoken and unassuming. He is a conservative Republican, wears a pince nez and spats and has been a thirty-third degree Mason for nearly a quarter century.

When the Republicans were in control between 1921 and 1923, Mr. Darrow was for several years ranking member of the House Naval Affairs Committee. At the time of his defeat in 1938 he was dean of the Pennsylvania delegation and previously had served as chairman of the very important patronage committee and as a member of the steering committee.

"No one dreamed I would be beaten in 1936," he says, but just the same Ira W. Drew, the Democratic challenger who had Townsendite and Coughlinite support, turned the trick. Last fall, however, the comeback candidate turned the tables by a majority of 27,000 votes.

Starting over again, Representative Darrow again finds himself on the Naval Affairs Committee. He has always been a staunch Navy supporter. Early in the Roosevelt Administration he led the fight for funds to build the Philadelphia Naval Hospital. When it appeared the construction contract might be canceled, as an economy measure, Mr. Darrow strove mightily to avert such action and was successful. The hospital has been in operation several years.

Fate Plays Ironic Jest

Ironically enough, the Congressman from Germantown was a patient in the hospital he helped build when he was sworn into office last January. His arduous campaign for election, during which he made many speeches and kept late hours, put him in the hospital for eight weeks. He emerged in late January and came here to take his seat.

Still a trifle shaky from the siege of illness, Mr. Darrow, nevertheless, rarely misses a session, has delivered several speeches and works diligently at his office desk. One of his latest utterances on the House floor was a warning against fortification of Guam.

This summer, after adjournment, Representative and Mrs. Darrow will go to their seashore house in New London, Conn., the town of his birth, and he will resume work in his huge rock garden.

"And, the fates agreeable, I'll be running for re-election in 1940," says the 80-year-old freshman from Germantown.

Teachers' Pay Boost Urged In Md. House

400 P.-T. A. Leaders And Educators Plead For $1,550-$1,800 Maximum Scale

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 15.—A general salary increase for Maryland school teachers was urged upon the State Legislature today by 400 teachers, educators and parent-teacher association leaders who said "trifling" tax increases would cover the boost.

Speakers before the House Ways and Means Committee, which has the act under consideration, laid down two basic arguments for the salary increases.

Teachers are now paid a bare existence scale and live in a "genteel, respectable poverty," they declared, and neighbor States who admire the standards Maryland teachers must attain in order to get degrees employ them at higher salaries.

Shore Group Opposed

At a hearing across the Statehouse before the Senate finance committee, however, county commissioners from the Eastern Shore said they were opposed to the increases unless the State agrees to pay a part of the cost.

While a change in classifications in the new salary scale made a comparison difficult with present pay rates, it was pointed out before the House committee that elementary teachers now draw a maximum of $1,150 after eight years' service, and the new scale would go to $1,550 for teachers without college degrees and $1,800 for those having degrees.

Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools, appeared before the committee to explain the classification changes.

Eugene Pruitt, Frederick County, and Ben Willis, Queen Annes County, spoke for the school superintendents, and declared that the present scale must be altered immediately or Maryland school standards will be undermined.

Big Turnover Cited

They pointed to a 27 per cent turnover in Prince Georges County schools as evidence that Maryland teachers are going to other fields.

E. W. Broome, superintendent of Montgomery County schools; Mrs. G. R. Clements, of Annapolis, representing the State Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Denmead Kolb, Wicomico County delegate, made further speeches supporting the measure.

They said that even if the counties bore all the cost, necessary tax increases would be small. They suggested that the 47-cent State equalization point be increased to 51 cents to provide part of the increase.

The higher salaries will cost $264,249 in 1940 and $291,424 in 1841.

The bill was introduced by Delegate John S. White (Democrat), Prince Georges, majority floor leader.

Bill Would Lure D. C. Lenders Back

Small loan operators, now hovering just outside the District line, would be lured back into the Capital with a legal interest rat of 2½ per cent under provisions of a bill introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma.

Drafted by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal upon direction of the District Committee, the measure is designed both to "put teeth" into the present law and to bring the business back into the District.

The measure proposes to set up an office of supervisor of loan agencies, whose job would not come under civil service. Small loan operators would be required to pay $1,000 license fees, maintain a cash capital of $25,000, and keep a $2,000 bond at the supervisor's office.

Vocational Study Related to P.-T. A.

Vocational education was discussed last night before the Montgomery-Blair Parent-Teachers Association by Harold A. Jager, chief of the division of vocational education in the office of education, and Floyd Cromwell, Maryland State director of vocational education. The drganization also recommended appointment of either Stephen James, of Linden, or William A. Reynolds, of Woodside, to the Montgomery County Board of Education.

4 Children Flee Burning Home

Four children were endangered late yesterday when fire broke out in the dwelling of Eva M. Harley, colored, of 4606 Kane place northeast. The mother arrived from work shortly before 6 o'clock to find her house in flames, the children huddled in front. The oldest child suffered burns on the hand attempting to combat the flames, the mother said.

Nichols Doubts Validity of 'Bloc' Speakers

Declares They Take Upon Themselves to Represent Residents

The validity of claims of various organizations that they speak for large blocs of District residents was challenged yesterday by Chairman Nichols, of the House subcommittee on fiscal affairs, as hearings continued on the local tax bill.

Questioning officials of the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation, Nichols said he was confused frequently by the claims of persons appearing before Congressional committees that they represented large groups of voteless Washington residents.

"They come here saying they speak for several thousand members of an organization," he said, "and we come to find out that most of the members didn't know what was going on."

Sales Tax Assailed

The sub-committee heard spokesmen for the committee assail the sales tax proposal in the report of the Citizens Advisory Tax Committee and Paul H. Nystrom, a Columbia University professor speaking for the Limited Price Variety Stores Association, indorse it.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., and Arthur Bernstein appeared for the citizens' committee.

They contended, in brief, that there is no justification for the imposition of a sales tax on District residents, that a graduated personal income tax reaching down to income levels of $5,000 be substituted, and that the proposed 5 per cent corporation tax be enacted.

Exemption Acceptable

Nystrom said that the proposed reduction in the sales tax exemption from 25 to 13 cents was acceptable to the small price stores as it would enable them to recover 90 per cent of the sales tax from the consumers.

Woman Fights Off Girl Cutpurse in Foray on the Mall

An 18-year-old girl with long blonde hair yesterday afternoon tried to snatch the purse from a woman on the Mall at Thirteenth street, but after a brief struggle was frightened away by a passer-by, and escaped in a car held waiting by a youth of about her own age.

Described as a "typical flapper," she tried to snatch the purse of Mrs. Margaret C. Patten, 36, of 2325 Fifteenth street northwest. Gardeners in the Agriculture Department greenhouses heard Mrs. Patten's screams, and ran to her aid.

The girl dashed across the street, got into a taxicab and out the other side, then stepped into the large black sedan her friend had waiting for her. They drove to the Washington Monument and parked there a few minutes, while Mrs. Patten stood looking on.

When Mrs. Patten herself finally gave chase in another car, she was stopped by a traffic light and forced to wait helplessly while the would-be purse snatcher escaped.

Vansville Citizens Seek New School

Efforts to acquire $60,000 for a new elementary school building were renewed last night by the Vansville District Citizens Association, meeting at the Beltsville School.

A committee will be appointed soon, it was announced, to work with the Parent-Teachers Association in an effort to get the county commissioners to approve a bond issue to raise the funds. The association also asked that improvements be made to Montgomery avenue between the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and Prince Georges avenue and to Powder Mill road between Riggs road and Prince Georges avenue.

O'Conor Edict Spurs Assembly, Jammed With 800 Measures

House and Senate Leaders Act to Clear Legislative Blockade After Governor's Ultimatum of 'Get to Work'

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., March 15.—With a "get-to-work" edict from Gov. O'Conor, Maryland's legislators today buckled down to the task of clearing away approximately 800 bills jammed in committees.

The Governor issued his ultimatum to a group of seven leadership senators and delegates, and the House took it to heart by limiting its afternoon session to six minutes so that the ways and means committee could work on bills in its files.

The Senate immediately picked up speed by struggling through 31 reports handed down by its committees. Forty-five bills were placed on the third reading and final passage file for action later in the day.

Seven Leaders Confer

The seven leaders summoned by Gov. O'Conor came out of the closed session with declarations that the Legislature "will go into high gear now."

Senator Roe announced that his finance committee, the most important in the upper house, will cut short its sessions and limit its hearings so members can be free to attend meeting of other committees to which they belong.

More than 850 bills await final action, against the 110 which have been finally adopted by both houses.

Between 35 and 40 new bills have been going into the hopper daily during the past two weeks, and there was some indication that the pace will accelerate as the deadline for new legislation nears. Ten days remain before the files are closed. The session has 20 more days to run before its close, April 4.

1,200 Bills Expected

At least 200 additional measures already have been ordered prepared, and Dr. Horace Flack, head of the department of legislative reference, estimated a record total of 1,200 would be introduced.

Two items on the comic side broke the strain of routine.

The House Committee on Internal Improvements, shown by legislative records to have held no meetings and considered no bills for over 25 years, suddenly was brought to life, when Speaker Conlon referred to it a measure for mosquito control.

Senator Joseph A. Wilmer, Charles County Republican, who has served three terms without introducing a single new law, sent in a bill which would increase the salaries of Charles County commissioners from $200 to $400 a year.

Even Wilmer couldn't explain it. "I just ran wild," he confessed.

Routine proceedings of the Legislature today included:

SENATE

Nolan Says Crime Can Be Traced to Environment

Ninety per cent of crime in the District can be traced to unfavorable childhood environment, Dr. James A. Nolan, director of the Criminal Justice Association, last night told members of the Washington chapter of the American Business Club, meeting at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club.

Dr. Nolan praised the "Big Brother" movement inaugurated by the club as an aid to the Metropolitan Police in operation of their boys' clubs. I. L. Camp, jr., of the Wardman Park Hotel, was announced as winner of an automobile award in a benefit to aid the "Big Brother" program.

Three criminal courts should be open in the District at all times, he recommended.

Dr. Chappel Warns 500 of Useless Worry

Mt. Vernon Place Parishioners Hear Former Pastor

More than 500 parishioners of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, turned out last night to hear their former pastor, Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, sound a warning against the "dangers of useless worry."

Now of Oklahoma City, Dr. Chappell launched a nine-day "preaching mission," in the marble edifice erected at Ninth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest while he was pastor, 1917-24.

"Worry is the sand and grit that gets into the bearings of life and wears them out," said Dr. Chappell.

"You'll never quit worrying when you get into an ideal situation," he insisted, "because there are no ideal situations, and if there were, you'd probably 'mess them up.'"

One of his suggestions for preventing worry was "to redirect one's thinking."

"Don't be a self-appointed inspector of gutters, street sewers and bunions," he advised.

Music, over which Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, presided, was furnished by the Mount Vernon Place choir, directed by Deane Shure.

Dr. Chappell speaks daily, Saturdays excepted, at noon and 8 p. m. He also speaks Sundays at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Md. Attacks Soil Erosion On 3 Fronts

First District Formed In Kent; Frederick, Baltimore Areas to Create Systems

By the Associated Press.

College Park, Md., March 15.—The problem of soil erosion, a menace to the livelihood of farmers throughout the Nation, is being attacked in three Maryland sections under provisions of a 1937 legislative act.

Developments in the campaign were disclosed today by Dr. T. B. Symons, of the University of Maryland extension service and chairman of the Maryland State soil conservation committee. The legislative act provided for the creation of a State committee and specified proceedure in organizing conservation districts whereby farmers might deal with their individual erosion problems.

Kent in Operation

Kent County, Frederick County and Harford-Baltimore counties will have districts under plans discussed with the State committee, Dr. Symons said.

The Kent County district, now in operation, was the first created under the act. In Frederick County, farmers of the Catoctin Creek watershed have petitioned for the establishment of a district comprising approximately 93,500 acres.

Commonly known as the Middletown Valley, it would be designated the Catoctin soil conservation district under the new plan.

The third area to submit a petition is the largest yet proposed and covers 667,500 acres in Baltimore and Harford counties. It is known as the Gunpowder Falls-Deer Creek soil conservation district.

Will Set Hearings

Following the acceptance of petitions from the farmers of these areas, the State committee will set dates for hearings and later, referenda will be held in which all farmers affected will be invited to vote on the proposal for organizing the district.

Other members of the State committee are Prof. J. E. Metzger, acting director of the experiment station; Dr. W. W. Skinner, chairman of the Maryland State Board of Agriculture; Dr. F. W. Besley, State forester, and O. C. Bruce, State coordinator for the soil conservation service of Maryland.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMANIC" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

'Five Kings' Is a 'Living Motion Picture'

Welles Play Matches Cinema's Fluidity; Emery and Meredith Grow Own Beards; Clem McCarthy to Dramatize Experiences

AS SO MANY of them have turned out to be, the fear proved to be without foundation.

That is to say that having imputed in Tuesday morning's review of this amazingly facile work a strictly motion picture technique to Orson Welles in his fashioning of the condensed version of the Shakespeare chronicle plays constituting Part I of his "Five Kings," currently at the National Theater, we felt some qualms lest one whose activities have been dedicated wholly to the living theater should resent the implication that he had borrowed the pattern of his treatment from another dramatic medium. It was the first thing we mentioned when we visited Mr. Welles briefly backstage after the Tuesday night performance.

BELL

"Resent it!" ejaculated this brilliant young actor-author-producer, "don't be silly. The Post's review of our play is the first one in the country that perceived what it was we were striving for. In dramas of this expansive sort, it has always been my feeling that the stage, up to a certain point, can do everything in the matter of flexibility and fluidity of scene that the screen can do. We tried to prove it here. While written primarily and exclusively for the stage, the script of 'Five Kings' is in the form of a motion picture scenario, with 'fadeouts,' 'pan shots,' 'dissolves' and all of the other tricks of the cinema written in with deliberate intent. I am glad that someone, finally, has discovered what it was we were shooting at."

A few tons thus having been rolled off our fragile back, we proceeded to talk about the play and the manner of its execution—with especial emphasis laid upon the role of Sir John Falstaff, played by the youthful Mr. Welles with uncommon sagacity.

There had been some question raised in the lobby on Monday night as to how much Orson Welles might have built up his height for this part. He has not built it up at all. He stands 6 feet 2 inches tall, normally, and is that in the play. His shoes have no heels. His girth is something else again. To achieve all of that Falstaffian bulk, Welles wears something in the neighborhood of 50 pounds of trappings that slightly bog him down. He loses an average of 3 pounds in weight at every performance, when the pores are open. He didn't experience that shrinkage in avoirdupois on Monday night because he played the part with a temperature of 101 degrees. The fever was broken by Tuesday night, when I saw him, and, still trussed up in the buckram bindings of his character, he was exuding perspiration at about the rate the heavens precipitated rain yesterday. He thought it was a good sign. I thought it must be extremely uncomfortable. I think we both were right.

Part II of "Five Kings" already is in manuscript form, but no work has as yet been undertaken looking to its production. That will come along next fall. At the present time, the item now being presented on the National stage is occupying the entire time and thought of Mr. Welles and his associates. He was working on revisions of certain routines when I went backstage Tuesday night. They went into rehearsal yesterday morning at 10. The rehearsals continued up to matinee time. And that's the way it goes, when one has something important to say in the theater and wishes to say it in the best possible manner.

So the visit moved a few feet into Burgess Meredith's dressing room, where John Emery was relaxing more or less comfortably against a convenient partition. Both Mr. Meridith and Mr. Emery have been seen oftener on the National stage than Orson Welles —the former in "Winterset" and "Star-Wagon," both by Maxwell Anderson, and the latter in Katherine Dayton's "Save Me the Waltz" and with his wife, Tallulah Bankhead, in "I Am Different." Mr. Emery was about to dash out to his hotel and phone his charming wife, daughter of the Speaker of the House, who has a hit on her hands in New York in Lillian Hellman's play of "The Litt' Foxes." I hope he remembered to convey my messages to her—which he probably didn't, husbands usually being immersed in other thoughts when chatting with their wives. Mr. Meredith, despite our published hurrahs at his "doubling in brass" on the screen of the Earle in "Spring Madness," come tomorrow, seems to have a slight pique with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It seems that his services are eagerly sought and his billing then reduced almost to the point of disappearance, or something of the sort. He has promised to tell me more of this before he gets out of town.

And lest anyone think that these ardent and talented gentlemen struggle with a mess of hirsute makeup at every performance, it might as well be disclosed now as any time that each is wearing his own natural beard for his role in "Five Kings." So are most of the other male members of the cast. Van Dykes promise to become as much a masculine vogue as high hair-dos were, for a minute, among the femmes. Or maybe I'm wrong. This morning's razor blade was a fine argument on my side

And then the cocktail party, hurled by Eastern Division Manager Carter Barron of Loew's, Inc. at the Variety Club yesterday afternoon, in honor of Clem McCarthy, noted sports commentator, headlining next week's stage bill at the Capitol. I suspect that my confrere, Master Walter Haight, will have more of a story than this on the sports pages today. But it might not be amiss to say that Clem's act at the Capitol, beginning tomorrow, will give a pretty fair idea of what a sports announcer's life really is like. He will be introduced by a screen flash of many of his activities, then will announce a burlesque prize-fight, enacted on the stage, and will fill in his 18 minutes with anecdotes and comical sayings culled from the sports arenas.

THE ORIGINAL manuscript of the Bill of Rights—one of the most precious documents in Americana—now has an official appraised value of $1. Dr. W. A. S. Rosenbach, the famed collector who purchased the manuscript recently, arranged for the $1 appraisal, so that the Library of Congress—the ultimate beneficiary—will receive it tax free . . . Miriam Verne, who danced for Hitler last week, was notified yesterday about Billy Rose's page-one offer to employ her. Miss Verne cabled her agent to accept the offer, but Mr. Rose, who already had his press clippings, declined . . . The Hollywood Restaurant will become the site for Bob Ripley's Odditorium . . . The G-men are checking the passports issued to the American representatives who went to Russia for the Soviet Congress.

HENRY MORGENTHAU, SR., father of the Secretary of the Treasury, went to the White House during a Cabinet meeting and there met all the members of the Cabinet . . . He turned to Harry Hopkins and said: "It's a funny thing—that you and my son, the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of the Treasury, are the only Cabinet members wearing ordinary business suits" . . . Hopkins, somewhat embarrassed, suggested: "What about Secretary Perkins. Isn't her's a business suit?" . . . "No, not a business suit," President Roosevelt interrupted. "She wears a union suit."

THE GRAND DUCHESS MARIE is very much disturbed at Frank Fay—because he introduced her to a cafe audience as "The Duchess of Thing" . . . Ann Miller, the screen actress, will appear in George White's new "Scandals" . . . Harry Richman's World Fair enterprise will be called "Paris After Dark" . . . H. L. Mencken, who was the first editor of the American Mercury, will be among the contributors to the first issue under its new set-up . . . Dorothy Lamour, the silent, soulful movie star, screamed: "You dirty soandso!" across El Morocco at 4 a. m. yesterday because Jerome Zerbe photographed her while she was crouching near the floor, submitting to having her tricky headdress fastened . . .

DASHIELL HAMMETT, creator of "The Thin Man," went to Baltimore recently to witness the out-of-town premiere of "The Litle Foxes" . . . Mr. Hammett's father lives in Baltimore, and Dashiell—who hadn't seen him in 14 years—decided to make parental obeisance . . . Tallulah Bankhead and Dorothy Parker had come to his assistance in searching through the telephone book for the elder Hammett's address—because Dashiell couldn't remember his sire's initials.

THE FRONT-PAGED short-selling report of the Securities and Exchange Commission was in line with the foreign arbitrage report issued by Michael G. Appel, who was named to the S. E. C. at $1 a year. Appel completed his job—but still hasn't collected his $1 salary . . . Newman Levy, the lawyer-scenarist, will call his new book "Trials and Tribulations" . . . "The Blonde Brigade" now is being considered by Grover Whalen for exhibition at the World's Fair. Nat Karson, who will design the sets, explained its meaning: One hundred blondes, almost nude, march in formation and fire powder puffs from cannon. "But this is just nudity on display," the officials criticized—to which Mr. Karson returned: "I assure you it isn't. It's sex with social significance."

LIFE MAGAZINE recently devoted its front cover to a photograph of Lucius Beebe wearing extremely formal attire, as an indication of what the well-dressed man wears . . . Sunday evening El Morocco offered a $100 prize to the best-dressed man there and three other prizes for the next best . . . One of the contestants borrowed the exact attire worn by Beebe in that front-cover photo, entered the contest—and didn't even place among the honorable mentions.

ONE OF THE LAWYERS arrested by Dewey in his drive against ambulances chasers was about to leave the State and had advertised his office furniture for sale. A prospective purchaser then visited the office and agreed to buy the furniture for $285. The next day the arrest was made. The lawyer still doesn't know that the "purchaser" was a Dewey detective.

LOUIS GREENFIELD, who will be tried next month for slaying his imbecile son, will not be tried by a blue-ribbon jury . . . Rene Blum, brother of Leon Blum, uttered some phrases in English yesterday and was startled when his listeners burst into laughter . . . "Tell me," Blum pleaded, "am I witty—or ridiculous?"

JOHN GARFIELD'S continued absence from Broadway has disturbed his Group Theater colleagues . . . Harold Clurman, the Group Theater's director, and Elia Kazan, one of its stars, were discussing Hollywood's raids upon Broadway . . . "Group Theater actors can be very happy here on $250 a week," Clurman declared . . . "That's right," agreed Karzan, who has been invited to appear in the "Golden Boy" movie version, "and I'll keep on saying that long after I've gone to Hollywood. I'll add only two words to that statement. I'll add: 'the dopes.'"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 15.—Never give up hope, says pretty Martha Merrill, who made pictures here, played in the Bliss-Hayden "little theater" where George Jean Nathan saw her and helped get her a New York play. She went East, did it, and developed T. B. Returned to Hollywood, friendless and heartsick.

HEDDA HOPPER

The Motion Picture Relief Fund saw that she was taken care of at the Hillside Sanatorium where she's been for some time. When her Hollywood friends heard about it through Edgar Selwyn, they started visiting her to cheer her up. But she was so mentally depleted, she didn't cheer worth a cent.

One day Edgar took her a typewriter and said, "Why don't you try writing?" She did. Her poetry has been published and her first story, called "Merry Go Round," will be printed in Liberty magazine. She got a check for $300 for it.

Then, thinking it might be worked into a picture, the script was shown several studios. Finally got to Henry Hathaway at Paramount, who's been trying to lick "The End of the World" for some time. After reading this story, Henry said, "This is the girl who can do it."

And there she is, in bed, writing on one of the most important pictures of the year. The doctors claim that in six months she'll be out walking, even as you and I.

One of Liberty's staff writers was in almost the same condition. When she read "Merry Go Round," which hasn't yet been published, and heard the girl's story, she found a complete spiritual rejuvenation.

Instead of throwing up her hands in horror at her sarong publicity, Dottie Lamour should thank heaven she got it. Where would she be but for a sarong? Wonder what she'd do if Grover Whalen offered her a carnation? My advice is forget your social secretary and press agent before it's too late.

At Countess di Frasso's party the other night, the guests ate scrambled eggs out of coffee cups. Harry Crocker must have been an acrobat because he, Cedry Hill and Sonny Chalif put on that kind of a dance. Mrs. Gene Markey had the pleasure of seeing her former boy friend, Reggie Gardiner, being the hit of the party. He did his band-leading act. And Walter Wanger was very relaxed around all those titles like Sutherlands, Rossis and Torlonia, 'cause he came sack-suited.

Elsa Maxwell left early. The movies are cutting into her night life. She took time out Sunday to whip up to San Francisco and greet Eve Curie, who wrote such a wonderful book about her mother's life.

Alex Steinhart played Debussy in one room with a radio going full tilt in the next. Their overtones mingled, but didn't quite jell.

Understand Brian Aherne is so handsome as Maximilian in the Paul Muni picture, that his most important scene may be cut out of "Juarez."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 15 (I.N.S.)—Do you recall the item in this column about "The House Across the Bay," the drama reminiscent of Mrs. Al Capone's devotion to the former Chicago vice lord? Just to refresh your memory, I said Marline Dietrich had read it and at one time tried to interest several producers. Walter Wanger apparently shares her enthusiasm, for today he purchased it from Myles Connolly, the author, for his favorite star, Joan Bennett.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Joan will again wear the dark hair which makes her look so like Hedy LaMarr. Personally, I wish she wouldn't, for I like her in her own blonde locks. The Capone angle only concerns the tax evasion which sent him to prison, and there will be no gangster element. In the Connolly story the wife finds a new romance during the weary years she spends waiting for her husband to be freed.

Talked with Jimmy Roosevelt today and he tells me that his mother will attend the preview of "Wuthering Heights" with him March 24. The eldest son of the President explained that Mrs. F. D. R. isn't coming here just for the picture. She has a lecture engagement in Los Angeles the twenty-second, and one in San Diego the twenty-third, but she will stay over to the preview. This, by the way, will be the first Goldwyn picture since Jimmy was appointed vice president. In addition to all Mrs. Roosevelt's activities as First Lady, columnist, lecturer and humanitarian, she is first and foremost a proud mother and it will be in that capacity that she sees Jimmy's first picture and her first Hollywood preview.

Well, here is news. "Northwest Passage," Kenneth Roberts best seller, after two years of postponements, goes into production with King Vidor megaphoning. A crew left today for the Payette River in Idaho to get everything in order to start immediate production. The surprising part about King is that only a few days ago he was told to be ready to start "Witch in the Wilderness," with Joan Crawford, but when a long-distance telephone call said the river was clear at last, a hurried conference was held by the M-G-M bigwigs and it was decided to lose no more time. Robert Taylor, Spencer Tracy and Wallace Beery are the male leads in this outdoor epic but they will not be in Idaho at the same time, since many of their scenes are separate. Wonder how Spence will feel about this since it means he cannot go to Europe?

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jerome Odlum of "Each Dawn I Die" fame, has taken up residence in Las Vegas for divorce purposes; Annabella finishes "Maiden Voyage" tomorrow and leaves for a skiing jaunt with Ty Power and other friends; Martha Raye loses her third wisdom tooth within the month; John Payne nursing a crushed hand; Barbara Stanwyck and Bob Taylor wearing exactly the same riding clothes, cut, material and style, attracting much attention at the Brown Derby; Bobby Breen's sister, Sally, moves into the Cedars of Lebanon tomorrow, to await the stork's arrival; Gene Raymond joins Jeanette MacDonald Monday in Stillwater, Okla., where she opens her concert tour; Franchot Tone returns in June to the Hollywood he found so irksome; Charlie Foy and Grace Hayes; sampling Ruby Foo's chop suey together; now that the races are over at Santa Anita, June and Stu have packed the kids in the station wagon and gone to San Francisco. They say it's for the fair but Tanforan isn't far away.

Nonie Mitchell, songstress, and Reggie Gardiner's new flame, rushed to the hospital for an emergency operation; Danny Danker is down with a bad case of flu; Lee Garlow, Sandra Rambeau's former boy friend, buying Lilian Bond's dinner at Marcel's cafe; Margaret Lindsay and the very devoted Eddie Norris a night spot duet; Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable same place celebrating his settlement with his mother; cutest twosome in town are Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul, assistant director on her picture. They've been dancing twice this week at the Victor Hugo.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Magic Employed to Get Movie Effects

For the first time in screen history magic is being used in place of trick photography to achieve magical effects. Judy Garland has started rehearsals with a professional stage magician for sequences in "The Wizard of Oz" in which she is picked up and whirled away into the air by winged monkeys.

On a special set, behind locked doors, the illusion is being worked out by a method that technicians say is somewhat similar to the "Asrah" levitation illusion practiced on the stage by Houdini, Blackstone, Thurston and other magicians. Everyone working on the set is pledged to secrecy.

Studio Has Job Finding 10 Chimps

The almost complete disappearance of vaudeville with its trained animal acts resulted in a difficult casting problem for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when it tried to find ten trained chimpanzees to act as Cheeta's own "supporting cast" in "Tarzan in Exile," with Johnny Weissmuller and Maureen O'Sullivan. Although there are plenty of chimpanzees in zoos and circuses, few are trained to perform because, outside of motion pictures, there is little commercial outlet for this talent. Screen tests were made of more than 50 chimps before 10 were found with sufficient training to be used.

'Candida' Is Top Offering For New Week

Cornelia Otis Skinner Deserts Una-Drama; Coming Theater Bills

"CANDIDA." Cornelia Otis Skinner puts aside her noted "monodramas" to appear as the George Bernard Shaw heroine, her first local production with other players in her support. Onslow Stevens is the Morell of the comedy, Dorothy Sands, also a noted as a monologuist, is Prossy; John Cromwell, Marchbanks; A. P. Kaye, Burgess and Philip Faversham, Lexy Mill. George Somnes has done the staging, Donald Oenslager the settings and Helene Pons the costumes. New York and London are among the future stops which Miss Skinner will make on her already lengthy and successful tour. Opens Monday evening with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Chinese Cultural Group

"AN EVENING IN CATHAY." Selections from the classical music, dances and drama of ancient China will be presented by 10 notable artists from Shanghai for the aid of China's war refugees next Wednesday evening at the Belasco Theater. Mrs. Ernest S. H. Tong, wife of the Counsellor of the Kwangtung provincial government, is the leader of the company and its single performance is being sponsored by a long list of notables headed by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Chinese Ambassador.

Palace

"MADE FOR EACH OTHER." Carole Lombard and James Stewart as a young couple who marry despite economic odds, support a mother-in-law and nurse their baby through a nearly fatal illness. An original story by Jo Swerling, its cast includes Charles Coburn, Lucile Watson, Ruth Weston, Donald Briggs, Eddie Quilan, Harry Davenport, Esther Dale, Alma Kruger, Tully Marshall, Julia Faye and Jack Mulhall. Opens this morning.

Earle

"SPRING MADNESS." A college comedy is the film and Benny Goodman tops the stage show with his famous orchestra and radio favorites including Lionel Hampton, Ziggy Elman, Martha Tilton, Jess Stacy, Chris Griffin, Hymie Schertzer and Benny's popular trio and quartet. Eunice Healy, remembered for her ballet-taps, is also on the stage. The film co-stars Maureen O'Sullivan and Lew Ayers with Burgess Meredith, Ruth Hussey, Ann Morris, Joyce Compton, Jacqueline Wells and Frank Albertson. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"THE THREE MUSKETEERS." With the three Ritz Brothers in the central roles and Don Ameche, as D'Artagnan, the Alexandre Dumas adventure saga pops up in musical comedy guise. Binnie Barnes, Gloria Stuart, Pauline Moore and Joseph Schildkraut have the other leading roles. Celebrating St. Patrick's Day, Clem MacCarthy, of the clipped speech in the racing broadcasts, headlines the stage show, "Laugh Lotions," and Phil Lampkin begins his eighth year as maestro of the Capitol's orchestra. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN." W. C. Fields, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen continue to rollick through their merry paces in a story by the Magnificent Fields himself. Mortimer Snurd leads the supporting players, among whom are Princess Baba, Thurston Hall and Arthur Hohl. Walt Disney's "Donald's Lucky Day" and "Pilot Boat" are also held over with the jolly and popular comedians.

Metropolitan

"YES, MY DARLING DAUGHTER." Continuing its second downtown engagement, the screen version of Mark Reed's comedy hit relates a mother's predicament when her daughter decides to follow in her very independent footsteps. Fay Bainter is the mother, Priscilla Lane the daughter, and Roland Young, May Robson, Jeffrey Lynn, Genevieve Tobin and Ian Hunter complete the cast.

Columbia

"Captain, before you is a map of the territory. Your company will act as outpost to the battalion overnight. You have just 15 minutes in which to place your men."

These were the brief instructions given yesterday to cadet captains and their teams from six Washington High Schools, competing in the brigade finals of the military map problem held at Roosevelt High School.

The problem worked out on 10 foot high, contour maps was won by Company D, First Regiment, Central High School, captained by Philippe V. Cardon. Other members of the team were: Ralph Lechner, second lieutenant, and Privates Edward J. Bennett, Robert G. Hill, Stanley Lee and James W. Patterson.

Judged by Capt. James Regan, U. S. A., the Central team was in competition with McKinley, Woodrow Wilson, Eastern, Western and Roosevelt. Col. Wallace M. Craigie, professor of Military Science and tactic to the cadets directed the competition for a handsome silver cup. This and a gold medal for Capt. Cardon will be presented April 3 in Central High School Stadium.

Jitterbug and Jig Contests To Mark St. Patrick's Day Here

Organizations Forced to Cancel Parties Because of Hotel Strike Are Invited To Interior's Celebration at Press Club

Organizations forced to cancel St. Patrick's Day celebrations because of the hotel strike yesterday were invited to the annual party of the Interior Department Recreation Association tomorrow at 9:30 p. m. in the National Press Club.

Everything from jitterbug contests and Irish folk dances to patriotic exercises and banquets will be given tomorrow as sons and daughters of the Emerald Isle observe the day for "wearing of the green."

Members of the District Post, No. 17, Irish War Veterans of the United States, will meet tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the statue of Commodore John Barry, Fourteenth and I streets northwest, to honor the "Father of the American Navy." They will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery at 11 a. m.

The veterans will climax their celebration with a supper-dance at 9 p. m. at the New Colonial Hotel, Fifteenth and M streets.

At the same time, members of the Interior Department Recreation Association will present an "open house" program at the National Press Club.

A St. Patrick's Day dance will be given by Brookland Council, No. 27, Daughters of America, at the Masonic Temple, Twelfth and Monroe streets northeast, Saturday at 8:30 p. m. The Manor Country Club, of Norbeck, Md., will give a dance tomorrow night.

The Iowa State Society will lead off the St. Patrick's Day celebrations with a dance tonight at 9:30 at the Shoreham Hotel.

Wool Growers To Honor Queen

Two extensive wardrobes will be augmented next month when American wool growers present Queen Elizabeth with fabric woven from fleece gathered from 34 States, while Mrs. Roosevelt accepts a similar gift from British Empire growers. The exchange was arranged in celebration of the royal visit in June.

Alumni of Lafayette To Hear Dr. Lewis

McCormick heads the supporting cast of New York stage players.

Little

"LOST HORIZON." Having proved an unexpectedly successful one, this revival of James Hilton's imaginative Shangri-La remains for another week. Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt, Edward Everett Horton, Sam Jaffe, John Howard, Isabel Jewell and H. B. Warner have the leading roles, and Frank Capra directed. Continues through Tuesday evening.

Trans-Lux

"THE MARCH OF TIME." Topping the short subjects at the newsreel theater this week is the latest issue of the documentary series. Mexico's confiscation of American and British oil properties and the Boy Scout movement are discussed. Wild geese on the Chesapeake Bay is the subject of "On the Wing," and "The Gorilla Hunt" is the color cartoon. Starts Friday.

Catholic Players Guild

"THE THIRD CROSS." A new drama of Christ's Passion is being played by local actors under the direction of Paul Messink, at the Holy Name Auditorium, West Virginia avenue and Neal street northeast. Performances are at 8:30 each evening and there will be an afternoon showing next Sunday.

Gayety

"HIGH STEPPERS." Lillian Dixon is the leading attraction of the new burlesque revue opening Sunday afternoon. The display artist is supported by two comedians, Billy Hagen and Billy Fields, as well as by Joan Marvis, Doris Weston, Allene Dale, Alexianne and Las Sposler. This week's production will be the attraction of the Saturday midnight performance at which the newly inaugurated "Jitterbug Contest" will be continued.

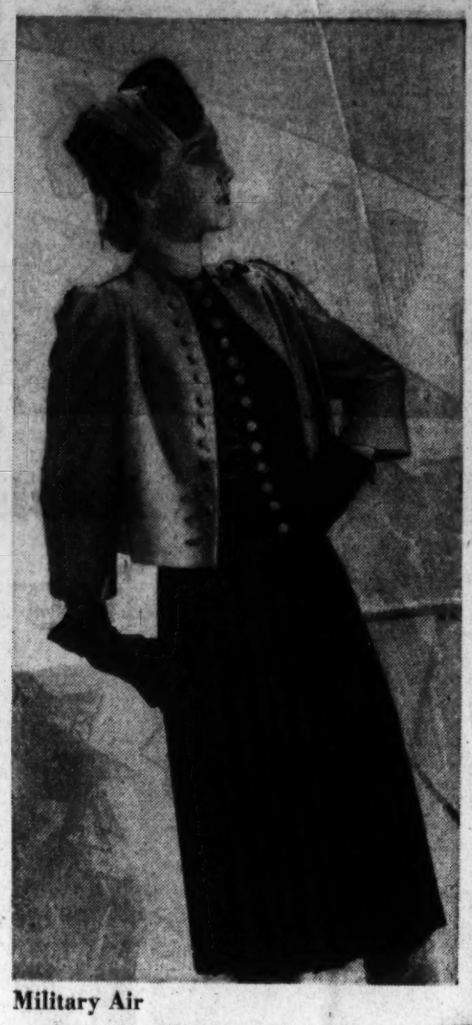
Spirit of '76

That dauntless early American spirit is interpreted by Eisenberg, the designer, in the two-piece ensemble, above. Even the peruke hair bow is revived beneath this tailored woman's beret. Her sheer wool coat flares forth even as Gen. Washington's once did. Its waistline is very slim, relieved only by broad-flapped pockets. The sheer crepe frock beneath is tailored to a T.



Military Air

Plenty of martial dash is incorporated in the two-piece ensemble, above. The chartreuse jacket is loose and boxy. Those jacket buttons are regimented into the same low-waisted line as those on the black mossy-crepe frock.

Burnt Gold

You might grow greedy just looking at the cannotier, above. Its color is that of ripe corn in the sun, or more likely the burning color of new gold. The straw of this chic little sailor is—Derami—a wonderful Oriental rough-chip type. Navy belting ribbon and fishnet headband make this an ideal foil for your navy tailleur.

Dots Before The Eyes

Dots on checks, color over color—that seems to be one of the newest and most soignee methods of making you see dots this spring. Above, they appear clean-cut and ladylike against a chalky surfaced dull rayon jersey. Such a superbly simple dress is tailored enough for any business appointment—yet soft enough for dinners and matinees.

YOU MAY NOT LOOK like a tailor's dummy. You may not even have a perfect 36, yet your passion in dress is trim tailoring. You may love the feel of a good classic topcoat against your good basic frock. If you are this type, the selections on this page were designed with you in mind. Additional fashion information may be obtained by calling Marshall Adams, Post Fashion Editor, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

Lowly Racer Snake

Although one of the earth's most lowly reptiles, the snake is receiving the homage of a king this spring. Racer snake along with lizard, alligator and crocodile, is having a terrific revival, designers often sending down into the mysterious Congo jungles for their precious skins. Above is the classic opera pump in burnt sienna. The calf-trimmed snake bag might be the shoes' twin brother under the skin.

Checks In The News!

Again the checks are in the news—not international, but confined to this country. Young America has gone overboard for the clean, sharp neatness of pin checks and Shepherd Checks. Those, above, are in wine and white rayon crepe. Blessedly, in larger sizes, too, for fuller figures. Correct tailoring is a good foil for the neckpiece of stone marten furs.

Puttin' On The Dog

Your favorite dog, or even your one and only dog, will feel very swank if you carry a portrait of him in your suit pocket. Pooch's replica is reproduced, above, on a pure linen handkerchief. Burmel, the clever textile designer, made this kerchief whimsy.

Tailored For Town

The girl, right, inspecting the vendor's blooms will soon be as much a part of the Washington scene as her flower-cart salesman. She wears a flower-tinted woolen ensemble — three-pieced for maximum wear and versatility.

THE WALKIE LOVES YOU

With deft chic this walkie pump in racer snake treats your foot with kind comfort. Blue, black, brown.

Outdoor Girl

ARE YOU THE SORT of girl who, regardless of current fashion whims, loves the wind in her hair, the rain in her face? Is the thought of long walks in the country so much for you that you go out and buy heathery spring tweeds, even though your best friends are becoming paper-doll types? If so, the outdoor styles on this page may be to your liking.

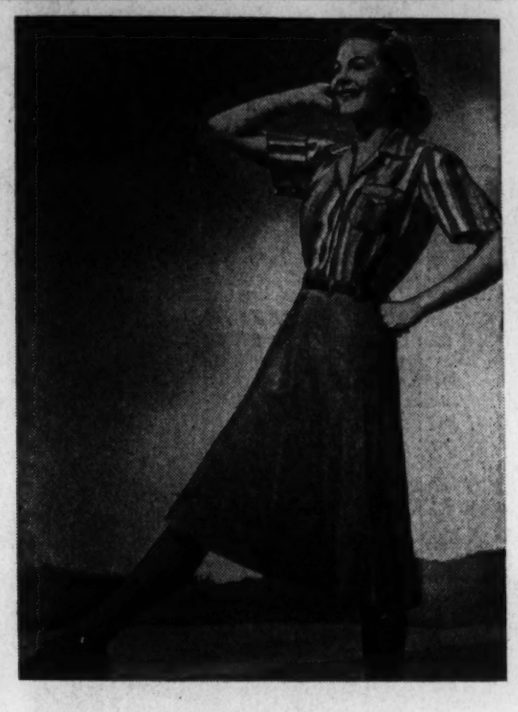
EACH OF THESE style selections has been identified with local shops. Marshall Adams, The Post Fashion Editor, will give additional fashion information. Call National 4200, between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m.

Little Man, What Now?

With this spring rife with little girl silhouettes, it may be refreshing to see a few little men among the fairer sex. One way to achieve a jaunty boyish look for your spectator sports hours is to slap a rakish Homburg on the side of your head. The dashing feather-trimmed one above is in rich fuchsia-toned paillette straw.

Queen Of The Courts

Almost any girl can be, sartorially, a queen of the courts in a tennis ensemble such as the one above. The short-sleeved, ribbed cardigan has been dyed to match exactly the pastel tone of the frock beneath. Yes, that is a dress, although it looks like a skirt. It is in Thick and Thin rustic fabric, sleeveless, and with a low, rounded tennis back.

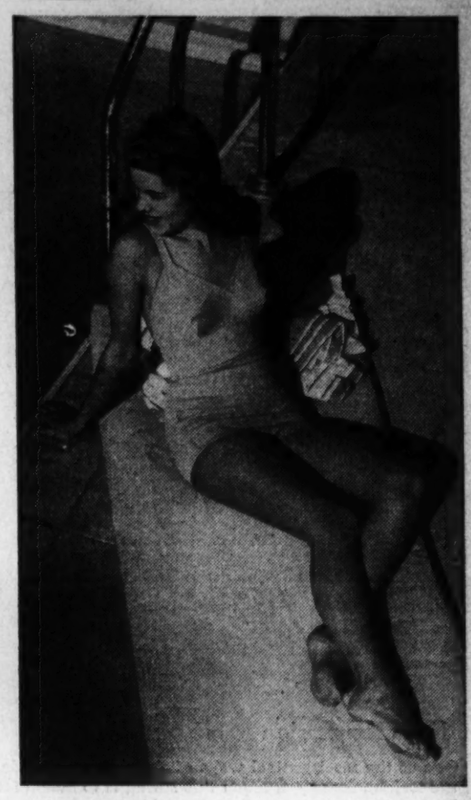


Cabana Stripes

As casual as the blithe girl who wears them is the shirt-waist and skirt, above. Solid toned blue chambray, forms the action-gored skirt. Cabana stripes blaze on the blouse

The Winnah!

Country horse show days are almost here. This teen-aged spectator, right, wears a navy tweed skirt under a brightly checked jacket.



Come On In!

The water is probably fine, as tradition has that it should be, but the lithe mermaid, above, wants another moment to admire her swim suit. As you can see, this is a functional suit, one that takes to the water like a fish. No baby ruffles here, only a classic lastex fabric of sharkskin weave in such seagoing colors as coral, aqua and horizon blue.

Slick New Rainsuiter

Science and fashion get chummy over the sports ensemble, above. It is known as the rainsuiter, but is so chic that the active sportswoman will live in it, rain or shine. Zelan is the new durable, water-repellent finish for this sturdy two-piece sport costume.

Tee Time

One of the smartest and most wearable of the new golf frocks is seen at right. It is a two-piece affair with full flaring skirt, tailored as flawlessly as the man-tailored shirt above it. A good-looking calf belt gives zip to this neutral-toned dress. A fishnet snood replaces the humdrum felt golf hat

The Feminine Touch

Feminine Expression

One of the most genteel ways of showing which side of the fashion fence you sit on this spring is to bloom forth in an ultra-feminine, ultra-sheer blouse. Just such a blouse is the dainty froth, above. It is in lavender chiffon, tucked about the yoke, with ruffled sleeves and a waistband, which, as a change, is worn outside of the skirt.

Caught In Net

You may catch him in your net yet, if you swath your bonnet this spring in yards of veiling. The girl, at left, wear such a beau-catcher. It is glistening navy straw, the sailor crown of which is veiled and topped with feather choux.

Persian Fantasy

A wild, yet neatly oriented, array of Persian symbols forms the Bayadere striped print of the frock, above. Black and lime green tones look as fresh as the colors found in a Persian garden. Fan pleating runs the gamut of the flattering skirt. That patent belt is becoming, too, if you're a mere 12 or 14 underneath it all.

Basking In Security

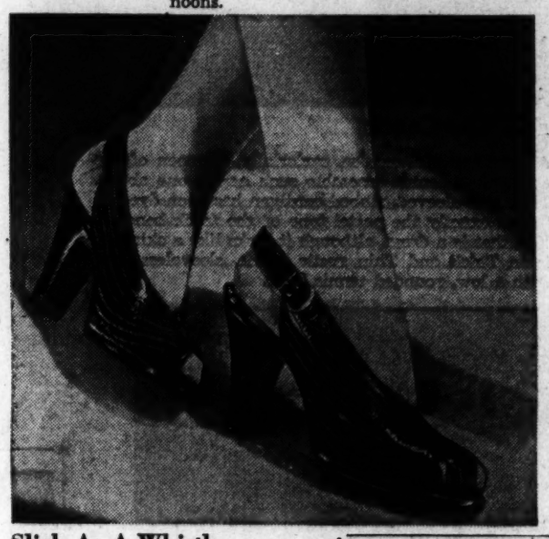
You will be able to waltz through an evening of endless self-confidence in a basque such as the one, above. It has been created especially for evening gowns—the strapless and hazardous kind! A spool waistline is achieved by means of lastex gores. Featherboning under the lace fabric gives that much-desired uplift.

Topped With Silvers

It would be almost impossible not to appear feminine and enchanting swathed in luxury foxes. The heavily silvered ones, above, are especially handsome because of the many skins that went into the bolero. Such a collarless, bracelet-sleeved jacket would be tops right now over your woolen dresses.

In The Pink

You'll feel and look in the pink of perfection in such an ensemble as the one, above. Ina Case, a designer with an eye to feminine appeal, whipped up the slim black sheer. She pleated the skirt all around and topped it with a wide patent belt. She then tucked in a fine French organdie blouse of candy pink to match the shoulder corsage. This, with a candy pink veiled turban and pink doeskins, is an unbeatable formula for spring afternoons.



Slick As A Whistle

Love Tokens

Say it with hearts and flowers if you want to insure romantic attentions. Better yet, wear your love tokens at your throat and wrist. Monet, the clever designer used gold hearts and roses strung on link chains.

WHETHER YOU ARE a sybarite by nature and can swaddle yourself in all the silver foxes you wish, or whether you toil for a pittance and wish still to remain the feminine type, you will find fashions on this page to suit your income. For additional information about where these styles can be located in Washington, call Marshall Adams, The Post Fashion Editor, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

Royal Plumage

It may be the impending visit of England's King and Queen that prompted the design of the evening gown, above. Whether or no, you will feel pretty regal in this black silk marquisette yourself. Its enormous skirt is appliqued with printed plumes which help Judy O'Grady to look every whit as aristocratic as the King's lady.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 15.

DEEP TRAGEDY has fallen upon the devoted heads of that small group of fancy New Yorkers who appear to worship anyone entitled to wear a couple of pounds of diamonds on their skulls. For the word has now officially gone forth that their majesties of England will be in town for only one day, June 10, as official guests, with time only for a quick look at our World's Fair.

This puts a complete kibosh on the hopes of a few of our statelier dowagers, who had vaguely believed that they might lure Elizabeth and George to their homes and a few little sausages. But, alas, this is a gaudy dream that can never come true, and these elegant people can just as well leave their gold table services safely in the bank vaults. It now seems certain that the best they can hope for is one of the slightly mildewed peers who frequent our shores for a few square meals.

To make matters worse, it appears that our socialites will not even get a crack at the Crown Prince and Princess of Denmark, who are scheduled to peer at the Fair on May 2. After a night at Hyde Park they will soak up the culture of our exposition and then officially fade from the picture. All in all, these are black days for the gallant little band of Gotham tories, who would walk a mile for a curtsey.

Of course, we have already been told somewhat vaguely that the Queen's visit will have some effect on American fashions, but in my opinion this is nothing to cause dancing in the streets. I have received swatches of the materials used by her favorite dressmaker, Mr. Norman Hartnell, in his current collection—but I ask you, what worshipful American cares to curtsey to a swatch?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The sudden popularity of cute American dancers with the German Chancellor and his court has caused enormous speculation in our entertainment circles. In rapid succession the Misses Miriam Verne, late of Pittsburgh, and Marion Daniels, a Chicago girl, have done their high kicks before this select little group, and Broadway wonders what it is all about. Both young ladies are very easy on the optics and received high reward, as well as praise, for their cultural labors, and some of our more subtle thinkers are wondering whether this sudden interest in American acrobatic dancers is a quick gesture of friendliness toward the remote and barbaric United States of America.

Theatrical first nights are no longer legal along Broadway these days, for the most faithful first-nighter of them all, the perennially beautiful Hope Hampton, has gone on a South American cruise, accompanied, as usual, by her millionaire husband, Jules Brulatour. As a matter of fact, I doubt that a curtain can rise at all without their presence, even with 20 sturdy stagehands named Joe all pulling at once.

Romany Stripes for Sofa Covers

When in doubt about the choice of colors and design for slip covers or pillows that will blend harmoniously or give contrast to an all-over patterned or solid colored carpet, try stripes. Nothing is smarter than the above sofa with cushions in a vivid, dynamic stripe in a gay, bright color. The new gypsy stripes are particularly chic for home decoration as well as for evening frocks this spring. They are guaranteed to give verve to any room that is suffering from winter doldrums

The Gentler Sex

Spring Hat

You lift it out of its tissue paper wrappings, hold it aloft with a faint shock of surprise. Someway it does not seem the same hat that was in the store. Why, there it had looked sort of meek, retiring, conservative. And now——

You go to the mirror, set it on your head. Good heavens! 'Can . . . that . . . be . . . you? Your face finally becomes familiar underneath the high funnel with its topknot of poppies . . . its swathing of veil. How strange you look! As if you were ready to go to a bal masque.

And yet in the store it had really seemed so sane and dignified beside those simply terrible ones that everybody else was trying on. Wait though—maybe you haven't got it on right! It's all in the way you wear these new hats—that was what the clerk said.

You twist, pull and adjust. It still sits up there on your head like a bump on a log, arrogantly refusing to have anything to do with the rest of you. Oh well . . . maybe in time the two of you will get together. You always have to wear a hat awhile before it becomes a part of you.

You take the hand mirror, try a side inspection. Maybe you could shorten those streamers of veiling in the back—yes and bring the poppies down a little lower on the funnel . . . Why, it might look fairly simple and restrained if you did that! Still . . . You suddenly remember the hats you have fooled with in the past. Better let it alone.

No, you might as well face the fact that you have made a mistake. You were so bewildered in the store by the array of hats, the lights and those millinery mirrors that always make you look so soft and rested. You WILL take it back—still there would be the argument with the clerk . . . and all the hunting and trying on again. And besides, where would you ever find another even so conservative as this one?

Of course it may be as the clerk said—you're not used to it. Anyway you're always so slow about taking up anything that is new. That's why you always look so sort of drab in your clothes. You really ought to be more audacious.

Still . . . if it were only a little more becoming . . . you wouldn't mind. You could really stand its being so extreme if it did anything for you. Oh now, there you go again, always wanting to look pretty! You might as well accept the fact that you can't and concentrate on looking smart. Anyway, this is really the type of hat that men notice—even if they do laugh at it. And for that matter, who are the women you always see all the men wining and dining? Why the women with the funny hats!

Yes, for once in your life you might as well be in style even if you do look funny. In the end, everyone will respect you more for it—think of you as an up-and-coming woman. Why this is an age in which you have to do such things! It's merely a matter of self-promotion.

After all, this hat really isn't so extreme when you think of what the other women are wearing. Look at Estelle Prink with that stovepipe cloche with the veil hanging down to her waist! Look at Marie Bobbin walking around carrying aloft four birds standing on their heads! Look at Adele Tartar with her four divorces and wearing a baby bonnet fringed with pink roses! Look at Maude March with a Jack and the Beanstalk spear of flowers rising off the front of her sailor! Look at old Mrs. Swank with an off-the-face bonnet tied under her chin! And look at Mrs. Noble wearing a hanging basket, Mrs. Trale balancing a window box!

Why, as a matter of fact your hat is really conservative—considering everything. You were really lucky to get one this sensible. Why it could really have been a lot crazier!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man's Foreign Divorce Is Held Invalid; Couple Find Themselves in Bigamous Union; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Some time ago I was secretly married to a man who had previously been married and divorced. He obtained the divorce outside the United States, about three years ago, and his wife seemed perfectly satisfied at the time. He has always paid sufficient alimony. His former wife lives in a distant city, and since our marriage has not been publicly announced she knows nothing about me.

In recent months, she decided she was not getting enough alimony and contested his divorce, which the court now holds invalid. This all happened in her home town and our friends know nothing of it. I have recently discovered, however, that we (my husband and I) are the subject of scandal, as quite a number of people believe we are living together unmarried. Those of our friends who know we are married have suggested that we announce it, so as to save our reputation. But if such an announcement were made, his wife might hear of it. According to recent developments, it appears that we are not legally married and that my husband is a bigamist.

His former wife is getting a divorce in her own way and on her own terms, and it will be final some time this summer. Everything will be all right if she doesn't discover that we are married. We can't announce our marriage, we can't explain the situation to friends, and other people continue to talk. We can't very well set up separate residences, because those who know we are married would think we had separated. So what are we to do? I am at my wits' end. I suppose I could go away somewhere, but I would dislike leaving my husband and it would be difficult for him.

If people would mind their own affairs and stop talking, we could get along beautifully for another four or five months. As it is, things are becoming more critical every day. Maybe you can suggest a way out. I've given up trying. I am on the verge of a nervous breakdown and have never before been in such urgent need of clear thinking. I hope you can help me.

DISTRESSED.

The Ethical Procedure

DEAR DISTRESSED: In order to cure your hysteria you need to lay hold on two things—a clear conscience and some acceptable evidence of honest intent to abide by the laws of the land. You cannot afford to concern yourself with the gossip of busybodies or the reactions of fair-weather friends. Now that your husband's divorce has been held invalid, thus rendering his marriage contract with you both bogus and bigamous, the thing for you two to do—if you would reclaim good consciences and demonstrate a law-abiding intent—is to separate, immediately, and to remain apart (so far as exercising the prerogatives of marriage are concerned) until such time as you can be legally married.

Supposing you were to remain together, and supposing his wife's attorneys seek indefatigably to strengthen their client's case, with the idea of procuring maximum alimony, there is considerable likelihood that they might uncover his bigamous liaison with you. Once discovered and called to the attention of the district attorney, the latter would be obliged to seek the imposition of punishment to fit the crime. But by separating, presumably simultaneously with discovering the falsity of your position, you minimize the possibility of being branded as bigamists, and likewise demonstrate an extenuating desire to rectify an unintentional violation of the law.

If it is possible for you to "go away somewhere," as you suggest, until your bogus husband is free to join you and be married to you, I think that plan is, by long odds, the most desirable one to follow. However, if this is not possible; if you are, perhaps, employed here (and the man, as well) I think separation may still be managed (indeed, in my opinion, it must be) without creating undue furore.

Having recklessly placed yourselves in a painfully awkward position, you cannot expect to work your way out of it without some scars, and you will know better, when things have blown over, just who are your friends and who are not. If you have any completely trustworthy friends (although they are few, indeed, in times of crisis) you might explain to them, briefly and honestly—with no attempt to go into detail—that complications have arisen with regard to your husband's divorce which make it seem best for you to live apart until he can put the tangle right and you can be married all over again. Be light about it, rather than tragic.

You may say: "We really were married, you know. Here is the license to prove it. But it seems his former wife wants a larger alimony than she agreed to accept in the first place, and is determined to make trouble until she gets it. In order to make things easier for John, poor dear, who is in such a muddle that he doesn't know now whether he was ever divorced—although we have papers to cover that point, also—I am simply clearing out and going back to being a spinster until the thing has been ironed out. Then I'll be back to pick up the pieces. In the meantime, we're going to maintain just a beautiful friendship, which ought to be fun."

If, however, you have no friends whose loyalty and understanding can be banked on—just do the thing you think best with no explanations to anyone. Once you are legally married, your self-esteem will return; you can set up housekeeping in some section of the city remote from that in which you now reside, and make a new circle of friends whose paths probably never will cross those of your current social acquaintances.

Incidentally, the foregoing suggestions have been indorsed by a local attorney, who believes, as I do, that the only wisdom, in this instance, is to dissolve the conjugal relationship until another marriage ceremony can be performed. "If this woman were my sister, certainly this is the advice I would give her," said the attorney with whom I conferred. We agreed, also, that it would be well for you to have some first-hand legal counsel in this matter, since it would supply you not only with guidance but with some reassurance. If you have no attorney at present, you might talk with some representative of the Legal Aid Bureau, 1409 L street northwest, NAtional 8674. M. H.

Today's Health Talk

By Dr. Logan Clendening

Airplane Travel Termed Safe For Heart Disease Victims

ADVICE WHICH should be given to people who have had attacks of heart disease and who want to use airplanes is somewhat contradictory. Altitudes make people with heart disease uncomfortable but are not necessarily dangerous, especially if they are not left in a high altitude for any length of time. Physicians who practice in cities where the altitude is high, such as Colorado Springs and Denver, tell me they have plenty of patients with heart disease who are quite comfortable and who recover from angina quite as well in that altitude as anywhere else.

As a matter of record, I find that only one death from coronary thrombosis is known to have occurred to an airplane passenger in transit, and even in that case it is not certain that the flying and the altitude contributed to the death. Patients who have recovered from angina or coronary thrombosis seem to fly with perfect safety. Since the American air lines today carry several million passengers and yet we do not hear of any heart deaths, it must be assumed that flying is not dangerous to a patient with a well-compensated heart.

On an average run an airplane seldom gets over 8,000 feet. I have been in an airplane which has gotten as high as 15,000 feet, which is 1,000 feet higher than Pikes Peak, and found that breathlessness was quite noticeable but no real damage was done and no permanent effects were noted.

Discomfort which occurs in airplanes may be due to airplane sickness or altitude sickness and may not necessarily be due to any heart change whatever. A great deal of the reactions that these passengers experience is emotional. Some insist that they cannot stand altitude flying and get sick as soon as a certain elevation is reached.

I have heard the story of a woman who developed pain around the heart at an altitude of 10,000 feet. The pilot was informed of this and put the plane into a slight descent. In a few minutes the woman was informed that the plane had descended 2,000 feet. She said she was feeling much better and could notice prompt relief from her previous symptoms. But, as a matter of fact, the plane had only descened 200 feet.

Planes Safer

It is even safer for passengers with heart disease in an airplane than it would be if they were in a mountain altitude because they keep more still, they sit quietly in their seats, exerting no energy, and can readily compensate for any changes in air pressure.

There are a great many things about airplane flying that have not yet been worked out. One is the effect of sedatives at a high altitude. It is generally considered by all pilots and hostesses who have had experience that sedatives of any kind are likely to produce a violent reaction when a high altitude is reached.

Witty Phrases Win Friends

HELENA IS always chosen for the post of honor. With her bright friendly phrases she welcomes the distinguished visitor to the club—puts him at ease, wins the admiration of fellow club members.

Such simple phrases she uses too. "It was good of you to come." "We are deeply grateful to you—" yet so fitting, so useful in meeting situations like this one.

No groping for words either as she introduces the speaker. Equipped with well-turned phrases, apt word combinations, she mentions his "active understanding" of club problems, asks for his "candid criticism," offers the "eager assistance" of the members.

How it will smooth your own path in life to have such aids to your vocabulary!

Easy to win new friends, keep old ones, if you know the kindly expressions that put people in pleasant mood. "A charming home," to the recent bride. "What a knack you have" to the woman who's helping you make sandwiches at the church fair. Sympathy you can express readily, sincerely with "I'm shocked and grieved," "I know how you feel!"

When telephoning in business matters you appear sure of yourself if you say, "I would like to make an appointment," "Let me speak to the adjustment manager."

Every hostess welcomes you—you make her task of entertaining easier—when you draw out timid guests with such phrases as "Do go on—what happened?" "How amusing!" "I like the way you put it."

Your Figure Madam

By Ida Jean Kain

'Kleinchen' Melchior Is Living Proof of Good Living's Results

WELL, HERE it comes! This is about a beauty who has been on my mind for months! She has been doing all the things I keep urging you to do ever since she was 3 years old—and she is completely beautiful!

If there were any way of doing it I would like to take "Kleinchen" Melchior, wife of Lauritz Melchior, the famous opera singer, around the country and show her off. She is the most irresistible argument I know for living up to the basic rules of diet and exercise.

Most of you go carelessly along breaking all the rules of healthful living, and then wish wistfully for beauty, whereas Mrs. Melchior has been true to all the conditions that make beauty possible and as a result she has more vitality, sparkle and sheer loveliness than one woman really needs.

She "Eats Right"

To begin with—and this will startle you—she does not believe in diet. She thinks it's just silly to go without all the good food you need. "So many women," she observes, "are dieting—always dieting. I was at a tea once where all the ladies declared they were on diets—but by the time we left, there wasn't a little cake or a stuffed date to be seen!"

She believes in having all kinds of vegetables, salads, cheese, buttermilk and liberal quantities of lean meat. She has lean meat twice a day—"because if I had only a salad bowl I would go hungry." She eats dark bread with very little butter and never eats sweets.

Takes "No Exercise"

In her opinion, that's just plain "right eating," but when you get used to it, she says, you have no trouble with your weight and will look much younger than if you were always going on a diet. So you will! Those are the foods you really need and the ones you should learn to like on the balanced menus. Unless I can bring about this change in your food habits, I am not really helping you. Your weight troubles are never over until you have the habit of right eating.

Here's another shock . . . our perfect example has not exercised for ten years. But she doesn't count hiking, skating, fishing and horseback riding as exercise. Mrs. Melchior does these things for the enjoyment they afford and because she has always been used to a great deal of activity—she started skating at the age of 3, was swinging from bars and rings and doing other formal gymnastics at 5 and later, in the summer, would ride a bicycle the whole day long. It is easy to see why she has a perfect figure!

Opera Singer's Wife Noted for Sparkle And Vitality

All of this bears out my own conviction that any woman who keeps her muscles in tone does not have to bother with special exercise, with the exception of throat exercises every day, circling the head, moving it forward and back, stretching the neck muscles. No woman can keep a young throatline without exercising the throat muscles. So, that tallies, too!

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Suydam, Re-wed, Are Honeymooning in Charleston

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

NOW IN CHARLESTON, S. C., on their second honeymoon are Mr. and Mrs. Henry West Suydam, who, divorced in Reno three years ago, were reunited in marriage at a small, impressive ceremony yesterday. In contrast to their wedding in 1925, which was witnessed by hundreds of acquaintances at Epiphany Church, the event took place in the presentce of a small group of relatives and close friends assembled in the drawing room of Mrs. George R. Holmes' residence on Massachusetts avenue.

Mrs. Suydam, who is a cousin of the Duchess of Windsor, is the former Anne Hamilton Gordon. She is a daughter of Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the late Maj. Gen. Barnett, wartime commandant of the Marine Corps, and the late Basil Gordon.

The Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate, officiated at the ceremony very much in the manner he did at the first one except that he substituted the word "unite," in marriage, to "re-unite." The bride was given in marriage by Ulric Bell.

Mrs. Suydam yesterday wore a traveling suit of soft gray wool with a small beret-effect hat, set off with a flowing gray veil. A corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley and a triple strand of pearls further accents for her attractive ensemble. Mrs. Holmes, who was her only attendant, wore a black frock with a white fichu and a white orchid corsage, and a black hat with a plaited veil.

Approximately 25 guests, all members of the two families or close friends, witnessed the noon wedding. A larger number came in afterward for the wedding reception, which lasted until mid-afternoon.

"Aunt Bessie" Among Guests

The ceremony took place before an improvised altar, banked with ferns, forsythia and spring blossoms. Huge bowls and vases of tulips, roses, gladioli and lilies were used throughout the house.

Among the guests who attended either the wedding or the reception, or both, were Mrs. Barnett, Mrs. Henry West Suydam, sr., who playfully presented her son with a pair of hand-cuffs after the ceremony; Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Earley, brother and sister-in-law of Mrs. Holmes; Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, "Aunt Bessie" to both the Duchess of Windsor and the bride.

Still others there were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Wilson, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Walker S. Buell, Joseph Tumulty, Sir Willmott Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley.

Mrs. Suydam Talented Writer

Mrs. Suydam, a talented writer of verse, covered the Hauptmann trial for a local newspaper. Also she has contributed to a number of magazines. Her Washington home in recent months has been at 1812 Nineteenth street. Both she and her husband were close friends of the late Mr. Holmes, former head of the International News Service of Washington.

Since March, 1937, Mr. Suydam, a distinguished journalist, has held an editorial position with the Newark, N. J. Evening News. He gained fame as a World War correspondent and later served as Washington correspondent for the Brooklyn Eagle. From 1934 to 1937 he was special advisor on publicity for former Attorney General Cummings. His home is in East Orange, N. J., where he and Mrs. Suydam will go after their sojourn in Charleston.

Tafts Honored

Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, whose social calendar these days grows more and more crowded, were guests of honor at a dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes in their home on Vermont avenue.

Cmdr., Mrs. Reis Dinner Guests

The retiring Naval Attache of the Brazilian Embassy, Lieut. Comdr. Raul Reis and Mme. Reis, were guests of honor at a dinner given last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris. The party was in the Blue Room of the Shoreham.

Commander and Mme. Reis will leave Washington next week for Brazil, where Commander Reis will take up his command in the Brazilian navy. Guests included Commander Reis' successor in Washington, Lieut. Comdr. Olavo de Araujo and Mme. de Araujo.

Others present were the First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. de Costa Guimaraes, the Commercial Counselor and Mme. Hasslocher, the Military Attache and Mme. Bina Machado, the Second Secretary and Mme. Boulitreau Fragoso, the Second Secretary, Fernando Saboia de Medeiros; the Attache of the Embassy, Manoel Pio Correa, jr.; Miss Betty Boschen and her fiance, Edgar Morris, jr., who is the son of the hosts.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Entertain for Landon Teachers

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark entertained at a small dinner last night for some of the masters at the Landon School, where their young son is a student.

Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Landon Banfield, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sloane, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Nash, William Tripplett, Miss Belle Johnson, Miss Ruth Sowers, and Will K. Ryan.

Later there was music, with both Mr. and Mrs. Nash and Mrs. Clark playing the piano and leading the singing.

Manuel Pereira Leaves Washington

The First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Manuel Pereira, left Washington yesterday, the Chilean government having accepted the resignation he submitted for personal reasons.

Senor Pereira will make an extensive tour throughout the United States and Canada, and later will become connected with an important American firm having interests in South America.

Lady Burney Feted

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home on Observatory circle in compliment to her house guest, Lady Dennistoun Burney, who arrived early this week for a brief visit in Washington. For two days she was with Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett. This week-end she and the Taylors will go to Yorktown and Williamsburg, Va., for a short stay.

Luncheon Given For Mrs. Brock

Mrs. Lister Hill, wife of the Senator from Alabama, entertained yesterday at luncheon in honor of Mrs. William E. Brock, wife of the former Senator from Tennessee.

Mrs. Hill received her guests in the drawing room of their apartment at 2540 Massachusetts avenue. She was wearing a frock of black crepe with a wide jeweled girdle at the waist. In the dining room pink roses were used in profusion.

Mrs. Brock has been for the last week the house guest of Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of the Senator from Georgia, at their apartment in the Mayflower.

Other guests were Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Walter F. George, Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, sr., Mrs. Richard Wilmer, Mrs. John L. DeWitt, wife of Gen. DeWitt, commandant of the Army War College, and Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Max Gardner entertained informally for Mrs. Brock at dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last evening.

The Thompsons Dinner Hosts This Evening

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles F. Thompson, who have been entertaining at a series of parties, will give a dinner this evening at Hotel 2400. There will be 24 guests.

Gen. and Mrs. Thompson will also have guests for dinner tomorrow evening, when they will entertain in their apartment. Among those in the company will be Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Maxwell Murray, Col. and Mrs. William Morris and Col. and Mrs. Howard Snyder.

Edwin Scheid To Wed Julia Adair

Mr. and Mrs. James Wilson Adair, of Arlington, Va., formerly of Huntsville, Ala., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Julia Carolyn Adair, to Edwin Scheid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Scheid, of Falls Church, Va.

The wedding will take place the latter part of May.

Republican Dinner Canceled Over Strike

Samuel F. Pryor, jr., Republican national committeeman from Connecticut, who was to have entertained at a cocktail party today at the Willard in honor of Gov. Raymond E. Baldwin, of Connecticut, and Republican Representatives from that State, has canceled it because of the strike now going on at that hotel.

Gov. Baldwin was to have spoken tonight in one of the series of "Republicans on the March" dinners currently being held, but the dinner has also been canceled.

Off to Miami

Mrs. Evelyn Hall Turner, who has resided in Washington for some years, left yesterday for Miami, Fla., where she will visit for a week before returning to her home in North Carolina, where she will be married on April 1 to Dorsey D. Smith. The wedding will take place in the Duke University chapel.

Dinner Honors Lord Harlech

The Third Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Rumbold entertained at a small dinner last night at their home in Georgetown, in honor of Lord Harlech.

The other guests were Victor Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy; Miss Maude Fuller, of England, who is visiting Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Miss Julie Carpenter, of Middleburg, and Joseph Alsop.

Lord Harlech, who succeeded to the title last year, was Undersecretary of State for the Colonies in 1924 and 1925 and was Secretary for the Colonies from 1936 to 1938. His wife is the daughter of the Marquess of Salisbury.

He will leave Washington today after having been a guest at the British Embassy during his stay here.

'Good-Neighbor' Wedding of Frances Post To Ricardo Santamarina to Draw Many

THE "Good Neighbor" wedding in Aiken April 10 of Frances Lott Post, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Post, to Ricardo Santamarina, of Buenos Aires, will attract several from Washington. The Second Secretary of the Argentine embassy and Senora de Zuberbuhler will leave early next month for the horsey South Carolina resort, and Senor Zuberbuhler and Miguel uirno, of the embassy staff, will be ushers. Mr. Santamarina, an outstanding polo player, is a son of the late Vice President of Argentia, Enrique Santamarina.

Mr. Zuberbuhler, by the way, has no intentions of resigning from the diplomatic service as has been rumored. He and his attractive wife, the former Margot Garrett, have, however, given up their house on Leroy Place beginning April 1 and will probably put up at the Anchorage while awaiting definite orders.

WHO SAYS men don't notice what women wear? Ever since the Wednesday evening square dancing class was started several years ago, most of the feminine members have been wearing dresses they had made up for the occasion — full skirted, ankle-length Paisley print effects. They of dancing, and are inevitably are perfect for this strenuous kind donned every Wednesday. Last night when Neil Connor and Henry Whitney entertained at a buffet supper before the meeting, they stipulated on issuing invitations that all the women guests must wear a different costume for a change—no matter what.

With everyone waiting to see what, Helen Davis appeared on the scene in a peasant costume trimmed with a red apron, and wearing a green bow in her hair. With her was her house guest, Mary Taussig, of New York. Another peasant costume (authentic with Central European influences) was that donned by Alice Dodge. The skirt of this outfit was very red and very bouffant; the blouse had big, full sleeves and topping the ensemble, she wore a tiny red hat.

INGENUITY WITH A heavy "I" was shown in the get-ups worn by the masculine contingent. Mannix Walker took the prize in an ordinary every-day, suit, festooned around the waist with a white table-cloth. On his back was a placard reading, "Rome-Berlin-Kiev Axis." Neil Connor was dresed in pajamas and a polo shirt, and Larry Knapp was greeted with huzzas when he arrived in a pair of shorts and the coat from a soup and fish outfit.

Henry Ehrlich, another of the hosts, was among the many who compromised by we aring sports clothes and sneakers.

Also at the supper were Amory Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Agel, Elizabeth Morison, William Prendergast, Celest Page and Chauncey Ives.

Several other parties were given just before the dance. Among those entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Osgood Nichols and Barbara Donald and Eileen O'Daniel. Miss Donald and Miss O'Daniel gave their supper at the house in Georgetown which they share with Jane Watson and where Miss Watson lived with Baroness Serge Korff before the latter's marriage.

About 100 people showed up later in the evening at the Halton Arms gymnasium, where the dancing was held. Ahead of schedule by two days, decorations were green and white, folowing 17of March motifs. There was also an Irish harp and (for variety), a Scottish bogpipe player, especially imported for the occasion.

ODDS AND ENDS: The Assistant Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Anthony Coleby wil lentertain at dinner a week from Saturday, March 25 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Hartley have cards out for cocktails on Tuesday. . . . Betty Hardie left last night for two weks in New Orleans, her home town, where she was queen of the Mardi Gras ball during her debutante .

Ready for Sun Bath on Beach

Mrs. Clapper's Tea a Success

Through a rain that under ordinary circumstances would keep most persons indoors for the afternoon, a number of women yesterday drove to 209 Primrose street, Chevy Chase, yesterday afternoon for the tea given by Mrs. Raymond Clapper.

Informality was the keynote of the get-together that got under way at 4 o'clock and lasted for well over three hours. Wearing a hostess gown of wistaria taffeta, cut on flowing lines, Mrs. Clapper received in the drawing room. Assisting her was her pretty daughter, Janet, whose smart light blue crepe frock was most becoming to her blond hair and fair complexion.

Six of Mrs. Clapper's friends assisted, alternating at the long tea table, which was centered with a bowl of yellow roses and lighted with tall white candles. In the group of hostesses who took their turns at pouring tea and coffee were Mrs. Walker S. Buell, Mrs. Albert Warner, Mrs. Curtis Walker, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. James Lloyd Wright, Mrs. Franklyn Waltman and Mrs. Thomas L. Stokes.

Among those who dropped in during the afternoon were Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. Walter Chappell, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Harry B. Hawes and her daughter, Mrs. Hawes Dunn; Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Lewis Wood, Mrs. Charles Hurd, Mrs. Barnet Nover and many others.

Miss Whitford Is Honor Guest

Mrs. Donald DeVeau entertained at a luncheon yesterday at her Chevy Chase home in honor of Miss Ordway Whitford, daughter of Mrs. George Whitford, whose marriage to Burton Wadsworth will take place on Saturday.

The guests were Mrs. Whitford, Mrs. Landra Platt, step-mother of the hostess; Miss Harriet Whitford, sister of the bride-to-be; Mrs. Frank Miller, Mrs. Millard West, Mrs. William Mott, Miss Evelyn Chase, Mrs. William B. Kerkam, and Mrs. Harold DeVeau, sister-in-law of Mrs. DeVeau.

Miss Chase will give a cocktail party this afternoon in honor of Miss Whitford and her fiance.

Mrs. Boschen Gives Luncheon For Mrs. Vose

Bridge Party Honors Visitor From New York

Christopher, of New Hampshire; Mrs. Charles Williamson, Mrs. Harry Ayre, Mrs. John Allen Dougherty and Mrs. Strickland Gilliland.

Gen. and Mrs. Boschen's daughter, Miss Betty Boschen, will be married the latter part of June to Edgar Morris, jr. Mrs. Tracy Axton, of New York, will be Miss Boschen's matron of honor. Mrs. Axton, the former Miss Florence Gotthelf, is a cousin of Miss Boschen's and was married on January 7, in the Boschen apartment here, with Miss Boschen as her only attendant. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Gotthelf, of Colorado.

French Envoy Aids Show for Bryn Mawr Club

The French Ambassador, Count de Saint Quentin, has taken tickets for the Bryn Mawr benefit performance of "Candida," starring Cornelia Otis Skinner, at the National Theater on March 20. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund of the college.

The Bryn Mawr Club is particularly pleased to have the Ambassador's support because there has always been a cordial relationship between the college and French authorities. The University of Paris was the first foreign university with which Bryn Mawr exchanged students.

Mrs. William Byron and Mrs. Newbold Noyes are among those whose names recently have been added to the list of patronesses.

Albanian Envoy Supports Concert

The Minister of Albania, Faik Konitza, has added his name to the list of patrons for the benefit concert to be given by Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer for Opportunity House on Sunday evening. The concert will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J .E. Saugstad in Massachusetts avenue.

Among other patrons are the Military Attache of Poland and Mme. Andrzej Chramiec; the Counselor of the Czecho-Slovak Legation and Mme. Karel Brejska; Coleman Jennings, Dr. and Mrs. A. J. McCartney, Dr. and Mrs. Oscar Blackwelder, Mrs. M. Webster Dawley, Mrs. H. H. Hutchinson, Mrs. James McKane and Dr. and Mrs. J. Ellsworth Virnstein.

Guest at Shoreham

Mrs. K. Marjorie Noble, of London, who arrived in New York last week on the Queen Mary, is at the Shoreham for a brief stay before accompanying Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Clinton Russell to their residence at Langley Field, Va. They came to Washington to meet her.

'At Home' Planned

Mme. Mircea Victor Babes, wife of the Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, has cards out for an "at home" on Monday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Kerby Is Picked To Head Club Slate

Nominating Committee Announces Names for Chevy Chase Organization; Dr. Parran Speaks

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby was named for the office of president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday when the nominating committee, headed by Mrs. Karl Fenning, presented its slate at the March meeting of the club. Dr. Thomas Parren, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, was the guest speaker of the afternoon.

Mrs. Kerby was chairman of the "$8,000 Committee" which raised more than that amount, making it possible to start work last May on the new clubhouse, Connecticut avenue and Dunlap street, which was completed in October. Mrs. Kerby was also treasurer of the building company during the erection of the clubhouse. Her election, with that of the other nominees on the slate, is expected to be unanimous when the club votes in May. She will succeed Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, who has served for two terms.

Others on the slate included Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, first vice president; Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, second vice president; Mrs. Philip Gott, recording secretary; Mrs. F. S. Brackett, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Louis F. Murphy, treasurer; Mrs. Roy Jorolemon, assistant treasurer.

Action Taken on Zoning Bill

The club voted to indorse the bill sponsored by the Montgomery County Civic Federation regarding zoning of property. This provides that a sign be placed on the site for two weeks before the hearing in order to inform persons in the neighborhood as to the effort to change the zoning. The present provisions are that the hearing be advertised in "a county paper" and the result has been that rezoning has been accomplished frequently without the legal notice having come to the attention of residents in areas most concerned.

Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson, past president, asked the passage of an emergency resolution expressing opposition to any American participation in the aggression of the Japanese in China, through the sale of scrap iron or other war materials.

The club also passed a resolution requesting the General Federation of Women's Clubs to submit resolutions to be acted on at its convention, 90 days instead of 60 days, before the date of the meeting.

Dr. Parran Urges Better Health Facilities

Dr. Parran's talk dealt with the need for uniform health services throughout the country, reaching rural districts which are now without adequate facilities. He said people on relief often had difficulty in obtaining medical care because of red tape, and advocated health insurance, a fund to care for persons who suffer loss of wages during illness.

The program also included music by a double quartet from the Music Section, accompanied by Mrs. S. Jay McCathran. The singers were: Mrs. D. B. Groff, Mrs. Ben Fisher, Mrs. J. J. Underwood, Mrs. Philip Gott, Mrs. Hogan, Mrs. Robert Bryant, Mrs. C. T. Oechsle, Mrs. Thomas Gulick and Mrs. H. L. Murrell.

Announcement was made by Mrs. Frederick Espenchied, chairman of the literature section of the club, of its program tomorrow afternoon at which Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of the woman's page of The Post and author of the column "The Gentler Sex," will speak. Her topic will be "Women Are Funny." Mrs. Harry F. Lowe, of the club, will preesent one of Miss Lindsay's monologues, called "Peace." The hostess for tea following the meeting, will be Mrs. Frank Stetson.

Feminine Foibles Dramatizeed for Church Society

Feminine foibles were both discussed and dramatized in a program presented yesterday before the Rector's Aid of St. Margaret's Church by Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of the Woman's Page of The Post, and Mrs. Ida Nullman Brown, dramatic reader.

Miss Lindsay, who writes "The Gentler Sex" column on the Woman's Page of The Post, discussed the types of women that appear humorous to other women and those that appear humorous to men. Mrs. Brown gave readings from "The Gentler Sex" column to illustrate her talk. The monologues presented were "Telephone Personality," "You Can Use My Name," "Waiting for the Taxi," and "Coming of Spring."

Miss Lindsay was introduced by Mrs. R. Winston Holt. Mrs. Wall, vice president of the Aid, presided.

Randolph-Macon Alumnae to Dine

Mrs. Powell Glass, of Lynchburg, Va., daughter-in-law of Senator Carter Glass, and president of the Randolph-Macon Alumnae Association, will be guest of honor and principal speaker at the Founder's Day banquet of the Washington chapter of the alumnae at the University Women's Club, Saturday evening. The toastmistress, Mrs. Mary Hurt Baskerville, of Arlington Hall, Va., a classmate of Mrs. Glass, will be introduced by Miss Marion Magruder, president of the local chapter.

Among the invited guests are Senator Glass; his sister, Mrs. Blair Banister, who is assistant treasurer of the United States; Mr. Banister, and Mr. and Mrs. Barret Prettyman. Mr. Prettyman is a trustee of Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

Madame Chang, of Shanghai, who, as Sieu Tsung Lok, was the first Chinese student to graduate from Randolph-Macon, will attend. She is touring the United States with her daughter, who is one of the dancers starred in "An Evening in Cathay," which will have a return engagement in Washington on March 22.

Young Peoples League Plans Festival Sunday

Sunday evening the recently-organized Young Peoples League of the Beth Sholom Synagogue will hold a gala spring festival and variety show at the synagogue. The proceeds of this first major event of the new organization will go the building fund.

Acting as master of ceremonies, will be Morris Freed, who recently entertained at the President's birthday balls. For the jitterbugs, there will be Yassie and Billie Schwartz, entrants in the Capitol Theater jitterbug contest. There, will be 10 solos by Dan Cavalier, and popular songs and specialty dances by Sylvia Gold, Estelle Dick, and Marvin Yeago, who has recently returned from Hollywood. Sylvia Kaplowitz, will present a sextet of her accordian pupils.

They'll All Be Elected in May

Underwood & Underwood.

A slate of officers which will go through without opposition in the May election of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, was presented by Mrs. Karl Fenning, chairman of the nominating committee, yesterday. They are (left to right, front row) Mrs. Henry DeC. Adams, nominated as vice president; Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby, president; Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, second vice president; Mrs. Philip T. Cott, recording secretary. Back row, Mrs. Louis Murphy, treasurer, and Mrs. Roy Jorolemon, assistant treasurer

Party to Aid Cincinnati

March 22 has been set as the date for a card party at the home of Mrs. Lar Anderson, 2118 Massachusetts avenue, by the newly appointed women's committee of the Society of the Cincinnati. The proceeds will go to maintenance and operation of the mansion, which Mrs. Anderson presented to the society about a year ago to be used as a national headquarters.

Former Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, has been named chairman of the women's committee of which the other members are Mrs. Robert Copeland Jones, who is chairman of the party; Mrs. Walter Gibson Peter, Mrs. Sterling, Mrs. William Marbury Beall, Mrs. Charles Warren, Miss Janet Fish, Mrs. Mason Fitzhugh Ball, Mrs. Harry Black, Mrs. Randolph Dickens and Mrs. J. N. Steed.

Mrs. Jenkes last year introduced a bill which passed both the House and Senate, providing that the property be free from taxation when and if it is taken over by the Society of the Cincinnati. This organization was formed by Gen. Washington's officers at the close of the revolution.

Mrs. Anderson still occupies the home which is filled with objects of art from all parts of the world, and has one of the finest collections of jade in this country. It will be maintained as a museum as well as the society's headquarters under present plans which include the raising of an endowment fund for its maintenance.

Dr. Hans Kindler, Miss Tuohy to Be Arts Club Hosts

Miss Anne Tuohy and Dr. Hans Kindler will be hosts at the Arts Club dinner tonight, preceding the recital for the benefit of the National Symphony Orchestra to be given by Miss Dorothy Seegar and Howard Mitchell.

Among those who will have guests are Miss Blanche L. Polkinhorn, Mrs. Robert Walter Mess, Mr. and Mrs. Felian Garzia, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Richards, Mrs. Walter E. Hilton, Mrs. Thomas H. Myers, Mrs. Alice S. Byrnes, Miss Sue V. Hess, Miss Nellie Lichtenstein and Miss Christine Levine.

Others attended will be Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bittinger, the Misses Bright, Mrs. V. F. Tapke, Mrs. Carlton Van Valkenburg, Mrs. Dorothy H. Bowman, Miss Frances van den Bogert, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Staley, Miss Margaret M. Ashford, Miss Edith M. Pyles, Mrs. Elizabeth Northrup, Mrs. Charles W. Fairfax, Mrs. Carl Casey, the Misses Hobart, and Mrs. Boyd Taylor.

Park View Garden Club Luncheon Honors Founder, Mrs. Triplett

MRS. RODERICK TRIPLETT, of Portsmouth, Va., yesterday was honored as founder of the West Park View Garden Club at its sixteenth anniversary luncheon. She was recently elected president of the club for the fifteenth time. She is also a member of the Women's National Press Club, and was here for its annual stunt party ten days ago.

Mrs. Constance Spry, of London, who lectured here last week, was among the distinguished guests present at the luncheon which was given at the Portsmouth Country Club, and officers of the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs were others. Those from Washington who were invited included Mrs. Frederick Benton, Mrs. Randolph Hopkins, Mrs. Louise Wassell and Miss Margaretta Campbell.

Mrs. Triplett is a woman of diversified interests with a record for achievement in all of them—"She looketh well to the ways of her household"—and behold, even her daughters-in-law rise up and call her blessed—she has four of them, too. "Her first sons were 'triplets,' the others are 'just twins,'" according to a local wag in Virginia.

She and her husband built their home on the sands of West Park View—where a tidewater beach allows them to have a private launch—and to use it almost every month in the year. Between the beach and the home is a garden spot which is the envy of all good neighbors—except those to whom she sent bunches of bulbs, bags of seeds, and slews of free catalogues until she had them all in her now famous West Park View Garden Club.

In addition to other activities, she is society editor of the Portsmouth Star.

MRS. WILLIAM LYTTLE SHURZ was awarded first prize yesterday at the final session of the Wednesday public speaking class which has been conducted by Mrs. Hugh Butler this season at All Souls Church. Mrs. Shurz won by vote of the class on the basis of having shown the most improvement. Second prize went to Mrs. E. G. Purvis, toastmistress as the best speaker. Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel and Mrs. George Stringfellow, of New Jersey, who were guests of honor, acted as tellers when the votes were cast. The affair was a luncheon at the Little Tea House, in Arlington.

CHERRY BLOSSOM time in Washington is heralded by the March issue of The Democratic Digest. The cover shows a picture of the Washington Monument, looking across the reflecting pool, through a lacework of blossoms. Helen Essary, one of the active members of the "Women's National Press Club, is editor of the Digest and Virginia Rishel, associate editor.

Other striking views of Washington accompany an article Mrs. Essary has written, giving sightseeing suggestions for members of the affiliated Clubs who will gather here next week for the biennial convention at the Women's National Democratic Club.

Among other items of interest, the magazine carries the announcement of the appointment of Margarete L. Clark, as chief of industrial welfare for the State of California. Mrs. Clark, former member of the Los Angeles board of education and, for two terms, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club there, visits the Capital frequently and has many friends here.

Mrs. Roosevelt's page, on which she answers questions submitted by readers, is a feature; there is an article by Betty Lindley on "Youth Want Jobs" and a reprint from The Post of Robert C. Albright's story of February 26, "Congress Celebrates 150th Anniversary."

THE PICKET LINE at the Willard Hotel put a crimp in the plans of the Soroptimist Club to entertain Robert Brennan, the Minister of Ireland, yesterday at its St. Patrick's luncheon. The club postponed his visit and was addressed instead by Robert Emmett Lynch, former corporation counsel, and a member of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

Green carnations and little pots of shamrock, as well, carried out the St. Patrick's color scheme, and the Irish and American flags hung side by side. Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the club, paid tribute to the Irish and referred to her late husband, John F. Bennett, as "the dearest Irish lad that was ever born."

Mrs. Mary Catherine Lewis, whose father was a founder of the branch of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in Cincinnati years ago, was chairman of the day's program and introduced Mr. Lynch.

MRS. FRANK H. TOWNER, chairman of the House Committee for the Continental Congress of the National Society, D. A. R., finds herself swamped with questions from delegates planning to attend.

One woman in the Middle West inquired: "Shall I wear my red flannels?"

"By all means, if you don't let them show," was Mrs. Towner's reply.

Many inquire what to do with their husbands while they are attending the sessions, and for these, Mrs. Towner has a neatly prepared sight-seeing chart which she sends to them.

THE WASHINGTON ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION of Kappa Delta Sorority will hold its March meeting at the chapter house, 1756 K street at 8 o'clock tonight.

Girl Scout Leaders to Dine

The Girl Scout Leaders' Association of the District will have its annual dinner in Barker Hall of the Y. W. C. A. tonight, celebrating the twenty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the organization. Council and committee members of the District and leaders from Arlington, Alexandria and Prince Georges County will be guests.

The program will include English country dances under the direction of Miss Helen Seth-Smith, formerly of the English Girl Guides; a talk on the Girl Scout program by Mrs. Maury Middleton; songs led by Mrs. Carolyn O. Green, and birthday toasts by Mrs. W. F. Crosby, Girl Scout commissioner, and the five presidents of the leaders' associations, Mrs. Hazel Walker, Mrs. LeRoy Barton, Mrs. L. E. Warren, Mrs. J. R. Detherage and Mrs. Minnie Mahler.

There will be exhibits of Girl Scout handicraft.

Actress Speaks To Zonta Club

Ruth Harsha McKenzie spoke yesterday before the Zonta Club at its weekly luncheon at the Y. W. C. A., telling of her experiences in radio and stage work.

Last summer she was in stock on Long Island and played with Douglas Montgomery and Blanche Yurka and also appeared with Sybil Thorndyke in "The Distaff Side." Miss McKenzie has been connected here with playground work and was formerly on the faculty of the University of oSuthern California and of Friends School in Philadelphia, where she conducted a voice clinic.

She was introduced by Miss Vera Lundquist, and Miss Emma T. Hahm, Zonta president, presided at the business meeting.

New members welcomed into the club yesterday were Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker for the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, and Miss Mary Ellie Dashiel, president of the Washington Story League. Among the guests at the luncheon was Mrs. Lyle Campbell, national vice president of the Story League and a member of the St. Louis Zonta Club.

Jewish Junior Plan To Dance in Overalls

A gingham and overall dance will be given Saturday night by a group from the Washington Chapter of the National Council of Jewish Juniors at the Capital ballroom, 525 Thirteenth street, as a benefit for the Dorothy Goldsmith Camp fund.

Miss Kaye Orloff is chairman of the committee for arrangements, assisted by Miss Ruth Shapiro, Miss Gertrude Shapiro, Miss Jean Karp, Miss Mary Koblentz, Miss Harriet Aronovitch and Miss Gertrude Izakoff.

Mrs. Smedberg Is Re-elected Head of Army Relief Society

Wife of Brigadier General Has Been President Of District Chapter for Five Years; Annual Report Shows $7,200 Was Raised During Year

—CLUBS THURS—ARMY— ... ... teupythe...

Mrs. William R. Smedberg, wife of Brig. Gen. Smedberg, yesterday was re-elected president of the District of Columbia Chapter of the Army Relief Society. Forty-five members attended the annual meeting at the home, 1810 Wyoming avenue.

Mrs. Smedberg has served as head of the local chapter for the last five years. Other new officers are: Mrs. George Marshall, wife of Brig. Gen. Marshall, assistant chief of staff; Mrs. Julian Schley, wife of Maj. Gen. Schley, chief of engineers; Mrs. Wallace DeWitt, wife of Brig. Gen. DeWitt, commandant of the medical center at Walter Reed Hospital; Mrs. Walter L. Finley and Mrs. Harry L. Cavanaugh, vice presidents; Mrs. Ernest Graves, secretary and Brig. Gen. Smedberg, treasurer.

Report Shows Large Sum Raised

Mrs. Smedberg's annual report showed the most successful year financially the organization has ever had. It has raised more than $7,000, including dues, contributions and proceeds of ten card parties. Among the affairs were the tea given for cadets and midshipmen at the Christmas season by Mrs. John DeWitt, wife of Maj. Gen. DeWitt, of the Army War College; a dance at Bolling Field, a tea dance at the Medical center and a sale at St. Margaret's Parish House early in the winter.

Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the chief of staff, was present at yesterday's meeting and told the convention of the national society, which she attended last week in New York.

Mrs. T. Morris, chairman of the relief work, gave a report.

Society Started After Spanish War

The Army Relief Society was established after the Spanish American War to give emergency assistance to widows and orphans of the officers and enlisted men of the Regular Army. The plight of the widow of an Army man is doubly hard, members of the organization point out, because not only has she lost her husband but also is obliged to move at once from her home in Army quarters. No civilian can understand her situation so well nor deal with it so sympathetically as can Army people, they say, and this was the reason for the founding of the society.

In addition to financial assistance the society helps find employment and endeavors to secure scholarships for orphans. Memorial funds have been left to be used in aiding these young people, with their educations but the general funds of the society can only go for actual emergency aid and may not be used for scholarships.

Barrett Circle Meets

The Reba Barrett Circle of the Florence Crittenton Home will have a luncheon meeting today at the home of Mrs. O. H. George, 7608 Alaska avenue.

Mrs. Morgenthau Will Entertain Rural Youth Group

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., will be hostess to members of the Washington Branch of the Alliance for the Guidance of Rural Youth at a meeting next Wednesday night at her home, 2211 Thirtieth street.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president, has announced a program in which "The Needs of Youth" will be discussed by youth themselves. She believes the young may bring out some points the experts on their problems may have overlooked.

There will also be an exhibit of rural art and presentation of rural music.

Mrs. Stinson Says Husband Struck Her

Fresh Charges Made Under Questioning In Annulment Trial

Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson, 54 and wealthy, met a grilling cross examination yesterday with a fresh budget of charges against the versatile artist she claims drugged her and married her for her money.

Justice Luhring is hearing her action to get the marriage annulled. She also wants the money back.

Mrs. Stinson was questioned by Carroll L. Beedy, former representative from Maine, who is defending florid, 56-year-old Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, former State Department lawyer, engineer, artist and would-be author.

Calls Husband Spendthrift

Earlier this week Mrs. Stinson complained that her marriage was only a "spiritual" one and that her husband spent her money "like a drunken sailor."

Breaking into Beedy's questions yesterday, she assured the court and a packed gallery of socially prominent spectators that Stinson struck her, flirted with girl artists at Peggys Cove, Nova Scotia, and gave liquor parties in her home at 2419 Wyoming avenue while she was in the hospital.

She denied she called the girl artists bad names. Beedy asked whether she hadn't called them strumpets. "I didn't know they were," snapped Mrs. Stinson.

Beedy pressed Mrs. Stinson about the little bright colored pills she claims were given her to break down her will until she got married in such a daze that she didn't know what was happening. She said she had suffered from asthma, sinus trouble, an ear ailment and hay fever and that she took medicine and injections for these. The injections, she said, caused her to have thick ankles.

Blamed on Drugs

The thickness of her ankles she had previously blamed on the drugs she claims were given her.

Mrs. Stinson roved through more details about the $27,000 she gave Stinson when they parted (which she wants back) and the $230,000 trust fund she set up for herself for life and after that to Stinson.

"I'll see that you get your trust back any time you want it," she claimed her husband told her.

Mrs. Stinson, who talked so rapidly for so long Tuesday that a court stenographer asked for a recess, answered Beedy with breathless haste and replete detail, looking for help when she faltered.

"You know what I mean, judge," she once told Justice Luhring. "You answer the question for me."

Miners Agree Not to Strike Pending New Wage Contract

Present Pact Expires March 31; Workers Seek Pay Increase and Operators Want Cut; Producers Call Demands Ruinous

By the United Press.

New York, March 15.—A strike of 320,000 Eastern bituminous miners April 1 appeared averted tonight as the United Mine Workers Union offered to work after their present contract with Appalachian soft coal producers expires March 31.

United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis asked the operators to join him "before the end of this week" in a guarantee to the consuming public, industrialists, "nervous" businessmen and the Government that there will be no suspension of operations during 1939.

Lewis' offer came after the producers had countered union wage increase demands with a pay cut proposal.

Similar contract extensions have been arranged in the past while negotiations for new agreements continued.

Charles O'Neill, New York, president of Eastern Coal Sales Co., and spokesman for the producers rejected the U. M. W.'s demands for a 50-cent daily wage increase, a 30-hour week, a guarantee of 200 working days per year, and two weeks' annual vacation with pay.

He said granting of the demands would "hopelessly and totally wreck the industry" and add from $225,000,000 to $300,000,000 to the public's coal bill.

On behalf of the operators, he proposed a 50 cents per day wage cut by returning to wage, hour and working conditions standards contained in the previous agreement which expired March 31, 1937.

The present agreement provides for a 35-hour week, with a basic daily wage of $6 in the North and $5.60 in the South. The operators asked no change in the hours provision, but did ask that the Northern wage rate be cut to $5.50 and the Southern to $5.10. The U. M. W. proposal would raise the scale to $6.50 in the North and $6.10.

Demands of both groups were referred to a negotiating committee of 16 from each side. The committee will begin its negotiations at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Four Universities Compete Tonight In Oratory

Four local universities will compete tonight for oratorical honors and a silver cup as part of the observance of the United States Constitutional Sesquicentennial. The competition will be held in the Natural History Building, National Museum, at 8 p. m.

American University will be represented by Miss Mary Slappey, of Washington; Catholic University by Francis A. Spitzig, of Lakewood, Ohio; Georgetown University by Burke E. Schoensee, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Trinity College by Miss Rita Walsh, of Chicago.

Chapter K of P. E. O. Elect Officers

Officers of Chapter K of P. E. O. were anounced yesterday by Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, past president. They are Mrs. K. F. Waner, president; Mrs. Adam Weir, vice president; Mrs. Art Brown, recording secretary; Mrs. Anthony Gould, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Claude R. Porter, treasurer; Mrs. C. William Ramseyer, chaplain, and Mrs. Milton Rygh, guard. Mrs. Warner and Mrs. Fohrman will attend the District P. E. O. convention in May.

Women Juniors Plan All-States Dinner

An All-States Dinner will be held today at 6 p. m. at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest, sponsored by the Junior unit of the Women's Society. Entertainment will include music by Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Halbach and Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Toone; solo dances by Ruth and Lucille Burgess; parlor magic by Carl Oelschig, and colored films of the West Coast shown by Dr. Rush Conklin.

Dr. Bassler to Speak

Dr. Ray Smith Bassler, head of the geology department of George Washington University, will address the Men's Brotherhood of Luther Place Memorial Church, Saturday night.

Board of Trade To Hear Talks on District Plan

The Griffenhagen District reorganization proposals will be aired tonight by Frank O. Everett, member of the Griffenhagen staff, and Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, when the Board of Trade meets at the Mayflower Hotel.

Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the municipal finance committee, will report on the group's position in the present tax controversy.

The meeting also will feature the presentation of awards to members of the Police and Fire departments for meritorious service last year.

Cafeteria Firm Sued By Income Tax Expert

Oliver F. Busby, of 4616 Chevy Chase boulevard, sued yesterday in District Court for fees of $17,800 he claims for getting $108,000 in income tax refunds for the Welfare and Recreational Association of Public Buildings and Grounds, Inc., 1135 Twenty-first street northwest.

The corporation operates cafeterias for Government workers.

Delaware State Society Will Meet on Monday

The Delaware State Society will meet at 8 p. m. Monday at the Thomas Circle Club, 1320 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

DON BUDGE ROUTS FRED PERRY, 6-2, 6-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 15.

The mile and a quarter of the Kentucky Derby is no job for the lady horse it has been pretty well established in the 64 years of the Churchill Downs affair, and thus it is that bookmakers are offering 20-1 odds that no filly will even go to the post in the May 6 Derby.

POVICH

Regret was a famous horse if for no other reason than she was the only filly in history to win the Derby. That was in 1915. Virtually every year before and since, fillies have tried and failed to match Regret's feat. Most notable of their recent failures was the race run by Nellie Flag in the Omaha Derby after winning strong public backing in the face of the historical futility of fillies.

But bookies wouldn't be offering 20 to 1 that no filly would go to the post this year, except for what appears to be a sad clerical mistake somewhere along the line. They may have shied at offering as much as 10 to 1 that a filly wouldn't win the race. Because a filly named Ciencia would have received powerful backing. The King Ranch's daughter of Cohort—Science only a few weeks ago won the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby for 3-year-olds, licking the best 2-year-olds on the West Coast in a common gallop. Then the shocking discovery was made that Ciencia was not entered in the Derby. The stable insisted the entry had been made but Churchill Downs officials said it had never been received and so Ciencia is out.

Bad Bet as Derby Threat

We don't know exactly what the prejudice against lady horses in the Derby is, except that they are known to be a bad risk. Robert S. Dowst, the eminent turf authority, always has said that fillies and mares are never a good bet between February and September. They are not apt to keep their minds on racing, he says. Yet fillies have won big mid-summer stakes, and not so very many years ago Nelly Morse took down the Preakness in May.

Currently the bookies are quoting William Ziegler, jr.'s El Chico as the winter book favorite among the 115 nominations at odds ranging from 4 to 1 to 6 to 1, but smart bettors are not particularly intrigued by El Chico. The colt was, of course, the best 2-year-old of 1938 by many pounds and many lengths, but it happened too often that star 2-year-olds do not maintain championship form as 3-year-olds.

Colts that were soundly licked by El Chico last summer in the big stakes may eventually go to the post more strongly backed than the chestnut son of John P. Grier. These include Technician, Volitant, Johnstown and Benefactor. The latter colt will naturally draw a heap of sentimental support from the Kentucky hardboots who bet anything that Col. Bradley sends to the post in the Derby. Four times they have been handsomely rewarded.

Black Gold Punctured Old Theory

Benefactor, like El Chico, was withheld from winter racing, which brings us around to another slant on the Derby. Time was when colts that campaigned in the winter were regarded as very poor Derby risks indeed, but that viewpoint has undergone a drastic revision. Black Gold punctured the theory that winter horses could not win the Derby when he won it in a breeze in 1924, after campaigning through a full schedule at the New Orleans track.

Turf owners with Derby candidates once would not dream of campaigning their horses on the winter tracks. Derby horses were nursed along carefully and brought to a peak for the Kentucky race. The winter tracks were for the smaller stables which couldn't afford to let their horses remain idle.

But now it is the wealthy owners with large strings of horses who can't afford to pass up the winter tracks. They can't afford to do that because tracks such as Santa Anita with its $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap and its $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, and a pair of $25,000 stakes offer too much of an inducement. And Joseph E. Widener holds out $50,000 to the winner of the Widener Handicap, and $20,000 to winner of Hialeah's Flamingo Stakes for 3-year-olds.

$1,875 Already in Derby Till

Out of these Flamingo Stakes came the winner of last year's Derby, Lawrin, which was added proof, if any were needed, that winter campaigners can go on to take the Derby. And this same Woolford Stable which sent Lawrin to the post in the Derby, this year will present Technician another son of Insco, and another winner of the Flamingo Stakes.

There is already $1,875 in the Derby till, paid in by the owners who nominated 115 entries for the race at $25 per nomination. And nearly $10,000 will be added to the Churchill Downs exchequer after the scratches are announced and each owner who accepts the issue pays $500 as a starting fee for his horse. And because approximately $50,000 will go to the winner, the winning owner who had faith enough in his horse to post the $500 starting fee, will get no less than 100 to 1 on his investment. Daddy, buy me a Derby horse.

On the Line

With Considine

New York, March 15.—The spread of night baseball is going to do much to cheapen the value of big league pitching records. Don't be surprised this year if Bobby Feller strikes out 22 or 23 men some foggy night in Cleveland, or if some brash young pitcher comes along to equal or top any one of the cherished records so painstakingly established by the old masters.

CONSIDINE

In a couple of years the remaining clubs that hover on the brink of bankruptcy will go for the lights. A few years after that the number of night home games will be increased from eight to 14 for each club and eventually in some cities like St. Louis, Philadelphia and one or two others the only time the athletes will see the sun will be on holidays and Sundays. With the expansion of night games the pitching record books will become as worthless as mimeographed nickels.

The pitcher has been the most penalized player in the hundred years of baseball. He was roundly condemned as a bad sport when he learned to curve the pill. He was moved back from 45 feet to 55 to 60½. He was refused the use of certain potions with which he had learned to annoint the ball, at the very same time that the firm owners filled the center of the pills with powdered jackrabbits. Perhaps he has a break coming to him.

Names of Great Pitchers Remain Undimmed

But down through the years certain great pitchers achieved records that stood, and still stand, like rugged milestones along the path of the game. Batting records and team records of bygone heroes were, for the most part, reached and surpassed by a generation of strong-backed moderns who took full advantage of the jumping-bean juice in the ball. The whole outlook on batting changed, until a man was known for his ability to hit the ball up against or over the fences. But the old order remained in pitching.

Somehow the names of the great pitchers remain undimmed. Rusie and Radbourne, Waddell, Griffith, Chesbro, Mathewson, Johnson, Young, Alexander . . . They're as real to a younger generation of fans as if they were still active. Pennock, Grove, Gomez, Dean, Hubbell and one or two others became great because their deeds could be measured by the rigid yardstick of what the immortals before them had done.

Suggests Rewriting Baseball Record Book

To me that yardstick is now cracked, for the day is not far off when pitchers who don't deserve to carry the gloves of some of the above named will transcend the factual records of the past. Perhaps it might be wise to rewrite the baseball record books, using 1920 as the dividing line between the old and lively-ball hitters, and 1939, the year that night ball became economically imperative, as the dividing line between the legitimate pitching records of the past and the tainted and bargain-rate heroics of the present.

Speaking of night ball, Fred Sington, the former all-America football player who is now irying for an outfield job with the Brooklyn Dodgers, wonders just what an umpire could rule if the lighting system blew a fuse some night in the middle of an important game. Would it be the same as if a cloudburst had intervened? How long would a home team be given to buy a new fuse? And could a losing home team be forced to repair the lights, when it would help them to have the game called off completely?

Freddy Sington 'Hit the Dirt'

Sington had a strange experience in a night game several years ago, when he was a bush-leaguer. The lights on this field were not particularly good, nor did the opposing pitcher have much control. But Fred had done all right. In his first thre times at bat he had hit terrific line drives through the infield, and now he was up for the fourth time, and everyone was on guard. Fred stood there with a toe hold on the plate, waving his huge batting pole menacingly.

The pitcher cranked up a fast ball and let it fly, but just as the ball left his hand the central fuse blew out and the field was dunked into stygian blackness. Remembering the wildness of the pitcher, Sington dived head first into the dirt. But just as he hit the ground the lights switched back on again, leaving him there prostrate in the pitiless glare.

He lay there stunned with embarrassment, then looked up sheepishly. He blinked his eyes. Then he blinked them again and roared with relief and laughter. For the wild pitcher, the catcher, the two umpires, all the infielders, the two baseline coaches, and the left fielder, centerfielder and rightfielder were—like him—flat on their stomachs.

Perfection the Goal as Hyattsville Juniors Drill for All-Gym Night

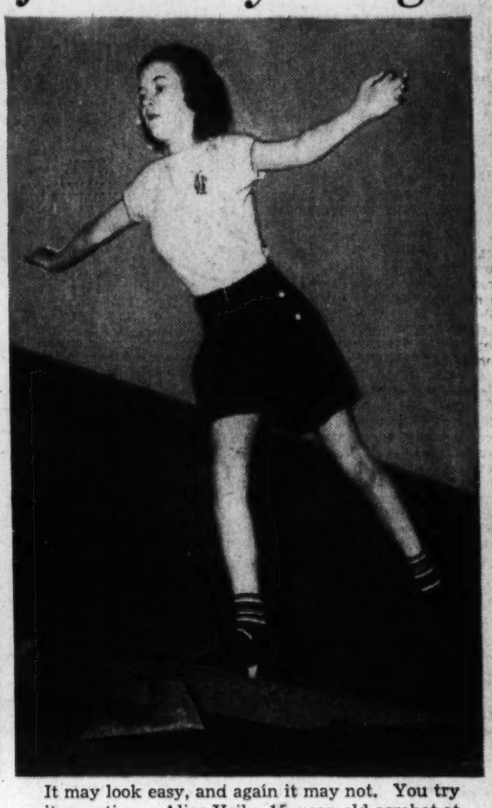
A number which will highlight All-Gym Night, classically dubbed "The Wedding," gets a tryout here. The preacher with the Rathbonian profile is Kenwood Calfee. The lucky man about to tender an oversized ring is Benjamin Anderson, and Roland Naim acts as best man. The blushing bride, done up in a tennis net veil, is Flora Benson



It may look easy, and again it may not. You try it sometime. Alice Veily, 15-year-old acrobat at Hyattsville Junior High, practices her rail fence stunt, which she will put on at All-Gym Night, on the nearest approach to a rail fence the gym affords. It's a board stretched between chairs

N. J. Runner Beats Half-mile Record

Don Lash Fails to Set New Mark In Two-Mile Event at Dartmouth Games; Fordham Sets Relay Standard

By the Associated Press.

Hanover, N. H., March 15.—John Borican, Negro sensation of the current indoor track season, turned in his third and fourth world record-smashing performances and the Fordham mile relay team wiped out a 6-year-old world mark in that event in tonight's battle against time on Dartmouth's lightning fast 6 2-3 lags board track.

Borican, whose most recent record-breaking fear appears to have been futile because he was charged with beating the gun, wiped out the indoor half-mile's 11-years-old mark when he burst the tape in 1:49.8 while leading the closest of his four Dartmouth rivals, Bob Unangst, who had a 95-yard handicap, by 10 yards.

While so doing, Borican automatically became the owner of the 800-meters indoor record also set by Lloyd Hahn, whose time for that and the half-mile distance was recorded as 1:51.4 back in 1928.

Regarded "Perfect" Runner

The fleet Kinston, N. J., Negro, regarded by many experts as the "perfect" runner, already has set a new indoor mark of 2:39-flat for the two-thirds mile distance. Last Saturday night in New York, while overcoming three mighty challenges by Glenn Cunningham, who raced his amazing 4:04.4 mile here last year, Borican was timed in 2:09.8 for the "1,000." That recording was 1.3 seconds under the mighty Kansan's indoor mark for that event but officials have refused to sanction it.

Two other Dartmouth rivals trailed Borican and Unangst—Bob Williams, who had a 30-yards start on the Negro flyer, and Hal Wonson, sent away 10 yards in front of him.

Rambs Rally to Win

The Fordham team triumph came after the Rams trailed New York University's I. C. 4-A indoor champions during the first two legs, swapped the advantage on the anchor, and ended with Wes Wallace in 3:15.2, 1.8 seconds under the

Reds' Reserves Improved, Says Bill McKechnie

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., March 15.—Last year his team carried the reserves, but this year Skipper Bill McKechnie, of the Cincinnati Reds, plans to be prepared for any eventualities. The reserves will carry his team, if necessary.

The Reds were handicapped by lack of capable second-stringers in the 1938 campaign, and this fact, combined with Pitcher Lee Grissom's misfortunes and a defensive weakness in the infield, ruined whatever pennant chances existed.

McKechnie can't do much about Grissom but put a grazing rope on him when he gets on base so he won't stray, but he is trying to bolster the reserve strength and remedy that defensive weakness. He's succeeding with the reserves, anyway, but whether the infield will be a bright spot in the defense remains to be seen.

"I'd say if there is any improvement this year it will be in our reserves," ventured the baseball bass with the college professor appearance.

On the records, anyway, it looks like the Reds' second wave will be more potent, and down here where the sun shines every day and twice on Sunday the boys are showing up well. What they will do ltaer is what we would, with great originality, term a question mark.

Boy, Do Those Feminine Basketeers Have Tempers!

Dear public, we're up to our necks in feminine trouble and here's why:

In writing-up a story on Rockville A. A. Girls' victory over Leader Hi last Sunday we innocently included a statement from the team's publicity director who said it was the seventy-ninth victory in three years for the Montgomery County sextet which had been tied only once in that period. "Last season," the story read, "Georgetown A. C., after holding Rockville to a 15-15 score in the first half, walked off the floor and the game was not finished."

If you have not already guessed, the telephone started to ring insistently and the mail carrier's back was bent under a load of protests from the Georgetown A. C. team members, their friends and relatives. It has gotten so bad that in self-defense we wish to announce that Georgetown A. C. has challenged Rockville to a game anywhere and anytime on a neutral floor.

The West End's team press representative sums up the situation as follows:

"The Rockville A. A. girls basketball team previously announced in the papers that the Georgetown A. C. walked off the floor at half-time in a 15-15 game. This was not so. The game was completed in four 8-minute quarters. This game was to be replayed but somehow the Rockville girls have refused to play. The Georgetown A. C. challenges the Rockville girls to a game on a neutral floor, providing the game is refereed by a recognized official. The Georgetown A. C. girls, boasting 39 straight victories, think they can stop Rockville anytime and at any place with the above qualifications. If the Rockville A. A. has nerve enough to accept this challenge, please call "Ikie" Honabach, Chestnut 1415 after 7 p. m.

Rockville is presently engaged with the defense of its Post-A. A. U. unlimited title. Georgetown A. C. is not entered in the tournament, because two of its players are employed by the Playgrounds Department and therefore are not regarded as amateurs.

Bolling Field, Stouffer's Win In Court Play

Advance in Post-A. A. U. Tourney; Chevy Chase 145-Pounders Defeated

Bolling Field hurdled the Eckington A. C. with unexpected ease in its drive toward the unlimited crown, amassing a 32-10 lead in the first half and coasting home with the verdict. Joe Zwisle, crack Aviator forward, found the hoop for seven field goals and one foul to lead the scorers. Govedick and Hager helped out with 10 and 12 points, respectively.

R. Burton Boyd and D. O'Connell led Eckington's counter-attack in the second half but couldn't overtake the flying squadron.

Epsilon Mu Sigma Five Downs Chevy Chase, 50-40

Chevy Chase was eliminated from further consideration as a contender for the 145-pound crown by Epsilon Mu Sigma, which took a 50-40 decision despite the Herculean efforts of young Bob Cremins in the second half. The 16-year-old Leland Junior High School star chalked up a total of 21 points, after being held to a lone field goal in the first half, and almost succeeded in turning the tide of battle.

Two pounds overweight when he reported for the game, Cremins was forced to shed the surplus avoirdupois before going on the floor. He was tired in the first half, but apparently regained both strength and scoring eye in the second as he poured an unending stream of leather into the hoop. Clark and Roach were outstanding for the victors, who had a 29-13 lead at the half.

With every man on the squad participating in the scoring, Stouffer's advanced to the quarter-final round in the unlimited play at the expense of Fort Washington, which bowed by a 50-30 score. Bartlett, Brown and Schulze paced the winning attack, chalking up 26 points together, while Everett Richards, Fort Washington forward, played a brilliant floor game. P. M. C. Team Wins Title At Fort Myer

Arlington Hall College Second Wins Blue Ribbon

Pennsylvania Military College won the student team-jumping championship at Fort Myer's final indoor horse show last night, with a total of 26½ faults garnered during the three shows of the winter series. P. M. C. tied with Arlington Hall College team, No. 1, for the blue ribbon of the student class, each scoring 5½ faults in the event, but as long as the championship was cinched for the expert Chester, Pa., boys, they graciously gave the blue in the event to their fair rivals.

It remained for Kismet, 32-year-old campaigner owned by Fritz Kleeman, riding instructor at Arlington Hall, to steal the show. Given a top ride by Louise Golding, who is just half the age of her great old mount, Kismet scored only 2½ faults over a stiff course to make his final appearance in a

Capt. John Meade, of Fort Myer, almost won the championship of the entire series with his high-flying chestnut mare, Enterprise. Lady Luck put a hand into the proceedings, however, in spite of the fact that last night's blue ribbon in the handicap class was the second blue Captain Meade's mount has won in the Fort Myer winter series of shows. The catch was, that Enterprise was ineligible for the tri-color award because she did not appear in all phases of the open jumping contest, which has been going on since the December show.

The class that Enterprise won brought out some of the best performers seen in the riding hall this winter. Second place went to Ellie Leh, of Arlington Hall College, on her own horse, King Rock, good bay son of Sea Rock. King Rock and Enterprise were tied with one fault apiece until the jump-off, when a refusal by King Rock placed Cap-

Budge Beats British Star in Straight Sets

Fans Weather Torrential Downpour To See Pro Tennis Match at Md. U. Gym; Helen Vinson Attends

By Jack Munhall.

Carrot-topped Donald Budge, undisputed sovereign of the tennis world since he convincingly divested Ellsworth Vines of the title, continued to impress his supremacy upon one of the most troublesome subjects last night by blasting Fred Perry to a straight-set defeat at Ritchie Coliseum.

Before approximately 1,800 hardy net addicts who waddled through a torerntial downpour to witness the second local display of the professional game this season, the lanky Californian toyed with the Britisher and won easily, 6—2, 6—3.

Inspired perhaps by the attendance of his wife, the former Helen Vinson of screen fame with whom he became reconciled yesterday, Perry offered the only "grand slam" winner in history spirited resistance at the start and again near the finish, but for the fourth straight time in their road tour Perry just didn't have it. Budge has won 11 sets in a row.

Like Watching Kid with Popgun

It was like watching a kid with a popgun venture forth against an armored tank to see the slick-haired Perry stack his soft, well-balanced game against Budge's terrific service, unerring backhand and blistering overhead drives. Then, too, the Britisher who, as an amateur defeated Budge four of six matches, was not his usual steady self. Indeed, competent observers couldn't remember when the debonair, slender Englishman was quite so uncertain at the net or inconsistent in the backcourt.

Perry did, however, cause some doubts as to the final result. For in the first game he whitewashed Budge behind his own service, and then in the final set, trailing 4—1, he came back to play for temporarily his best tennis of the evening, and cut the deficit to 4—3, before Budge, apparently loafing, opened up again to close out the match with a great overhead smash placement one of his most sensational shots of the match.

After Perry had breezed through the opening love game, Budge becoming more cinfident and daring as he limbered up, started to give the fans one of his famed performances of shotgun serves and incredibly accurate placements to the backcourt corners, scorching drives which seemed to merge with the line in a blur of white speed.

Behind this salvo of unreturnable shots, the red-head built up 4—1 advantage, broke Perry's service in the fourth and again in the sixth and coasted to a victory so easily that the spectators were already eyeing the exits for a quick getaway. Budge didn't slack his servaway. Budge didn't slacken his pace until the third game of the second set, when Berry books his service to pull to 2—1. The Britisher's rally was shortlived, though, and Budge annexed the next two games with the loss of only 3 points, before Perry took the sixth and seventh as the Californian erred frequently, seeming unable to return Perry's skimming forehad.

Once Perry became threatening, however, Budge suddenly became a vastly different and improved player and despite Fred's concurrent spurt, left no loubt that he can beat his foe any time he really tries.

Eastern Beats St. John's, Wins Cage Crown

The impressive title—Champion of Metropolitan Washington—was conferred on Eastern High's cage team last night at Tech gym, the slow-moving White Tide coming from behind to edge out St. John's, the defending champion, 22-20.

That the high school titlist was able to add the city title to its laurels was not only strong testimony to the brilliance of its team work, but most of all a feather in the cap of Les Cooksey, the squat forward who shown at his best in the second half.

During the first 16 minutes of the game, the first half, alternate Easterners were assigned the difficult task of guarding Joe Gallagher, the Johnnies' main scoring threat. Their success was so negligible that Gallagher tallied 9 points, pacing the team to an 18-11 advantage for the intermission.

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

Our old man was listening one night to a bunch of fellows back in our old home town of Pueblo discussing the suicide of a fellow citizen. They were all quite mystified by the act. It was the consensus of opinion that the chap had everything to live for. There was considerable criticism of him. They said he should have thought of his family.

RUNYON

Our old man was inclined to resent the criticism. He said it was a funny thing that they were willing to criticize a poor soul who had walked off into the woods and quietly ended it all, while they had nothing to say of a number of other men around town who were killing themselves with much less decency and no more thought of their families.

He enumerated about a score of local rumpots. He said he would leave it to any reputable board of physicians in town if they were not committing suicide just as surely as that unfortunate under discussion. This statement got our old man in very bad with the local rumpots when it was repeated to them. Some of them threatened to give him a licking.

Unpleasant Subject

Our old man said he was not going to debate the right or wrong of suicide. He said he believed it wrong on most counts, and an unpleasant subject at best, but he argued that if it was disgraceful for a man to shoot himself through the head, or jump off a high building, it was equally disgraceful for a man to drink himself to death.

Announcer of the saloon keepers back in our old home town said they would appreciate it if our old man would give them a miss for awhile. They said talk like that hurt their business.

Our old man told those fellows who were discussing the suicide

Daily Double at Tropical Park Pays $3,793.20

Stears Pays $156.50 InOpener; ProudKing Takes Second Event; MeadeRides4Winners

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 15.—The longest-priced daily double of the season was paid here today. Only three tickets were sold on the lucky combination of Stears in the first race, which paid $156.50 for $2 straight, and Proud King, a $17.60-for-$2 shot that accounted for the second event. This pair produced a double worth $3,793.20 for a $2 ticket.

Stears, owned by Mrs. E. Babcock, had reced consistently in Havana, although unable to get closer than second, and won today's opener in easy fashion under Sterling Young. Proud King, which had shown good mud form at time, won by a length from Oklab, with Circus Night third.

The first man to cash a ticket on the winning double was Samuel Rothschild, of Gloversville, N. Y. The fortunate persons were reticent about appearing to cash their tickets.

Rothschild is a leather manufacturer. Another man who identified himself as George Turner, of Chicago, held a ticket. He naturally had little to say except that he is some sort of executive. The third person could not be identified.

The longest payoff double last year was $6,754.50, when Charles F. and James Boy combined to provide that return at Bowie on November 16.

Don Meade continued his streak of sensational riding today, booting home four winners, including False Point in the mile and a sixteenth fifth race, most attractive on the card. J. A. Healey's filly, a 5-to-2 favorite, negotiated the distance in 1:50.3.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STEARS, $156.50, $42.60, $19.70; OKLAB, $8.30, $4.00; CIRCUS NIGHT, $22.80.

STEARS outbroke the field, forced a fast pace in the going in the early running while racing far out from the inner rail, shook off BUTTERMAN entering the stretch and held away through the stretch under brisk urging. OKLAB broke well, responded gamely to extreme urging and outlasted CIRCUS NIGHT in the final drive. CIRCUS NIGHT, away tardily, bettered her position along the inner rail all the way and would have been second in another stride. RACEAWAY, well up throughout, was unable to better his position. STAR OF PADULA, hard ridden from the start, closed some ground, but never seriously threatened.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:32. Off 2:36½. Winner, W. E. Collins' b. g. (3), by King Nadi—Betty Marie. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48 4-5, 1:17 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PROUD KING, $17.60, $8.60, $6.40; LADY HAV, $6.20, $4.50; HOLIDAY TEA, $4.40.

Daily Double, Stears and Proud King, Paid $3,793.20.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-old colts and geldings. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:06. Winner, Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart's b. c. (2), by Equipoise—Moving Star. Trained by G. M. Odom. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:49 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EQUISTAR, $6.70, $5.30, $3.60; SMILIN JACK, $8.90, $4.40; DIAVOLO CLIFF, $4.20.

EQUISTAR, quickest to find his stride, drew clear in the opening furlong and held sway the remainder of the trip to win with speed in reserve. SMILIN JACK moved into contention swiftly in the run around the turn, but was vigorously urged to withstand DIAVOLO CLIFF'S bid. The latter broke a trifle slow and was blocked while trying to go through on the inside midway around the turn, was taken to the outside in the final quarter mile, gained steadily and was going strong at the end. WISE GLANCE closed resolutely.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:35. Off 3:39½. Winner, W. W. Adams' b. h. (9), by The Satrap—Golden Fair. Trained by E. E. Russell. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:15 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN FATE, $7.70, $3.50, $2.80; HUNTING RIDGE, $3.10, $2.60; LEGERDEMAIN, $3.50.

GOLDEN FATE, at home in the going, assumed command with a rush in the run out of the chute and, rated in front until rounding the turn, drew out into a winning lead to win handily. HUNTING RIDGE, always in nearest pursuit of the leaders, was unable to improve his position. LEGERDEMAIN, on the inside all the way, bettered his position gradually in the final half mile and shook off ICY WIND in the final furlong. ICY WIND, hard ridden, faltered in the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 4-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:06½. Winner, A. Healey's br. f. (4), by Jamestown—Pallacious. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:43 4-5, 1:50 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FALSE POINT, $5.00, $3.30, $2.50; DNIEPER, $4.50, $3.00; GRANDEVER, $2.60.

FALSE POINT, hustled to the front and favoring the going, held her field safe for speed and, rated to the stretch turn, drew out and continued with determination when the real test came to maintain lead. DNIEPER, well up on the outside all the way, came through between the leaders at the furlong pole and made a bold bid, but could not get up. GRANDEVER, slow to get going, improved his position gradually in the last three furlongs and outlasted BUTTERMILK. The latter, a forward contender early, faltered slightly in the final drive.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:34. Off 4:39½. Winner, Mrs. M. H. Bond's b. f. (3), by Swift and Sure—Barefoot. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:49 4-5, 1:16, 1:44 4-5, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE MISS, $5.10, $2.90, $2.60; PETEE GENE, $4.70, $3.00; NICHOLAS S., $3.20.

SURE MISS, favored by the footing, took command at once and, rated in front under steadying restraint, held sway the entire journey to win with speed in reserve. PETEE GENE, on the outside gamely to pressure and well up, responded gamely and easily disposed of the others. NICHOLAS S., a forward factor all the way, faltered in the final quarter mile, yet held the others safe. EGRESS, hard ridden, could never get up.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:07. Off 5:12½. Winner, Mrs. E. A. Sexton's ch. f. (4), by Kai Feng—Mintdrop. Trained by E. A. Sexton. Value to winner, $650; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:50 4-5, 1:16 1-5, 1:45 1-5, 1:49 4-5.

PUMPGUN	(E. Smith)	113	5	5	4h	4h	5	5	5	8.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRISH MOON, $6.30, $3.00, $2.40; FENG, $3.80, $2.50; SUNTIME, $2.40.

IRISH MOON, displaying good speed, drew clear rounding the first turn, was cleverly rated in front, withstood repeated challenges from FENG and drew out through the stretch under brisk pressure. FENG, cut off by the winner rounding the first turn, was taken to the outside entering the backstretch and went in close attendance of the leader until straightened out into the stretch, but faltered slightly. SUNTIME, going close up under stout restraint in the early running, endeavored to steal through on the inside approaching the quarter mile pole, but was blocked by the winner and never recovered. PRINCE DEREK closed some ground while racing on the outside of the leaders. A foul was claimed against the winner, but was disallowed.

LEARNED, displaying high speed in the going, opened up a long lead at his leisure after entering the backstretch, to win as his rider wished. BRANDON PRINCE, slow to get going, bettered his position gradually while saving ground and easily disposed of CONTINUITY in the final furlong. CONTINUITY, going in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages, faltered under pressure in the stretch run. LIFE GUARD, vigorously ridden the entire trip, had no excuses.

Two U. S. Horses Remain Eligible

London, March 15 (AP).—Two American-owned horses, Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott's War Vessel and Mrs. Louis E. Stoddard's Milano, remained eligible for the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, March 24, when the list of 38 final acceptances was posted today.

The withdrawal of F. Ambrose Clark's La Touche left the United States with its smallest representation in recent years in the world's jumping classic. Royal Mail, 1937 winner, in which the United States also has an interest in that he is owned by the former American actress, Mrs. Camille Evans, also was kept eligible.

Chase, Krakauskas Unimpressive as Nats Win, 15-4

Krakky Wild During Informal Game at Griff's Spring Camp

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 15.—The pets of Bucky Harris' pitching staff—Joe Krakauskas and Ken Chase—faced a batting order for the first time this season and at the finish of their performance the Nats' manager was not exactly delighted.

Krakauskas and Chase did pitch the regulars to a seven-inning 15-to-4 victory over the Yannigans in a most informal intra-squad game, and they held the Yannigans to a total of five hits, but neither of them could be described as a ball of fire.

Big, bow-legged Krakauskas who was supposed to be curbing his wildness down here this spring, showed definite traces of his own habit when he walked two men in the first inning. In his four-inning job, he allowed one run and only three hits, but he was rarely ahead of the hitter.

Rapped for Triple

Chase's performance would have been more impressive than his fellow lefthanders, except for the fact that he encountered a triple by Rookie Catcher All Evans with the bases full in the sixth inning. Chase allowed only two hits in the three innings he worked and walked only one batter.

Young Early Wynn was the starting pitcher for the yannigans and as a result of his four-inning performance today he is virtually on his way back to Charlotte. The regulars staged a prolonged hitting spree against Rookie Wynn's right-handed fast ball and scored in each inning he was on the mound.

They shook him loose from six runs in the very first inning, and altogether pounded Wynn for 16 of their 19 hits. And he walked five batters. Any hopes that he might have had of sticking with the Nats this season were literally bashed from his noodle.

But another rookie, 6-foot-7-inch Bob Garner, did nothing to harm his bid for a job with the Nats. The tall fellow relieved Wynn in the fifth inning and after a shaky start in which he allowed two runs, he held the regulars scoreless for the last two innings.

Big Garner, taking a long stride that put his No. 12 pitching brogan virtually in the faces of the hitters, walked only one batter and permitted only three hits i nhis three-inning turn. He gave evidence of being able to get his fast ball acorss the plate.

Despite their overwhelming defeat, another pair of rookies distinguished themselves. Morris Aderholt, the college-boy second baseman, caught hold of one of Krakauskas' fast-balls in the fourth inning and walloped it over the center fielder's head for a home run, a tremendous swat of 450 feet. And he handled ten chances in the field and figured in two double plays. Evans' three-bagger which cleared the bases against Chase might have been a homer had he run it out. It was also a terrific blast to center.

Buddy Lewis was the hitting hero of the regulars, banging out a triple and three singles. Taft Wright connected for a pair of doubles and Joe Krakauskas hit better than he pitched. He hit two singles and beat out a bunt in three times at bat.

Lewis Worsham Wins Pro Honors

Virgin "Buck" Worsham, assistant in the golf shop at Chevy Chase, yesterday was proudly bearing clippings from Miami where his older brother Lewis, assistant to Robert Barnett at Chevy Chase and Indian Creek, won top prize of $575 in a pro-amateur with the Nation's touring pros.

Lewis paired with J. G. McKay, 16-handicap player at the host club for a best ball of 60, five under the second place quartet that included Sammy Snead, Jimmy Thomson, Ben Hogan and Harry Cooper, with their simon-pure partners. McKay, who teamed with Lawrence Baker, Washington, to win the National Veterans' tennis title in 1929, used his handicap to advantage in helping Worsham on eight holes. The latter had 34-37—71, the first nine 2 under par on the championship course.

The field was dotted with District players, Pros. Barnett, Fred McLeod, and Leo Walper with their amateur Donald Woodward, who played with Felix Serafin, and Holly Stover, Burning Tree, who paired with Jimmy Hines.

St. John's Beats Roanoke in N. Y. Tourney

Victors Crack Scoring Record, Winning 71-47; L. I. U. Triumphs, 52-45

New York, March 15 (U.P.).—St. John's University of New York roared into the semifinals of the second annual Natinal Invitatin Basketball Tournament tonight with a record-breaking 71-47 victory over Roanoke College of Salem, Va., after unbeaten Long Island University had gained the round of four by licking New Mexico State, 52-45.

A crowd of 14,443 in Madison Square Garden saw St. John's, paced by Forward Bill Lloyd, who was a substitute less than a month ago, crack both the tournament nad Garden high-scoring records while his mates busted a few other assorted marks.

Long Island rallied with a 10-pound scoring burst in the last five minutes to run its victory streag to 22 games this season.

Next Monday, St. John's meets unbeaten Loyola of Chicago, and Long Island plays Bradley Tech of Peoria, Ill., in the semifinals. Both those Illinois teams had drawn first round byes.

Frisch to Air Boston Baseball

Boston, March 15 (AP).—Frank Frisch, former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, signed a one-year contract today to broadcast play-by-play descriptions of all home games of the Boston Bees and Boston Red Sox during the coming season.

In turning to the airwaves to describe major league games, Frisch would follow a path set by such other former major league stars as Tris Speaker, Charley Grimm, George Sisler, Harry Heilman and Walter Johnson.

Donelli Named Successor to Clipper Smith

Stephen, Sinko, Also An Alumnus, Appointed Assistant at Duquesne

Pittsburgh, March 15.—Aldo T. (Buff) Donelli, generally rated as one of the greatest fullbacks ever turned out at Duquesne University, replaced John P. (Little Clipper) Smith as head football coach and director of athletics at the Pittsburgh school tonight.

Smith, in a srprise move, turned in his resignation this morning "for the good of the university." The appointment of Donelli, who had been assistant football coach, was announced this evening by the Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, preident of the university.

Stephen P. Sinko, another Duquesne graduate, was selected as Donelli's assistant. Other members of the coaching staff, Charles (Chick) Davies, basketball director, and Lou Skender, freshman basketbill and football coach, escaped the shakeup.

The supervising change was the second major one in Pittsburgh within the past week and left sports fans bewildered. Last week Dr. John B. (Jock) Sutherland severed relationship with the University of Pittsburgh after 15 years' service as football coach.

Donelli, 31, has been affiliated with the Dukes' athletic setup since his graduation in 1930. He acted as freshman football and basketball mentor until 1936, when he was named varsity football assistant, a job he held until today.

Sinko, whsoe home is in Chrisholm, Minn., has devoted his time since graduation in the professional football ranks. He played three years with the Boston Redskins in the National League I and in 1937 joined the Los Angeles Bulldogs.

William-Mary Opens 20-Game Schedule, Apr. 3

Indians, Dartmouth Clash at Williamsburg; Many Lettermen Return

By the Associated Press.

Williamsburg, Va., March 15.—William and Mary's State baseball champions will open a 20-game schedule here April 3 against Dartmouth, W. S. Gooch, jr., business manager of Athletics, announced today.

The Indians have an imposing array of returning lettermen, headed by Capt. Charlie Baltimore, of Salem, but lack veteran pitchers.

The Tribesmen were dealt a big blow by the withdrawal from school of Rosy Waugh, the big righthander who won 11 and lost 1 last spring. Waugh would have been co-captain with Baltimore.

Only returning pitcher is Jack Purtill, a junior righthander who pitched in only a few games last year. Last year's freshman team is sending up a quartet of hurlers—Morgan Mackey, Lloyd Cornell, Bill Byrne and Del Farnsworth.

Veterans are back for every infield Frank Koss at second, Charlie Beale position, with Frank Yeager at first, at short, and Charlie Hern at third. Al Tirelis, who alternated at outfield and catcher last year, will take over the backstopping job left vacant by Wayne Harper.

The schedule:

April 3, Dartmouth; 4, Washington and Lee; 7, Virginia Tech at Blacksburg; 8, V. M. I. at Lexington; 10, Hampden-Sydney, at Hampden-Sydney; 12, Wake Forest, at Wake Forest; 13, N. C. State, at Raleigh; 15, Virginia Tech; 18, Maryland; 21, Washington and Lee, at Lexington; 22, Virginia, at Charlottesville; 25, Richmond; 29, Wake Forest.

May 3, Navy, at Annapolis; 4, Maryland, at College Park; 8, Randolph-Macon, at Ashland (pending); 11, V. M. I.; 13, Virginia; 16, Richmond, at Richmond; 17, Randolph-Macon.

D. C. Golfers Test 'Revolutionized' Game Here

William R. Stone's "American Golf," the plan to revolutionize the game with a premium on accuracy rather than distance, was tested at Congressional yesterday by several local pros and amateurs. Stone would make every course 12 holes, about 3,200 yards long and would form a golf league of the top pros, to be played in stadiums with seating capacity of 60,000, the last 2 holes ending in the stadium.

The Indian Spring golfer has spent years on the idea, and has a 70-page booklet, drawn to scale, with every minute detail.

The players first hit shots on the par 5 eighth hole, and then the short 16½ hole, with the accuracy theme stressed. They will meet at Stone's home Friday night to further discuss the plan, and he has plans for an amateur match testing "American Golf" at Indian Spring in the near future, with Tom Belshe and Roger Peacock as rival captains.

Pros and amateurs participating in the trial yesterday included Wiffy Cox and Warner Gray, Congressional; Mel Shorey and Tommy Doerer, jr., East Potomac; Al Jamison Tom Belshe, Roger Peacock and Charles Malone, Indian Spring; George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood; Virgil Worsham, Chevy Chase, and Gene Larkin, Woodmont.

Redskins Guests At Culpeper Event

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Culpeper, Va., March 15.—Sponsored by the Culpeper Lions Club, "Champions of the Gridiron" will be presented in a local theater tomorrow evening, featuring an all-sports entertainment for sport-loving folks of Culpeper and surrounding section. Burnett Miller, jr., and Verne Healy are co-directors of the program, which will also have the added zest of personal appearances by several well-known football stars, including Charlie Malone, Frank Filchock, Don Irwin and Jay Turner, of the Washington Redskins. General Manager Jack Espey will be guest speaker of the occasion.

This event will mark the first showing of "Champions of the Gridiron in the State of Virginia and is expected to draw an unusual attendance.

Stahl, Harbert Win Medal in Pro-Amateur

Pair 9 Under Par in Morning and 8 Under In Afternoon Round

By the Associated Press.

St. Augustine, Fla., March 15.—Setting a terrific pace, Marvin Stahl, Lansing, Mich., professional, and his amateur partner, Chick Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., captured medal honors with a 17-under-par 127 in the National Pro-Amateur Best Ball Golf Tournament qualifying round today.

The pair toured the morning 18 holes in 63, 9 under regulation figures, and clipped 8 more strokes from par in the afternoon for a 64.

Jack Grout, of Hershey, Pa., and Maynard Ramsey, of Tampa, Fla., finished in second place, 4 strokes back of the leaders at 131.

Pressing closely were Lloyd Mangrum, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Tommy Aycock, of Jacksonville, Fla., who posted rounds of 69, 63 for a 132.

Match play will begin tomorrow and the finals are scheduled Sunday.

previous indoor mark set by a Pennsylvania four in 1933.

Ralph St. Pierre, George Leary and Frank Slater ran the first three legs for Fordham against James Mopoland, Harold Bogrow and Curtis Giddings for N. Y. U., which also finished well under the previous record.

Don Lash, the Indiana State trooper, was able to hold his planned schedule for only the first half mile, the time for which was 2:09, with the result that he failed to break his own indoor 2-mile record by three full seconds while finishing in 9:01 flat.

The Hoosier, however, ran fast enough to lap his four pacemakers, Bert MacMannis, Clif Holmes, Joe Taylor and Fred Upton, all of Dartmouth, who started from 50 to 220 yards ahead of him. He ran along for all of the last half of his competition against the stop watches.

Another failure was recorded against New York University's indoor I. C. A. A. A. A. championship 2-mile relay team which barely nosed out Fordham's four half-milers, while turning the 13 1-3 laps in 7:44 flat, just 2.4 seconds slower than the indoor record set by a Georgetown team 14 years ago.

Old Dominion Names Captain Of Oar Team

Jack Franklin Is Honored for Third Straight Season

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, March 15.—Jack Franklin has been appointed captain of the Old Dominion Boat Club rowing team for the 1939 season, according to announcement today by Athletic Chairman John Edmonds. It will be his third successive year as leader of the local crews.

Old Dominion is planning to strat preparations for the coming season about April 1, and all interested members have been requested to contact Captain Franklin within the next 10 days.

A schedule of four regattas is planned by the local club, including the annual home-and-home series with the Potomac Boat Club, of Washington. Crews for the eight, quad and gig will be developed.

Among the veterans expected to form the nucleus for the 1939 crews are Magnus Bales, Julian Whitestone, Lewis Bell, Bus Knight, "Chick" Harding, Jack Monroe and several others.

With rowing slated as the principal sport during the coming months, other spring and summer activities will include softball and volley ball. Several members will also enter boats in the Potomac River Sailing Association series.

Play-off Planned

A play-off of a protested game between the Kendrick Flashes and the Police Department five will be necessary to determine the four teams to compete in the Senior League championship tournament next week at Armory Hall. Defeated by the Alexandria Boys Club quint last night, the Flashes can gain a tie for third place by beating the police, although they would then be forced into another play-off game with the White Cross Cavaliers to determine which team will be selected for the fourth berth in the title tourney.

The three teams already definitely assured of berths are Fort Hunt CCC, the leader, and the Columbia Firemen and Alexandria Boys Club, tied for the runner-up position.

Lee-Jackson High School's basketball team will play eight games in competition for the Fairfax County scholastic title during the coming season. The dates for the league games, which will include home-and-home series with McLean, Fairfax, Herndon and Falls Church, will be set at a meeting of county coaches to be held within the next two weeks.

The Lee-Jackson nine is coached by Al Omohundro, former William and Mary College diamond star.

Broadway Wins, Gains Tie for League Lead

Harrisonburg, Va., March 15.—Broadway upset Linville-Edom, 49 to 23, and went into a tie with the losers for first place in the Rockingham County League. Bridgewater, in third place, is only a half game behind with only two more games to play.

Bees Defeated By Cards, 1-0; Simmons Fans

Three St. Louis Hurlers Hold Boston to Six Scattered Wallops

Petersburg, Fla., March 15 (AP).—The St. Louis Cards raised their Grapefruit League standing to .500 today by defeating Casey Stengel's Bees, 1 to 0, in Boston's first exhition game of the season.

Lee Sherrill, Tom Sunkel and Morton Cooper held the Bees to six hits. Elvin Adams, Cardinal outfilder, singled in the lone run in the sixth inning.

tain Meade's English-bred horse on top.

Smacko, the horse that was practically ignored by experts until he chalked up a surprise win a month ago, proved his worth last night at the final show of Fort Myer's winter series when he won the championship for open jumpers, defeating some top horses.

With Lieut. Charles McCelland up, Smacko annexed a third ribbon in the class for handicap jumpers to assure himself the championship rosette, adding two points to the four he had chalked up at the February show at the Army post.

Ringmaster, sold with the Tim McCoy circus here last year, with Fred J. Hughes, jr., up, won the reserve class, while Margaret Cotter's Rocksie won the hunter championship with Jinwich second.

Summaries:

On Fishing

In Virginia, hardly more than a dozen streams are to be really considered as trout waters, while in Maryland only about half that number, and all of them typical of this section. Banked with low-hanging heavy brush that makes most desirable a short flyrod of 7 or 7½ feet; and of a weight from 2 to 3½ ounces.

ACKERMAN

Which, if you take our recommendation, calls for an H or G level line, or at the heaviest an F. Certainly not the C and D lines we have heard it said, "was necessary to get the line out."

Thirty feet, or 40 at the outside, is ample for these waters. Learn to lay that much out well and the longer cast needed on larger streams will come without any trouble when you come to them.

Should the same rod be used for bass and catfishing later, then, particularly for the latter, it might be well to increase the length to 8 or 8½ feet and a weight of 4 ounces. The same size line would be adequate. Beyond these limits there should be no compromise, instead have two rods.

Learn Right Method

For bass, the same small trout rods are just right, although the light, inexpensive reels usually recommended for the former are always to be avoided if it is expected to fish for smallmouths in our rivers, where the reel is used as more than a reservoir for the line. Where strength in construction is needed, even though their weight is kept down to 2½ to 3½ ounces, which we would say is just about the right weight for 7½-foot rods.

If you are a tyro, and a portsider, don't let a righthander instruct you in holding the line instead of the rod in your left hand, for there is a distinct advantage, with a large fish on, of being in a natural fishing position to take the reel as the slack line is let out. Almost as much in fact as in bait casting, where the lefthander, according to Tony Acetta, national casting champion, when he has learned to reel with his right

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 15. When a reporter goes to talk with Casey Stengel he generally goes to laugh. But the genial and jolly manager of the Boston Bees apparently isn't laughing this year. He's a serious minded soul trying to put a baseball club together that will be capable of winning the National League pennant. And if this may seem a very futile ambition to you and me it isn't at all impossible as far as Casey Stengel, is concerned.

VIDMER

As he sat in the dugout on the visitors bench at Waterfront Park and discussed his team, its potentialities and its chances his blue eyes wandered over the field, watching every move of his men, and what he said was spoken in a serious tone. As he talked I began to suspect that perhaps Casey saves his laughs for the years, when he has nothing else. This year, it seems, he thinks he has quite a ball club.

"A'nyway, it's a better bal club than we had last year," he declared, and added, "we finished fifth with that one. Not a bad fifth, either. Listen, we won more games at home than any other club in our league. How about that? We won 45 games at home and lost 30. That's a .600 per cent. The Cubs won the pennant with a percentage of .58."

"Maybe you should play all your games at home this year."

"Maybe we'll do better on the road this year," Casey replied, without cracking a smile. "There's ni reason why we shouldn't do just as well abroad as we do in the Bees' park. The Cubs won the pennant on the road last year. They only played .400 ball at home. Look, we beat every club in the league in our series at Boston—the Cubs, Pirates, Giants, Reds—all of e'm, and we had an edge on all of 'em except the Giants, Cubs and Pirates in their own parks. But two terrible road trips beat us, that's all. Two terrible road trips, a lot of injuries——"

"And four other clubs." I could not resist reminding him.

"Yes, that's right. Four other clubs. Well, we have more ball players this year than we had. I think they're better. One thing we needed was power. The changes changes I intend to make will be with that idea in mind. There's Al Simmons, for instance."

I looked up and, sure enough, there was Al Simmons in the batting cage. But I didn't immediately see why his presence fas going to make much difference. True he was once a great baseball player, one of hte greatest in the game. But now he is 36, last year he was waived out of the American League and his value has dropped consdierably in the span of two short years. Detroit gave $75,000 to the White Sox for him only a couple of seasons back. The Tigers sold him to Washington for $7,500 a year later. The Bees had to give only $3,500 to Washington for him.

"I'm not worrying about my pitching. Fette, Turner, Macfayden and Shoffner are good enough, aren't they? Besides there are several others coming along. Hey, here's something to think baout: last year Fette, Turner, Macfayden and Shoffner lost as many games as they won among them. But the team won more than it lost."

"What does that prove?" I asked, a little confused.

"It means that my other pitchers won more than they lost," doesn't it? It means that the starting pitchers cna figure on getting some help."

Manor May Abandon Event

Two Clubs Announce Schedules

Club Executives To Decide on Fate Of Manor Tourney; Indian Spring Card

The Manor Invitation Tournament, tentatively scheduled as an early feature of the local golf card, with dates May 23 to 26, may be abandoned, or changed to a fall event, pending a meeting of club executives.

The tournament, that attracted nearly 500 entries in '37, may hold the original dates and the entrants may be assessed a fee, such as the $5 fee to the Chevy Chase tournament. The golf committee will take definite action within a week as to the fate of the most popular tourney on the card. The "Old Barn" with free lunches, etc. was one of the main reasons for the success.

Harry G. Pitt, golf committee chairman at Manor Country Club, released the annual tournament schedule with the annual features, two-man team championship, President's Cup, club championship and holiday events heading the list.

GOLF SCHEDULE—1939

May 7. Dogwood Blossom tournament; 14. Duffers tournament. H. C. P.. 20 and over; 21. mixed Scotch foursome; Jack Pot tournament (3 days, 50c entry fee). 27, 28 and 30. first prize, low net 36 holes; 3 prizes, low strokes plus putts on selected holes; 3 prizes, high strokes plus putts on selected holes; 30, flag tournament, ladies (course No. 3), putting contest.

Ladder Qualification

June 3, 4, 10, 11, average of any two or more rounds of 18 holes on the four scheduled days to determine ladder position; Inter-City team match, Baltimore and Washington, 36-man team (Maryland, State); 18, husband and wife tournament.

July 4, match play against par tournament, driving contest, men; flag tournament, ladies (course No. 3), pitching and putting contest, ladies (course No. 3); 30, mixed Scotch foursome.

Two-Man Team Championship

August 6, first round; 13, second round; 20, third round; 27, finals. $1 entry fee per man. Team prizes for winner and runner-up and winner of consolation.

President's Cup

September 3, first round, 18 holes; 4, second round, 18 holes.

Club Championship

September 17, qualification, 18 holes, medal; 23, forst round; 24, second round; 30, third round; October 1, finals. See rules 10, 11 and 12 of general rules.

Indian Spring Golf Schedule Opens April 22

A varied and attractive schedule running from April 22 through November was announced by the Indian Spring golf committee, headed by Earl Clary, chairman.

A new feature will be the club championship mixed Scotch foursome affair, on a handicap basis.

INDIAN SPRING CLUB TOURNAMENT SCHEDULE—1939

April 22-23, 3-4-5 Tournament, 18-hole medal; 29-30, selected holes tournament, 18-hole medal.

May 7, mixed Scotch foursome; 13-14, blind bogey; 20-21, duffers tournament, 18 holes, medal; 30, flag tournament, 18 holes, medal.

June 3-4, Dr. A. T. Utz Trophy, 18 holes, medal; 10-11, point tournament; 18, mixed Scotch foursome; 24-25, 4-ball best ball sweepstakes.

July 1-2-3-4, Board of Governors Trophy, 18 holes, medal; 2, mixed Scotch foursome; 15-16, two-man team trophy, 18 holes, medal; 23, Giants and Midgets.

August 5-6, President's Cup, 18 holes, medal 13, mixed Scotch foursome; 20-20, blind bogey; 26-27, Tribal Bowl, 18 holes, medal.

September 3, club champions mixed Scotch foursome, low net; 9-10, club championship qualifying round; 16-17, first round matches.

hand on a right-hand reel has the odds overwhelmingly in his favor for there is no necessity then of changing the rod from one hand to the other before starting to fight the fish.

Bait for trout angling is considered beyond the pale by dyed in the wool anglers, yet you often see them on cold days during the early weeks of the season with bait boxes on their belts or hunting grubs along the banks. As far as we are concerned, its use seems to be up to the individual. If fish are necessary to make the day complete, and they aren't to be had with flies by all means use a worm or grub.

Not Absolute Necessity

Bait, however, is not the absolute necessity many anglers think it to be for opening day angling in this section. Neither is there any reason why the Maryland trout fishing season should be set back to conform with the later opening days in surrounding States, in simple words, to take the edge away from the fisherman who uses worms.

Maryland streams are stocked usually only a few days prior to April 1, and the hatchery-fed fish are "suckers" for anything—bait, wet flies, and, given a reasonably mild day, even for dry flies, and after all isn't it up to the individual to say whether his fun lies in the fishing, or the taking.

Why not let him learn that the rise of a trout to a dry fly—they'll even jump to take it while it is still above the surface—is far more fun than their taking a bait under water, for in dry fly fishing you really double your enjoyment by adding the ense of sight to that of feelin.

In Frederick Count streams, trout reared in the streams will often take a dry fly throughout the month of March.

Swiss Skiers Arrive

New York, March 15 (AP).—Four of Switzerland's ranking women skiers arrived today en route to the international ski races at Sun Valley, Idaho, March 24-26. They were Erna Steuri, Doris Friedrich, Gritli Schaad and Nine von Arx-Zogg.

Zaharias and McCoy Clash On Arena Mat

Dropkick Murphy Will Meet Bowman in One Of Supporting Bouts

That old wrestling rivalry between the Martins and the McCoys, er-beg pardon, between the McCoys and Zaharias will flare anew tonight at Turner's Arena when Bibber, one of the Boston McCoys, and Babe Zaharias, youngest member of the famed Colorado troupe, meet in the weekly feature.

McCoy will be tackling McCoy for the first time here, but he burning with deep-seated revenge for what he charges were a couple of "raw things" put over on him by the Babe's brothers, George and Chris, the gnome-like grunt grapplers.

More specifically, Bibber hasn't forgotten the time George banged his head against a ring post in Philadelphia, and besides demolishing one section of the arena, almost succeeded in separating him from his brain cells. Nor has time erased from McCoy's memory that time in Camden when Christ tried to claim a quick count after weakening the referee with a resounding body slam.

Thus tonight's match promises to be the roughest since Chief White Feather and Tgier Nelson tangled at the old auditorium.

Zaharias is making his first featured appearance at the Arena, picking up the shreds of villainy left by his brothers who are welldisliked hree. Last week Chris drew with George Pencheff, the Australian champion, in a bout that ended in a ringside riot.

On the supporting card, Dr. Murphy growls with Gene Bowman, a newcomer; Jack Hader, anxious for a headline shot, meets Pat Corrigan, from the auld sod, Red Ryan crossed the path of Al Sparks and Wild Man Zim will grimace at Paddy Mack. First bout at 8:30.

U. S. Pin Tourney Resumes Tonight

Action in the twelfth annual National Duckpin Bowling Congress tournament will be resumed tonight at Lucky Strike when the brightly clad Rhode Island Reds, of Apponaug, R. I., will bowl with the Lucky Strike men's team.

The visitors will also roll singles and doubles in the afternoon. The appearance of the Reds will be the first of many out-of-town duckpin stars to compete here between now and April 1. The quintet, Bill Bisson, Lew Rounds, Tony Carpenter, Ev Gardner and Nick Paye, are well-known in Northern tournament circles.

Wanta Ball Game?

The Maryland Aces unlimited baseball team will hold their first practice of the season Sunday at 2 p. m. All players are requested to be present.

The Aces are seeking a practice game for March 26. Teams interested call Homer Link at Hillside 0713-J. between 5 and 6 p. m.

that they would probably be surprised if they knew how many men who apparently had everything to live for had contemplated suicide at one time or another. He said it was dollars to doughnuts that half the men then and there present had given some thought to the idea.

He said you see a man going about his business hale and hearty and prosperous and apparently happy, but who knows but what his mind may be haunted by inexplicable terrors? Who knows but what his waking and sleeping moments may be peopled by dread phantasies of misconduct that drive him to despair? That is what our old man said.

Toyed With Idea

He frankly admitted that he had toyed with the idea of suicide himself, not once, but a dozen times. He said he had never worked himself up to where he seriously considered selg-destruction, but that he had found himself vaguely wondering if it might not be the best way out of what seemed some terrible difficulty.

He said that wnen the difficulty became less terrible, he always rebuked himself for permitting even the shadow of such a dire thought to cross his mind. He said he could see that if a man like him could think of such a thing, it was easily possible for others to think of the same thing.

Our old man said that he had been brought up to believe that suicide was sinful and cowardly. He said he was not so sure about the latter. He said he had known men of whose courage he had not the slightest doubt who had committed crimes for which they must swing, but he had never known one who preferred self-destruction to letting the law destroy them.

Declined 'Courtesy'

He said he had known of one courageous fellow doomed to die who had friends among the officials who wanted to save him the disgrace of dying on the scaffold and who had deliberately placed means of self-destruction within his reach. Yet this fellow declined to avail himself of their courtesy and went by the noose. Our old man said he sometimes wondered if this was because of cowardice or just the natural human instinct to hope to the very last.

Our old man said the times he had thought most of suicide were when he was quite ill. He said there had been such times when he did not care much if he lived or died and rather welcomed the thought of death, yet had he known there was a lethal potion within reach of his hand he would never have had the nerve to lift it to his lips.

Never That Black

He said if he had been pronounced incurably ill, he doubted that he would have taken his own life, though he remembered hearing his own voice raised in argument condoning that course under such circumstances. He said that must have been when he was feeling great himself. He said it was easy enough to argue that way when a fellow was feeling great, but that he knows he would have hung on against any verdict, hoping it might be wrong.

Our old man said that oddly enough his thoughts of suicide had entered his head when he was much younger. He said that as he got older he realized that no situation is as black and hopeless as youth is apt to view it. He said that was one advantage of age, anyway—that you know if you stay the suicidal draught or leap until the next day, it will probably be quite unnecessary.

Our old man said who brought up the subject of suicide, anyway?

'Y' Net Tourney In Second Round

The second annual indoor tennis tournament, high spot of the athletic program at Central Y. M. C. A., goes into the second round today at the "Y" gym, with four matches on the card. Larry Sherfy, winner over Cliff Johnson in a first-round battle, comes up against Fred Carpenter in the opener at 7 a. m. Felix Silva meets George Fox at 9 a. m., G. Martinez meets A. O. White at 10:30 a. m., and the only evening match will be between Paul Beretz and Phil Marcus at 7 p. m.

Defending champion David Johnson came through his opening clash with Bob Censinger, Boys champion, in straight sets. Hugh Lynch tripped John Becht without the loss of a game, J. Morris lost only one game in his match with H. Arps, and Strand Johnson ousted Hays Haymaker with little trouble.

Steel Activity Gains Slowly But Steadily

Output 56 Per Cent
Rail Buying Expected
Auto Orders Limited

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 15.—The more optimistic hopes for seasonal improvement in the steel industry in March are not supported by the current rate of production gains, Iron Age reported today in its weekly review. Pointing out that March frequently has been the peak month of steel activity, the Trade Journal said:

"While progress is slow, hopes have strengthened that recovery in steel volume will extend well through the second quarter at least. Ingot production for the industry as a whole has risen 1 point this week to 56 per cent of capacity, but the improvement is partly the result of larger specifications against months and not wholly a reflection contracts placed during the past few of current business.

"The re-affirmation of present prices on major steel products, including tin plate, though clearing the atmosphere, has not yet contributed to much improvement in tonnage.

"The steel industry finds varying conditions among its principal consuming outlets. The automobile industry, though increasing its assembly schedules, is not making new purchases beyond fill-in lots as it is still receiving shipments of flat rolled products contracted for last fall."

Iron Age comments that railroads are still counted on to provide additional tonnage to the steel mills, and that car builders expect that not less than 8,000 freight cars will be bought before the end of the second quarter. Steel scrap prices remain strong, though quotably unchanged.

General Motors Sales Up 9.9% Overseas

New York, March 15.—Sales of General Motors cars and trucks to dealers in the overseas markets during February totalled 33,330 units, an increase of 9.9 per cent over sales in February of last year.

In the first two months of 1939, sales of 64,208 units represented an increase of 6.7 per cent over sales in the first two months of 1938.

Young Victory Seen in Battle For Alleghany

New York, March 15 (AP).—A victory for Robert R. Young, Cleveland capitalist, in his two-year fight to gain control of the $2,000,000,000 railroad empire of the late O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen was seen by Wall Street circles today.

Announcement by the Guaranty Trust Co. yesterday that it would resign by April 14 trusteeships for two issues of the Alleghany Corporation's bonds apparently restored control of the holding company to Young, its chairman.

Because of an unusual indenture in the bond issues by the Van Sweringen brothers, the Guaranty Trust has been able for a long time to vote the securities held by the Alleghany corporation. This indenture gave the trust company voting rights when collateral declined below 150 per cent of the face value of the bonds.

Through its ability to vote the Alleghany Corporation's securities the trust company held control of the profitable C. & O., the Erie, the New York, Chicago & St. Louis (nickel plate), and Wheeling & Lake Erie, the Pere Marquette and the Missouri Pacific. The trust company also yielded to the corporation $75,000 impounded cash, but will continue as trustee for a third bond issue due in 1944.

Electric Output 11.1% Above Year Ago

New York, March 15 (AP).—Production of electric power in the United States during the week ended March 11 totaled 2,237,935,000 kilowatt hours, a decline of 0.3 of 1 per cent from 2,244,014,000 in the preceding week but 11.1 per cent ahead of 2,014,729,000 in the comparable 1938 week, the Edison Electric Institute announced today.

The decline was seasonally expected and the Associated Press Index of production, based on 1929-1930 as 100, remained at 115.2.

War Cloud Wheat Rally Fails to Hold

Jump of One Cent Partly Wiped Out By Break in Stocks

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 15.—Realization in the grain trade of the scope of the new German moves in central Europe was an important factor in today's sudden rise of 1 cent in wheat prices here. It was the best recovery the market had had in weeks.

However the rally did not last. Independent weakness of corn, a sharp break in securities prices and pessimistic milling trade reports unsettled the market after noon. About half of the early gains were lost and wheat closed ⅛ cent to ⅝ higher than yesterday, with May at 67⅝@67¾ and July 67⅞@68, compared with highs of 68¼ and 68½, respectively.

Selling of securities emphasized the revival of tension over the European political situation as did dispatches indicating British statesmen "bitterly" regretted Germany's move. Short covering was in evidence during the wheat price advance and some purchasing was credited to mills.

Short covering also helped to lift corn prices as much as ¾ cent early in the session but late selling attributed to cash interests and commission houses caused a sharp reaction which carried May corn to 47½, within ¼ of its lowest level in five years. Corn closed unchanged to ¼ lower than yesterday; May, 47¾@47⅞; July 49½; oats unchanged to ¼ higher; rye unchanged to ¼ up; lard unchanged to 2 cents lower.

Selling and Drop Reflect Czech Crisis
Europe Breaks Prices 4th Time in Year
Volume Increases With Liquidation

New York, March 15.—Liquidation traceable to fear over ultimate effects of the extension and consolidation of Germanic power in central Europe, accompanied by Chancellor Hitler's apparently gratuitous "hands-off" warning to France, upset domestic security markets more than those close to the scene. While markets and public reaction to the Czech invasion were described as extraordinarily calm on the other side, sharp price breaks occurred here in both bonds and shares to the accompaniment of rising volume. In stocks, losses were the most severe the list has experienced since January 26. Commodities, in contrast, were generally steady

The break in share quotations on the New York Stock Exchange, which carried the composite average for the 100 leading stocks off 1.24 point with individual declines of 1 to 5, established the fourth major bear period within a year in which foreign news precipitated selling.

The series started with the Austrian crisis in March last year; was followed by the Sudeten crisis in September, 1938, the Italian territorial demands on France in January and, finally, the current Czecho-Slovak annexation. Liquidation was heaviest in the first and second hours with the tickers running behind transactions several times between 11:04 and 11:14 o'clock.

Trading Volume

Total volume of 1,113,100 shares, however, was below sales for both Thursday and Friday of last week when the market was going up. Total for those days were 1,357,965 and 1,210,470 shares, respectively. Of 832 issues traded on the big board, 21 were at new highs, 17 at new lows, 642 declined against 67 advances and 123 unchanged.

The tailspin in share quotations in many cases erased gains achieved over several weeks of trading. General Motors, the most active stock, was down more than 2 points; Chrysler, nearly 4; Steel common, 3; Bethlehem, 3⅛; Union Pacific, 3; Allied Chemical, 3¾; Telephone, 2⅜, and du Pont, Great Northern preferred, American Can, Westinghouse, Johns Manville, International Nickel and a number of others, 2 points or more each.

Although power production showed the best year to year gain of any week so far in 1939, utilities were severely depressed. Steels, however, were weakest of the weak, the six leaders showing an average drop of 2½ points.

Pivotals were noticeably weakest in today's down swing, again illustrating the thinness of the market when either buyers or sellers dominate dealings. There were quite a few 1,000-share lots at the opening at deep cuts from overnight quotations, including Chrysler, off 1⅜; Steel common, off 1; General Motors, off ⅞; General Electric, off ⅜, and New York Central, off ⅝. These losses were extended as trading proceeded.

Czech Bonds Break

In a generally soft listed bond market, Czecho-Slovak issues fell sensationally today, owing to the virtual absorption of a good part of the country by the German Nazis. Only a few transactions were effected, but they were at levels 18 and 22 points under the previous close. The two sessions saw Czech bonds lose approximately one-third of their market value. United States Treasury issues were quiet, and domestic bonds generally slipped lower along with the equities section. Foreign issues of all descriptions fell with Czechs, but on a modest scale.

Czechs IXXX 8s of 1951 dropped 18 points, to 45, on a turnover of eight bonds, while Prague 7½s fell 22 points, to 48, on transactions of only two bonds. Hungarian and Rumanian bonds, long in default, were not much affected by the fresh developments. Polish bonds were dull, while German default obligations held around former levels. High-grade foreigns were slightly lower. A sharp break developed in Brazilian and other Latin-American default securities, on second thoughts about the recent agreement and its chances of acceptance by the Senate.

Secondary railroad bonds, in the domestic corporate division, receded steadily throughout the session, and closing levels were 1 to 3 points down in a long list of issues. Border-line and default rails likewise suffered. International Telephone issues dropped 2 to 3 points, Alleghany Corporation obligations lost ground on the developments in that situation, and lower levels were reached also in local tractions, communications and other special groups.

United States Treasury securities were firm at the start, but lost their early gains and closed with meaningless variations in either direction. Guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home Corporations also were dull. Best-grade utility and railroad and industrial bonds were neglected and generally off by small fractions.

Legion Warned At Arlington Of 'Ism 'Perils

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0689

Addressing more than 1,200 persons in the Washington Lee High School auditorium at the twentieth anniversary of the American Legion last night, Dr. William Mosley Brown, past grand master of Masons in Virginia and member of Arlington Post of the legion, warned America of the day when "isms" would prove a serious threat to Democratic government.

Walter Winchell, guest, was presented an "Americanism" medal.

"The American Legion has a great opportunity to aid in breaking down the movement against our Government," said Representative Howard W. Smith, author, speaker. "The Congress is trying to enact laws with enough teeth in them to put a stop to the 'ism' movement."

Miss Helen Duckson was presented with a medal by George P. Grove on behalf of the legion as winner in the 1939 essay contest. Miss Marion Loys Blake laso received a national citation. The certificate was presented by her mother, Mrs. Frank M. Blake.

Building Increases

Alington.—Building in Arlington County continues to increase, according to building officials. It was reported there were 53 permits issued yesterday, representing an outlay of $115,000. Of this number, 52 were issued to the Mac Properties, Inc., for the construction of semi-detached homes on Glebe road and Columbia pike, costing $53,000. The other permit was issued to the Ring Engineering Co. for the construction of a community center as a part of the Arlington Village development under construction on Columbia pike between South Barton and South Cleveland streets. This permit was for $62,000.

New Religious Director

Virginia Highlands—Miss Margaret Severs, of Petersburg, Va., has been named as director of week-day religious education in Arlington County to fill the office of Miss Martha Bennett, who leaves about April 1, according to the Rev. Thomas G. Betschler, president of the Arlington County Council of Religious Education. Miss Severs will take up her new duties in the early fall.

Miss Bennett will become associated with the Southern Methodist Church at Front Royal, where she will be in charge of children's work. During her stay in the county more than 4,000 children attended her classes.

A farewell tea will be given for Miss Bennett Sunday afternoon in the Vanderwerken Congregational Church on Little Falls road.

Parking Meter Study

Clarendon—According to Carol F. Winchester, business manager of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, a special committee will study the feasibility of installing parking meters in the business sections of the county.

At the recent meeting of the board of directors, Winchester reported he had conferred with District Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer on the meter plan in Washington, and had learned that it was considered a success.

The chamber will hold its annual banquet at the Washington Golf and Country Club on Monday, April 24.

Gus Welch Heard

former all-American football player

Country Club Hills—Gus Welch, at Carlisle University, was the guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Arlington Kiwanis Club yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Among guests were Edward S. Pardoe, president of the Washington Club, who extended an invitation to the members of the local club to an Inter-Club meeting May 5 at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington.

Lenten Services

Clarendon—Special Lenten services will be conducted tonight at 8 o'clock at St. George's Episcopal Church by the Rev. Harry Lee Doll, rector of Christ Church, Alexandria. There will be a celebration of the Holy Communion this morning at 10:30 a. m.

K. of C. Meeting

Clarendon — Edward Douglas White Council No. 2473, Knights of Columbus, meets tonight in its clubrooms on North Washington boulevard at 8 o'clock. The club will sponsor a St. Patrick's Day Dance at the clubhouse.

Civic Federation Board

Clarendon—There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation tonight at the home of I. Chance Buchanan, 1421 North Fillmore street.

The special committee making a study of zoning along the Lee boulevard and preparing protests to recent rezoning will report its activities.

Women's Society Installs

Takoma Park—Formal installation of officers of the Women's Society of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, was held yesterday in the parish hall in Maple avenue.

A tableau presented under the direction of Mrs. Edward Widdifield, was followed by a luncheon arranged by Mrs. Albert Mighell. Nearly 200 women attended. Mrs. Fred S. Wilson, retiring president, reported a membership of 303.

The Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, pastor, inducted these new officers:

President, Mrs. Lindley H. Dennis; vice president, Mrs. J. Arthur Le Clerc; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Louis B. Bender; recording secretary, Mrs. Glenwood W. Rouse; treasurer, Mrs. Fred S. Wilson; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Hariette Harmon; secretary of mission work, Mrs. P. A. Croney; secretary of literature, Mrs. Willard Normandy; secretary of membership, Mrs. Albert T. Dewey; secretary of house supervision, Mrs. Charles R. Mills; secretary of young peoples' work, Mrs. John R. Bovard, and director, Mrs. R. Paul Schearrer. Chairmen of monthly group meetings are Mrs. B. B. Derrick, Mrs. R. O. Cornell, Mrs. Grace W. Van Allen, Mrs. R. W. Burton, Mrs. Homer A. A. Smith, Mrs. H. L. Garver, Mrs. W. H. McClenon, Mrs. George A. Cook and Mrs. Alfred D. Stedman.

Md. Police Quiz Small-Fry Gamblers, Seek Higher-ups

Prince Georges County's war against gamblers headed yesterday for a grand jury investigation the first of next month.

State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., it was disclosed, has been questioning "small-time" gamblers with the intention of hailing them before the grand jury to testify against the "higher-ups."

Under authority of an act passed by the 1937 State Legislature, Wheatley is empowered to offer immunity to witnesses, even though the testimony they give is self-incriminating. The act also provides that witnesses may be "compelled" to testify.

The grand jury will convene at Upper Marlboro April 3, simultaneously with opening of the Circuit Court.

Two measures tightening the present regulations against gambling are pending before the State Legislature. One provides for search warrants to enable police to raid suspected gaming establishments and the other stipulates that possession of gambling paraphernalia shall be prima facie evidence of guilt.

A court test on the lawfulness of police raids under the present law was postponed yesterday until March 22 on request of defense counsel. The case, involving three men charged with gambling violations in a raid last week, was to have been tried by Police Court Judge George B. Merrick at Hyattsville yesterday.

Meanwhile, the famed Bladensburg road casino of "Jimmy" LaFontaine's remained closed. A lone guard was stationed with his automobile blocking the driveway to turn away prospective patrons.

Maybe They're Not So Dumb

Animals may not be able to express themselves articulately, but no one will deny that occasionally they get across an idea pretty well anyway. Look at these zoological candids:

DINNAH IS SERVED!
It's the poise of the perfect butler. Tie, wing collar and Nature's tails, plus the penguin's native pride, are all it takes

STUPID PARTY!
Bruin, performing at the circus, seems surfeited with hilarity. Just like many a playboy, he finds the music dull and is ready for den

GET OUT!
Her life's her own business, says Puss, and she isn't going to have any cameraman snooping into it

I LOVE IT!
Looks like the face in a porthole portrait, but it's just the contentment of a happy seal, framed by the sea's surface

Woman Hurt in Fall As Car Door Opens

Mrs. Ruth A. Gray, 39, of 3000 Alabama avenue southeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital yesterday for lacerations suffered when she fell from a car driven by her husband, Henry W. Gray. The door of the car flew open while they were turning the corner at W street and Hillcrest drive southeast.

Montgomery Destroys Fall Election Records

The last of the ballots, poll books and tally sheets used in the November election in Montgomery County were burned yesterday. The records were kept four months after the election, in accordance with law.

Baptist Session Ends

Petersburg, Va., March 15 (AP).—Baptist Sunday school officers of Virginia closed their fourth Statewide conference here today, after hearing an appeal from the Rev. J. B. Hill, of Richmond, State secretary, for continued efforts toward "enlargement" and "evangelism," keynotes of the two-day session.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, March 15 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.) The outlets for domestic wools on the Boston market were very narrow today. A few houses were receiving occasional inquiries for small quantities of wool to place out stocks. Sales included some good French combing lengths fine territory wools in original bags, at around 67 to 68 cents, scoured basis, and average to short French combing lengths at 65 to 66 cents, scoured basis. Graded combing spot bright three-eighths and one-quarter blood fleece wools were being offered at 30 to 31 cents, in the grease.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The National Broadcasting Co. presents Arturo Toscanini and the N. B. C. Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Program: Overture to "the Barber of Seville" (Rossini), Symphony No. 7 in A major (Beethoven), "Le Fontane di Roma" (Respighi), "Siegfrieds Rheinfahrt" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" (Wagner), Overture to "Tannhaeuser" (Wagner).

Offered the opportunity to pay their respects to Arturo Toscanini and to hear in close proximity the orchestra to which they have listened through their raido sets on many a Saturday night, citizens of Washington filled Constitution Hall last evening and gave a tumultuous welcome to the distinguished conductor. It was one of those occasions when anticipation prepares a nervous tension which finds its release in ovational enthusiasm, and the storm of applause which greeted the director as he made his way to the podium was such as a conquering hero could have expected.

In one sense, it was an audience of hero-worshipers, for the prestige of Toscanini has made him an almost legendary person during his lifetime. In the assemblage were music lovers in plenty, but its multitudinous entity was composed of representatives from every strand in the fabric of the National Capital's life: members of Congress, diplomats, Army and Navy officers, departmental heads, social leaders and business men. In the same row with ardent musicolaters were men and women to whom music is an incidental part of other interests, and the diversity was a token of the common impulse which had brought them together. All were united in the tribute to a great musician whose unquestioned devotion to the art which he serves has brought him to his eminence.

It is one of the penalties of eminence to be admired and lauded for that alone, and a famous artist must sometimes wonder how much of the adulation is meant for his art and how much has been excited by his repute. Toscanini impresses one as a very humble recipient of honors which he feels should be tendered to the music he interprets rather than to himself. All his resources are concentrated upon the creation of beauty and his conducting is a withdrawal into an inner realm from which he returns to the noisy world with an air of bewilderment. From this apparent daze he emerges with a gracious acknowledgement of the tribute and a deprecation of his own importance in what his musicians have accomplished under his guidance.

Last night's audience did not hear Toscanini at his best because the N. B. C. orchestra, for all its technical excellence, has not yet attained its absolute unity. Time is required for a body of musicians to fuse their individualities into a consentient whole and to establish a perfect rapport with the conductor. One is aware in this orchestra of an uneasiness which may arise partly from awe of their august leader and partly from the consciousness of their relative inexperience in the present association.

This impression may be erroneous, but it must nevertheless be recorded for what it is worth. More than once one felt that the corporate unity of the group was fissured, and that it was not responding, despite its zeal, with the unanimity that bespeaks unshakeable confidence. Yet its technical facility and its spirited willingness produced some remarkable results.

The concert began with the most delightful reading of Rossini's overture to "The Barber of Seville" that it has been my lot to hear. Toscanini treated this piece of music as though it were a work of art entirely dissociated from its purpose as introduction to a comic opera. He may have had in mind that it actually has no relation to the stage work which it precedes.

The overture was composed for "Aurelian in Palmyra," which was produced in Milan in 1813. Two years later Rossini, either because he was pressed for time or too indifferent to court his muse, used it as the overture to "Elizabeth, Queen of England," his first opera for the Neapolitans. Again in 1816, he resorted to it in Rome for the premiere of "The Barber."

Toscanini's reading of Beethoven's seventh symphony was masterly in rhythmic drive and in evocation of the music's essential dynamism. Emotionally it was Italianate, intensely dramatic in contrasts and in the overwhelming power of the climaxes. The audience, fully observant of silence between the movements, was moved by the performance to a prolonged outburst of applause.

Respighi's symphonic poem, "The Fountains of Rome," was disclosed with a sensitiveness of color and a precision of detail that brought out its full impressionistic values. The remainder of the program was Wagnerian: "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" and the overture to "Tannhaeuser." In these numbers the orchestra was called upon for its splendors of resonance, and was not found wanting.

Rep. Byrns Pays Tribute To Jackson

Tells Alexandria Masons President Was a Genius

Without formal schooling Andrew Jackson achieved greatness as a general, a jurist and a statesman, Representative W. Byrns, jr., of Tennessee, son of the late Speaker of the House, last night told the annual Jackson Day celebration of the Andrew Jackson Lodge of Masons in Alexandria, Va.

Byrns assailed Jackson's critics who have called him a harsh and rough man. He cited Jacksonian devotion to Mrs. Jackson as one of the "foremost examples of enduring love to illuminate the pages of American history.

"Jackson," he said, "was not schooled as a military strategist, yet he was a great general; he was not schooled as a lawyer, yet he was a great judge; he was not schooled in political science, yet he was a great statesman."

Byrns attributed Jackson's rise to "the inate genius of the man."

Arthur Johnson Mellott, a member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals, said the seventh President was great "because he had the courage of his convictions."

The past master's jewel was presented at the gathering to Harold W. Reid, immediate past master of the lodge, by H. H. Watkins, who was lodge master seven years ago when Reid was "put in line."

Harry P. Shaffer, worshipful master, presided at the meeting, attended by about 450 Masons. William H. Wood was general chairman of the celebration.

Leg Shortened, Girl Demonstrates Before Surgeons

Baltimore, March 15 (AP).—A pretty 19-year-old girl skipped and danced before a meeting of steady-handed surgeons today to show a sectional meeting of the American College of Surgeons the success of an operation to correct a shortness of one leg.

Osteomyelitis, an infection of the bone, left Geraldine Wilkie, of Rutherfordton, N. C., with one leg 3 inches shorter than the other. Dr. J. Warren White, of Greenville, S. C., operated on the normal leg and took out enough bone to make it only as long as the other.

Clad in a green bathing suit, Miss Wilkie appeared on the platform at the surgery clinic and showed how she could walk with only a slight limp. Surgeons stood in their places and craned their necks to see her demonstration of the effectiveness of the operation.

5 Lashes Ordered For Baltimore Man Who Struck Wife

Baltimore, March 15 (AP).—Convicted of striking his wife in the eye, Louis Woolshlager, 45, was sentenced today to five lashes with a cat-o-nine-tails. The sentence, the first in a year under Maryland's 50-year-old whipping-post law, will be carried out within a week.

Brushing aside Woolshlager's offer to go to sea if he were dismissed, Judge Niles gave him the lashing sentence and ordered him to jail for 30 days.

Snow Removal Signs Lifted, So, Flurries, Stay Away

Warning to snowstorms: Don't come here, the parking ban for snow removal on 50 miles of streets has been lifted—and Traffic Director Van Duzer would be very peeved at even a slight flurry.

Since November 15, more than 5,000 signs prohibiting parking from 2 a. m. to 8 a. m. have adorned principal thoroughfares in anticipation of snowdrifts.

Under the law by which the signs function, their services were no longer needed after yesterday. Van Duzer ordered them torn down.

PWA Preferable To WPA, City Aide Says at Richmond

Richmond, Va., March 15 (AP).—Gamble Bowers, director of public works for the city of Richmond, declared in his annual report today that PWA was preferable to WPA for city improvements, chiefly because it provides the lowest combined cost to city and Federal governments.

"It is only where street improvements involve large quantities necessitating the employment of a large percentage of labor in relation to material and equipment cost could we justify the economic preference for WPA methods and costs over PWA method and cost," Bowers said.

BELL CAB CO., 1317 L N.W.
ME. 1727.

WE WANT TWO MEN

. . . not necessarily experienced in our line of business, but men who can sell, men who can make the most out of every prospect and who are not afraid of work. We expect to do our part by offering a fine stock of used cars, plus an old reliable, established name. We offer every consideration in helping our men. Our sales force is limited, assuring ample floor periods, help in closing sales, use of a demonstrator, etc., and an opportunity to make real money. If you are one of the men we want, see or call MR. FITZHUGH at PARKWAY MOTORS today, Mich. 0181, 1040 M St. N.W.

CAN YOU SELL

If you can, here is an opportunity for an aggressive young man in an organization that is growing beyond the capacity of its present personnel. To the man that can qualify, this is a chance to grow with us. You must be over 21 years of age, be neat appearing and have some sales experience. You will be paid a salary and commission and you will be advanced as you develop. Apply Mr. Baker, 4th Floor, 1337 E st. nw., between 10 and 12, or write Box 372, Washington Post.

Attention Alexandria and Arlington County Men

My company has authorized me to contact four men immediately who live in Alexandria or Arlington County, test them out for several days while in training without expense or cost and start them immediately on a permanent basis, with liberal participations in the profits. No investments.

Steadiness and good character needed—not ability to talk, a clientele or any previous experience.

While getting started, men of average ability must be able and willing to get along on reasonable weekly earnings.

To be accepted you must be willing to work hard to qualify for larger incomes. Apply in person at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, Va., at 9:30 a. m. sharp, Friday, March 17.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Frank B. Lord, Washington expert and writer, is against any change in the present laws. He explains his viewpoint like this:

"Card valuations in most games are purely arbitrary. It is the variation in values that gives zest and adds interest to the game. There is no good reason and no one has ever offered an explanation as to why the ace, the one spot of the deck, should rank first in nearly all valuations.

"It is purely arbitrary. Arbitrary valuations are given to the nine and the five in Don Pedro, and in the old game of 'Whist and Swabbers' which antedated the whist of Hoyle, the knave and the deuce were winning cards. They cleaned the deck, and as swabbers are those lads who clean the deck of a ship, so these cards were called swabber cards.

"In certain forms of the once-great American game of poker the wild cards are the deuces and the one-eyed jacks. They may be counted as you please, and the game is played with much enjoyment and amusement by a large element of the card-playing public."

While the men are debating questions of law, the women are proving more and more that they can equal and frequently excel men in play. Today's hand, contributed by an admiring husband, shows how a woman made fine use of psychology to bring in a grand slam in diamonds.

She reasoned that the opponent sitting at her left would have doubled the grand slam had he held what he thought was a trump winner and, since he did not, his partner must hold the missing honor. Having reasoned thus far, she took the only chance that offered to make the bid, which required dropping a singleton trump king. Luck was with her and she won. However, if contributor M. C. B. were like some men, he would have complimented his wife sweetly, attributed her fine play to "feminine intuition," and let it go at that.

Here is what he says:

"My favorite partner and good wife, who is slowly but surely becoming a finished bridge player, worked out this problem while I was kibitzing, needless to say to my huge delight.

"Under the impression that she was third hand, not vulnerable against vulnerable opponents, she opened the South hand with a diamond bid. She was speedily shot into a grand slam at that declaration, as shown in the accompanying diagram, and the play began.

"West opened a small heart, the dummy went down and declarer, after some study, decided that the heart lead was probably a singleton. Wanting to get into her hand as soon as possible, she ducked and took with her queen. She laid down a small diamond and West played low. Now she went into a huddle, and (she explained to me later) decided that West with the king of diamonds (guarded) would double seven because of his partner's free club bid. Thus, East almost surely had the diamond king. Obviously, the only way to make the contract was to find the king singleton. So she went up with the ace, dropped the king and tremblingly laid her hand down for her contract.

"Had she taken the finesse, she would have been set two tricks, for East would have won the diamond king and returned a heart for his partner to ruff."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

This Machine Age

AT RANDOM: The Agriculture Department's mechanized method of finding the exact qualifications of its employes—through that machine that searches out and instantly flips up the name of the employe with the required talents—came to good stead the other day when the department wanted a brace of veterinarians who speak Spanish. There were several with the dual qualification, and they were needed for work in Latin America, where their skill as veterinarians wouldn't do much good if they couldn't, in the understandable tongue, tell what the cow was suffering from . . . And agriculture is becoming wearied with the fact that its new comers lose something of immediate efficiency through not knowing what the Agriculture Department is all about. The new comers walk about, in the first few weeks of their jobholding, in what seems to them a mysterious place. Agriculture wants to speed up the breaking in and will begin concentrating on special meetings for the newcomers, where they will hear lectures on the department's activities and its reason of being. The plan goes as far as an attempt to acquaint the newcomers with Washington itself. But this general breaking-in won't be too stiff or formal. . . . The Civil Service Commission, which yesterday released its semiannual statistical report, notes that: on last December 31, there were approximately 693,800 men and 168,000 women in the executive branch of the Government. In Washington, approximately 71,000 employes were men and about 48,500 were women. Outside the District, approximately 622,800 employes were men and 119,600 were women. . . . Also, the same report shows that since enactment of the Civil Service act in 1883, the executive branch of the Government has increased more than four-fold. A large measure of the increase has been in the classified service. The margin between the classified and the unclassified in Washington is not large: as of December 31, those classified numbered 82,823, and the unclassified totaled 36,724. . . . When the question of automatic salary increases for Federal personnel finally comes to a showdown, it is likely that the personnel directors won't fall behind the move with a whoop. They view it luke-warmly, thinking that automatic increases present a psychological hazard, and there are enough of those on the shelf at the moment. They think that personnel, being guaranteed raises by the calendar, will lose initiative, the rugged individualism that makes the individual want to get ahead on his own merit and footing. The answer might be that automatic increases are better than none at all and if efficiency lags thereby there may still be the obvious remedy for that. For, despite the popular notion, there is nothing in Government regulation that says the inefficient can't be fired. . . . Former Representative David Lewis, of Maryland, returns to the stump for the New Deal tonight when he discusses "PWA and the Right to Work," under auspices of the PWA division of the U. F. W. A., in the North Interior Auditorium. The hour is 8 p. m. Sharing the platfrom will be Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, who will talk on H. R. 4576, his bill providing for a permanent public works program and the elimination of the emergency aspect of the present PWA program. . . . Five persons retired the other day from the Government Printing Office, among them William Madden, who served 51 years. Others are: George H. Butler, 22 years; John C. Harvey, 15 years; Albert E. Potter, 40 years, and John C. Quinn, 37 years. . . . Col. Charles I. Stengle appears before a Congressional committee and heaves a harpoon at a popular idea, as follows: "One gets the idea when the word 'custodian' is used that the incumbent is simply a broom pusher or mop user in the cleaning of public buildings; but that is only a small part of the duties of a custodian in a building owned by Uncle Sam. We have skilled mechanics that come under the title of custodian, and we have engineers and electricians; yet they are called custodians and are designated custodians for purposes of the appropriation." . . . Tomorrow night's top employe event: The St. Patrick's Day dance and baseball celebration to be given by the I. D. R. A. at the Press Club.

Bob Burns Says—

This business of flyin' is gettin' more domesticated every day. Scientists are workin' on a new type of rotary-wing plane now that kin rise straight up from a city roof an' land in half the space of a tennis court. One of these days, Mr. Average Man will junk his auto an' keep an airplane in his garage or tied to the roof. This'll transfer the traffic jams from the highways to the airways. I kin jes' see some of them women drivers now, makin' left-hand turns on one-way airlanes, an' wild-eyed passengers of other planes takin' to their parachutes!

"I'll be droppin' in on you this afternoon, dearie!" will really mean somethin' when this time comes. Men and women can get the reputation of bein' "high flyers" then without losin' any standin' in the community. An,' if we get air-minded enough, there won't be any room in the sky for the real birds. A flock of crows was roostin' in a farmer's field the other day when the first plane they'd ever seen came tumblin' down an' crashed. The aviator staggered out of it an' one of the birds said: "Holy smoke! Let's git out of here! That there scarecrow means business!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

A Rude Awakening

The snow had gone from the Green Meadows. Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse were sorry to have it go. They had spent a most comfortable winter. Never had they spent a more comfortable one. This was largely because Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy had left the neighborhood early in the winter and had not returned. Danny and Nanny have to watch for many hungry hunters, but none have they quite so much reason to fear as Reddy and Mrs. Reddy.

So in the security they felt beneath the snow Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse had freely used the little tunnels they had dug clearing the snow out of the private little paths they had cut through the grass, going and coming as they pleased. No eyes however sharp could see them through the snow. Had Reddy and Mrs. Reddy been about they would have dug down through the snow and given them many frights. As it was, only when they went up on the surface was there any real danger.

Now almost constant danger really does have advantages. That may seem queer, but it is true. It keeps those in danger constantly watchful, constantly careful. When there is no danger for a long time people grow careless, and there is nothing that grows more persistently than carelessness.

It was just so with Danny Meadow Mouse. He kept a sharp watch in the air for Hooty the Owl at night and Roughleg the Hawk by day, but after a time he hardly even thought of Reddy Fox. When the snow disappeared Danny still ran about as he pleased, using his private litle paths through the grass and feeling safe enough save when he had to cross bare spots or places where the grass was too short to overhang the path. At such places he always remenbered to look for a feathered foe, but that was all. And this, of course, was most careless of Danny.

It happened that just at the edge of evening one day Danny took it into his head to travel quite a distance from home. He had remembered a place where the new grass always started early. He hadn't been there this spring.

"Be careful," squeaked Nanny.

Danny made no reply. He was tired of being warned to be careful. "She fusses too much," thought Danny as he scampered along. "Since those Foxes left there hasn't been half the danger that there used to be. I wonder what became of them. I wonder if they moved away or if something happened to them. Well, all I can say is good riddance. I hope I never see either of them again. That's what I hope."

He came to a little bare place. As usual he looked up to see if Hooty the Owl was anywhere in sight. He wasn't. Danny started across that little open space and he didn't bother to hurry. He ran, but no faster than he had been running, while beneath the overhanging grass. That was careless of him. He should have scampered across as fast as he could.

Just as he was almost across something, he didn't know what, caused him to suddenly dart at full speed into the grassy tunnel in front of him and instantly dodged into a branch path that led past a hole that Johnny Chuck had dug long ago. The entrance was clogged. There was one small opening just big enough for Danny to slip through.

Danny was just in time. He didn't have a second to spare. When he started that sudden run, because something inside warned him to, he was none too soon. A pair of black paws landed so close to him that one actually touched his short tail. They were the paws of Reddy Fox. They had missed only because Danny Meadow Mouse had made that sudden leap ahead. It was a rude awakening for Danny. Reddy Fox had returned to the Green Meadows and it was only the good luck that he had been so near that old hole of Johnny Chuck's that had saved Danny from paying with his life for his carelessness.
